FIRST AIR MAIL IN WASHINGTON IN 200 MINUTES

TIMES IN THE FIRST POUCH

OVERSEA FLIGHT PREDICTED

Department Lays Plans for Extending the Service Throughout the Country.

The first regular airplane mail service in the world was inaugurated between Washington and New York yesterday. With the exception of an accident to one of the airplanes between Washington and Philadelphia, it was a complete success. Leaving Belmont Park at 11:30 in the forenoon with 144 pounds of mail, Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb arrived in Philadelphia at 12:30, from which point the mail was relayed through the air by Lieutenant J. C. Edgerton, who delivered it in Washington at 2:30 P. M. The actual flying time of the two couriers, deducting the six minutes' intermission in relaying at Philadelphia, was three hours and twenty minutes. Although this record was not quite up to the ninety-five-mile average, which the aviators were expected to make, it was considered satisfactory for the initial trip with new machines.

The opening of the air route was marked by only one mishap. That occurred on the lap between Washington and Philadelphia when Lieutenant George L. Boyle, driving a plane with a large pouch of mail for Philadelphia and New York, was forced to descend twenty-five miles out of Washington. It was reported that he lost his way and in landing snapped a propeller blade. Washington and Philadelphia were quickly informed, and a special mail truck was sent to Lieutenant Boyle's relief. The mail which he carried included letters from the President and other Government officials to Postmaster Patten, as well as a communication from Postmaster Burleson to the publisher of THE NEW YORK TIMES containing a facsimile of a letter sent by the publisher of another and earlier NEW YORK TIMES, in 1835 to the then Postmaster General, urging more rapid mail service.

To avoid any delays in the general schedule that might be caused by Lieutenant Boyle's mishap, it was decided not to wait for the arrival of the Washington mail which he carried. The plane scheduled to relieve him at Philadelphia, piloted by Lieutenant Howard Culver, left that city at 2:20 o'clock, carrying only the Philadelphia mail for New York, and arrived at Belmont Park at 3:37 o'clock. Lieutenant Culver brought a pouch containing 350 letters, 200 for distribution in New York and 150 for points beyond.

The Start from New York.

Interest at this end of the new air route centered largely upon the departure of Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb of Gazelle, Cal., a Columbia graduate, who enlisted in the air service of the army immediately after the United States entered the war. At his side up to the very moment of departure was his young wife whom he married only a year ago.

Many persons of prominence assembled to see Lieutenant Webb start. Among them were Postmaster Patten, Alan R. Hawley, Byron T. Newton, Murray Hulbert, Commissioner of Docks; J. A. Kelly, Postmaster of Long Island City; T. A. McMahon, Postmaster of Far Rockaway; A. J. Kennedy, Postmaster of Flushing; Daniel Shea, Postmaster of Jamaica; Post Office Inspector George M. Brown, Henry Woodhouse of the Board of Governors of the Aero Club of America, and Rear Admiral Fiske. Three French aviation officers, Lieutenants Parri, Campizono, and Dobelle also watched the departure.

The ceremonies preliminary to the start were opened by Postmaster Patten, and President Hawley of the Aero Club was in the midst of a speech when the time to make the ascent arrived. With military promptness Lieutenant Webb leaped into his seat and rose from the ground, leaving Mr. Hawley talking to an audience that had its eyes turned skyward. The machine which Lieutenant Webb drove was of the Curtis type, model J. N. 4, with a speed capacity of ninety-five miles an hour.

On leaving the ground the pilot mounted at the rate of 1,000 feet a minute. A light wind, about eighteen miles an hour, was at the back of the aviator. Within ten minutes he was out of sight, making his way southward. He carried two pouches containing 2,457 pieces of mail. With the exception of three packages and a copy of yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES, the mail was all letters. The packages contained a music roll addressed to President Wilson, and two copies of Secretary Baker's book on

New Ship Tuckahoe in Service; Was Ready for Sea in 37 Days

Special to The New York Times

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Completed and ready for her cargo, the collier Tuckahoe, built by the New York Shipbuilding Company, Camden, N. J., in world's record time, today was turned over to the United States Shipping Board in this city. Thus, thirty-seven days after the keel was laid the big steel ship, of 5,548 tons deadweight, was prepared to sail across the seas.

Demonstrations today by the workmen of the shipyard were even more enthusiastic than those of Sunday morning, ten days ago, when the ship was launched in the presence of Director General Schwab and other Government officials. The Tuckahoe, had a most successful dock trial two days ago. Coal and supplies for the crew were put on board yesterday, and early this morning the Captain and crew of forty men took possession of the ship.

DUVAL TO FACE A FIRING SQUAD

Bonnet Rouge Director Condemned to Death for Treason by Paris Court-Martial.

PRISON FOR 6 ACCOMPLICES

Sentenced to Terms Ranging from Two to Ten Years—Two of Them Also Fined.

PARIS, May 15.—M. Duval, who was director of the suppressed Germanophile newspaper Bonnet Rouge, was condemned to death today by court-martial for treason. The six other defendants were sentenced to imprisonment for terms ranging from two to ten years. Every decision of the court-martial was voted unanimously.

M. Marion, assistant manager of Bonnet Rouge, received ten years' imprisonment at hard labor.

Jacques Landau, a reporter on the newspaper, was condemned to eight years at hard labor.

Goldsky was sentenced to eight years at hard labor and military degradation.

M. Joucla, a reporter on the Bonnet Rouge, received five years at hard labor.

M. Vercasson was sentenced to two years in prison and fined 5,000 francs, with sentence suspended.

Jean Leymarie, former director of the Ministry of the Interior, was sentenced to two years in prison and fined 1,000 francs.

Duval, who had expected the verdict, heard with great fortitude Colonel Voyer read the death sentence. He then said:

"The judgment of man often is erroneous. Posterity will judge whether I am guilty of treason."

Before the verdict was reached Duval in an impassioned speech had declared that none of the accused was in any way an accomplice of his. He declared he was ready to face any verdict serenely.

Landau and Jouda collapsed completely. Jouda exclaimed:

Goldsky maintained the same sneering attitude which characterized him throughout the trial.

Leymarie, addressing the court, said he had been sufficiently punished for any lack of foresight he had shown. He was apparently overcome with emotion. He told the Associated Press he expected at least the same treatment as that accorded Vercasson, whose sentence was suspended.

"I am a ruined man," he added.

In pleading for him today Attorney Guillain contended that the former Director of the Ministry of the Interior and later head of the Secret Service was blameless. He denied emphatically that Leymarie was a gambler and had played poker with Louis Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, and others, as was stated by L'Action Française. Addressing the court, the lawyer said:

"We ask no mercy. Apply the law without fear and without weakness."

Leymarie's condemnation roused greater public interest and discussion than did the death sentence of Duval as the court emptied, as public minds naturally connected his sentence with the forthcoming trial of Malvy.

Duval, Marion, and Goldsky have signed requests to be permitted to appeal from the judgment of the court.

The second treason trial connected with the German propaganda of "Bolo-ism" or defeatism in France has ended like the first—that of Bolo Pacha and his associates—with the conviction of the defendants. But the "cause célèbre" of the series is yet to come with the court-martialing of former Premier Joseph Caillaux, said to be the brains of the whole "defeatist" propaganda. He is alleged to have had illegal relations with Germany even when he was Premier and Minister of the Interior at the time of the Agadir crisis, in 1911, which became treasonable when the war began.

At that time the Under Secretary of Interior was Louis J. Malvy, who was Minister of the Interior under Ribot last year, and upon whom Caillaux is said

ASKED VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

President in Letter to Martin Challenged Senate's Purpose

SAW WAR CONTROL SOUGHT

HUGHES TO AID GREGORY

Wilson Asked 1916 Opponent to Go to Bottom of Charges of Aircraft Graft.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Three moves of prime importance were made today in connection with the aircraft controversy:

President Wilson in a letter to Senator Martin, the Democratic floor leader, vehemently opposed the Chamberlain resolution for an investigation of the conduct of the war by the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate. He said passage of the resolution would be "a direct vote of want of confidence in the Administration," and would constitute "nothing less than an attempt to take over the conduct of the war." The President called upon supporters of the Administration in the Senate to rally to its support.

The Senate Committee on Audit and Expenses, to which the Chamberlain resolution had been referred, voted three to two to order a favorable report on the resolution after modifying it so as to limit the investigation to "the progress of aircraft and ordnance production in the United States, or into the status of the Quartermaster General's supplies or expenditures in any of those branches of the War Department." The reference to the "conduct of the war" was eliminated and a proviso added "that nothing in this resolution shall be held to authorize the Military Affairs Committee to take over or in any manner direct or superintend the executive branch of the Government in the conduct of the war."

President Wilson invited Charles E. Hughes to associate himself with the Attorney General in the investigation of the Borglum aircraft charges undertaken by the Department of Justice at the direction of the President, and Mr. Hughes accepted the invitation. In a letter to Mr. Hughes the President said he felt "that these charges should be thoroughly investigated and with as little delay as possible, in order that the guilty, if there be any such, may be promptly and vigorously prosecuted, and that the reputations of those whose actions have been attacked may be protected in case the charges are groundless."

President's Letter to Martin.

Although the President had told Senators that he did not object to an inquiry by the Military Affairs Committee into the aircraft program, he did not allude to aircraft in his letter to Mr. Martin, but directed his opposition to the whole scope of the Chamberlain resolution. The letter follows:

The White House, May 14, 1918.

My Dear Senator:

I am sincerely obliged to you for calling my attention to Senate Resolution 241, which in effect proposes to constitute the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate a committee on the conduct of the war.

I deem it my duty to say that I should regard the passage of this resolution as a direct vote of want of confidence in the Administration. The purpose which it undoubtedly expresses has been expressed again and again in various forms during the present session—and has always seemed to originate in a rooted distrust of those who are at present in charge of the executive functions of the Government. Those executive functions are very clearly understood. They have been defined both by the Constitution and by long experience, and no one can doubt where the responsibility for them lies or what the methods are by which those who are responsible can be held to their duty.

Such activities on the part of a particular committee of the Senate as this resolution would look forward to would constitute nothing less than an attempt to take over the conduct of the war, or at the least so superintend and direct and participate in the executive conduct of it as to interfere in the most serious way with the action of the constituted Executive.

I protest most earnestly against the adoption of any such action and shall hope that every Senator who intends to support the present Administration in the conduct of the war will vote against it. These are serious times, and it is absolutely necessary that

Foe Drops Bombs Near Paris, but Fails to Reach Capital

PARIS, Thursday, May 16.—Enemy aircraft dropped bombs on the outlying suburbs of Paris late last night.

None of the enemy was able to penetrate the defenses of the city proper.

This official statement was issued: "The lookout posts having reported enemy aircraft making for Paris, an alarm was sounded at 10:12 P. M. Anti-aircraft batteries opened fire and airplanes took the air. No enemy machine reached Paris, but several bombs were dropped on the more distant suburbs. 'All clear' was given at 11:55."

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, May 15.—This was a day of glory for Captain D. M. K. Peterson, American aviator. He was among a group of American fliers decorated with the Croix de Guerre this afternoon, and when he received it from the hands of a French General he wore the suit in which he had brought down two German airplanes single-handed a short time before. The cross, of course, was awarded for another exploit.

Captain Peterson was above the German lines just at noon when he saw two German avions approaching in the direction of the American forces. Being alone, he went to an altitude of 5,000 meters and waited for the Germans traveling below. The day was perfect, the sun was shining brightly, and the atmosphere was clear, but the Germans did not see Peterson.

When the German fliers had passed him the American dived vertically 500 meters at the hindmost one. When almost on him he started his machine gun going and in a moment the German was going groundward in flames. Captain Peterson had fired sixty bullets.

As he checked his flight he saw that the other German had looped and was after him, coming straight and fast. He looped upward through a stream of German bullets and got on top.

During a quick turn, Peterson darted after his opponent, when the German sprang a new trick in aerial warfare. He turned loose a smoke box, which acted like those that

BRIGADING PLAN EXPANDED

Pershing Is to Command Divisions Where Our Men Predominate

INCREASED FIGHTING FORCE

System Will Augment Our Army on the Front and Provide Training Facilities.

ITALIANS STRONG IN WEST

Provide Reinforcements There and Have Improved Their Defenses at Home.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—General Pershing probably soon will be commanding French and British troops as the process of brigading American units with their allies on the western front goes forward.

As if exemplifying the unity of command and action into which the United States and its co-belligerents have entered, it became known here today that whenever American troops predominate in the brigaded divisions as the process goes on, these divisions, under present plans, will be turned over to General Pershing's command.

This plan would accomplish several things which the military authorities consulting on it regard as very desirable. It would rapidly increase the size of the American fighting command on the battleline, it would contribute tremendously to the spirit of unity and concerted effort, and at the same time, instead of holding large numbers of American troops behind the lines while training, would surround them with seasoned veterans and under actual battle conditions school them to be re-brigaded later with fresh American troops coming to France.

In this way the efficiency of the British and French forces is expected to be increased and the work of building up a great, fully trained, and completely equipped fighting force in France is expected to be hastened.

Italian Front Under Foch.

In addition to this, as illustrative of the unity of command under which Generalissimo Foch directs all the allied armies, it was stated officially here today that Foch commanded the Italian troops in France and Italy. There had been no question that he commanded the Italian troops in France, and it had been supposed that, considering the Italian front as part of the western battle line under a decision reached at the Versailles conference, the Generalissimo's authority extended there.

For the first time, however, it was stated unreservedly that General Foch's supreme command extended to Italy.

It was stated, also, that Italy, besides now sending troops to France in numbers equal to those being sent from the United States, now had on her fighting line a larger army, more perfectly equipped, than she had before the great Austrian drive. This may be explanatory of the apparent equanimity with which the allied lead-

Allies Can Hold Back German Hosts If the American Forces Keep Coming

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

PARIS, May 15.—Everybody realizes that the Germans will put everything they have got into the impending attack on the western front, and may spring new things in the way of guns, gases, and tanks, but on the eve of the new battle there are no evidences of alarm or suppressed excitement.

I met today an officer who goes three times a week to General Foch's headquarters, and asked him about the prospects. He was smilingly confident.

When questioned about the French losses since March 21, he said that they hadn't been heavy. That is considered as the crucial point. If the French Army remains at its strength, and if the flow of American troops direct to the front continues without interruption, the expert opinion is that the Allies will hold the Germans, and holding them will mean victory, for time fights with the Allies by reason of America's coming.

A colleague, who has just arrived from Switzerland, says that German internal conditions have not been bettered by the eastern conquests. On the military side they are still banking on a successful offensive, but are much less cocksure.

He thinks that the Germans are counting less on a definite military victory than on forcing England and France to peace terms by bringing home to them the possible loss of Paris and the Channel ports.

With all their military strength and skill the Germans are having troubles which compel them to seek an early decision. The pinch, which is great in Germany, is almost unbearable in Austria-Hungary.

While the weaker ally yields to the stronger, suspicion and distrust exist between Emperor William and Emperor Charles. There is not an identity of interest between them.

Victory will mean one thing for William and quite another for Charles. For the latter there is no pride in the war. He inherited it along with the crown, and his aversion for it and the opposition of his influential environment are now publicly known.

"We Must Be Patient," the Kaiser Tells Germans, But "Our Task in the West Will Be Accomplished"

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Emperor William a few days ago, addressing the Town Council of Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle,) said, according to a Berlin dispatch:

"I am glad to be able to salute you, gentlemen. In the west I inspected half of devastated France. There only one obtains the right impression of the awful state that has been spared the Fatherland. Whoever should grow faint-hearted ought to come to the front and see the devastation.' Then he would cease to lament his fate, and be satisfied with his lot and bear patiently the hardships and privations of war's horrors.

"The offensive goes well ahead. Already 600,000 English have been put hors de combat, and 1,600 guns have been captured. Everywhere the French must help.

"Our opponents have had a bad time. They deserved nothing else. Our task in the west will be accomplished, but we must be patient. We cannot settle in a day armies of millions.

"We shall attain our aim. Difficult tasks are before us, but to deal with these we have efficient workers.

"We have gone ahead in the Crimea also. The first trains with foodstuffs have arrived at Berlin from Ukraine, improving the food supply. Sebastopol has been captured and a big, richly laden fleet there. We shall revive the Black Sea traffic.

"The position, therefore, is good. I am delighted with the patriotism prevailing in Aachen on the empire's frontier. The spirit of the troops is excellent. There are many Rhinelanders and many Aacheners among them.

"I believe it is now time to abolish all that is foreign. We must cease to talk French. Let us, rather, talk low German."

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Although the official announcement regarding the deliberations of monarchs and Ministers at the German Army Headquarters is naturally received by the German jingo press with tremendous joy as an important step toward the realization of the Central Europe dreams, and although that rejoicing is shared to some extent by the democratic parties, there are some very emphatic notes of doubt heard in the land. The Weser Zeitung, which is nothing if not widely imperialist, thinks, for example, that it is rather too soon to rejoice, adding:

"We have learned in the last four years that only reality rules in diplomacy and that the words of the polite language of the courts decide neither friendship nor enmity, peace nor war."

It refers in disgust to the hostile influences around the Empress Zita and appears to think that distracted Austria, as it is today, is no very fitting or brilliant second for mighty Germany.

Sees No Popular Assent.

Vorwärts says that all such arrangements are burdened by an unknown factor—the final general peace. It objects to alliances which shut out any other nation, and thinks hard and fast arrangements deemed suitable now may, as eternity is long, soon prove fetters.

An alliance, it goes on, "can only have an assured foundation if it rests on the willing consent of the people. Of such a basis we see little sign at the present moment in Austria. Germany today in Austria-Hungary, thanks to the Pan German propaganda, is heartily unpopular, not only with the Slav majority, but also with a considerable portion of the German-Magyar minority."

The paper hopes that Central European princelings will not be strewn over the Orient, for "we cannot convince ourselves that any of the 'liberated peoples' has cast longing eyes on any of the twenty-two Middle European dynasties. We do not believe that any of the many royal and ducal plans are to be realized out of the right of self-determination. It is much more probable that the monarchies erected on volcanic ground will become hearths of new internal conflicts, and that the people again will have to pay for them in blood."

Harden Says the Nations Diverge.

The extremely outspoken views of Maximilian Harden on Austrian conditions in the latest number of Die Zukunft are appropriate here. He argues that Germany's and Austria's vital interests are divergent, and scoffs at the "brilliantly organized

GIFT OF POLAND TO BIND AUSTRIA

Kaiser Thus Obtained Assent to Long-Term Agreement, Berlin Paper Says.

RULERS SELECT FOUR KINGS

New Monarchs for Conquests—Mitteleuropa Basis Sought—Teuton Liberals Protest.

LONDON, May 15.—Germany, in the course of the recent conference of Emperors William and Charles, agreed to the solution of the Polish question desired by Austria, on condition that Austria-Hungary conclude a fifteen years' convention with Germany, according to a Vienna dispatch to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, received in Amsterdam. Complete union between Austria-Hungary and Poland may shortly be expected, the message adds.

German newspapers say, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen, that the Emperors selected monarchs for Lithuania, Courland, Esthonia, and Poland.

A Vienna dispatch to the Munich Neueste Nachrichten says that the new Austro-German alliance is fixed for a period of twenty years, includes a military convention, and provides for the closest economic and customs relations.

An official dispatch from Berlin received in Amsterdam today says that now that the main lines for the cementing of the alliance between Germany and Austria have been fixed, the political, military, and economic negotiations will doubtless begin shortly. It is obvious, adds the dispatch, that the political and military arrangements can be carried through faster than the economic, which will probably take several months to complete.

The phrase in the official report of the Emperors' conference regarding the consolidation and deepening of the alliance, says the Berlin Tageblatt, permits the assumption that the aim of the convention is a close military and political union and a complete blending of military resources.

Rulers Exchange Felicitations.

"At the moment of leaving the blessed ground of the German Empire on my way home I feel impelled again to greet you warmly and to express my heartiest thanks not only for the very gracious but also for the truly friendly reception which you gave me yesterday. I am highly satisfied with our harmonious conference. From my heart and in true friendship I say may we soon meet again."

Emperor William replied:

"Many thanks for your friendly telegram. I am exceedingly glad you are so satisfied with your visit here. It is a great joy to me also to have seen you and to have established again in our detailed discussions our entire accord regarding the aims which guide us. Their realization will bring great blessings on our empires.

"I hope soon to be in a position to take advantage of your kind invitation. Hearty greetings to Zita and yourself.

"In true friendship. WILLIAM."

Both King Ludwig of Bavaria and King Frederick August of Saxony, according to a Zurich dispatch, seem to have been participants in the Great Headquarters' conference of the Emperors, although apparently neither was invited to be present. This is indicated by a statement in the Munich Neueste Nachrichten, which says:

"The hour is grave, and Bavaria cannot leave Prussia to be the whole arbiter of German destinies." King Ludwig therefore decided to proceed to headquarters. The departure of the King of Saxony to take part in the negotia-

BRITISH RAID NEAR ROBECQ

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 15, (Associated Press.)—Hard fighting continued today in the neighborhood of Hill 44, north of Kemmel, which was stormed and retaken late yesterday by French troops. This much disputed elevation has changed hands many times recently, but the French were still holding the Germans off at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Thus this little rise of ground from the waterlogged Flemish plain about it had suddenly come to occupy an important place in the annals of the fighting in this section of the front, although thus far it has never even been dignified with a name other than that contained in the figures indicating its height.

Its value lies in the fact that it dominates considerable territory, and for this reason it has been a thorn in the flesh of the ambitious Germans. It is believed that they want it to facilitate their next attack in this region, which bids fair to come before long.

A renewal of the German offensive on a big scale has so far not materialized. There has been an increase in the hostile artillery fire at numerous points from the northern to the southern end of the battlefront, and a break in the present lull may be expected at any time.

German Guns Active Over Wide Area.

LONDON, May 15.—German artillery has been active at various points from the Kemmel region to the areas southwest of Morlancourt on the north bank of the Somme. There has been a continuation today of local fighting north of Kemmel Village as a result of which the French troops in that sector have advanced their lines.

Last night British forces repulsed a raid north of Lens and made a successful incursion into the German lines northeast of Robecq.

Field Marshal Haig's report from British Headquarters in France tonight says:

There was local fighting in which the French troops captured several prisoners and successfully advanced their line early in the morning in the sector north of Kemmel Village.

Elsewhere there was nothing beyond artillery activity on both sides on the battlefront.

A raid attempted by the enemy last night north of Lens was repulsed. We carried out another successful raid northeast of Robecq (Flanders.)

The hostile artillery was active during the night in the valleys of the Somme and Ancre, north of Bethune, and in the Forest of Nieppe sector. This morning the enemy's artillery activity increased southwest of Morlancourt and north of Kemmel.

The official statement on aerial operations issued tonight says:

In the air fighting Tuesday six hostile machines were brought down, and one was driven down out of control. One was shot down by anti-aircraft gunfire, and one by infantry fire. Two of our machines are missing.

Bombing continued actively during the night. Twelve tons were dropped on the railway stations at Lille, Menin, Challes, and Peronne, on billets at Bapaume, and on the docks at Bruges. All our machines returned.

On Wednesday a successful raid was made on railway station sidings at Thionville. Twenty-four heavy bombs were dropped. Bursts were observed on the railway sheds and track, and the furnaces of the Carlshutte factory, alongside the railway, were hit four times. All our machines returned safely in spite of the heavy anti-aircraft gunfire.

AIRCRAFT PROGRAM NOW MOVING ALONG

What Ailed It and What Is Being Done to Remedy Its Failure.

IMPROVING LIBERTY MOTOR

Meanwhile It Will Be Used Only in the Work It Is Ready For.

6 OTHER TYPES BEING MADE

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS.

FIRST ARTICLE.

It is now possible to obtain a fairly clear perspective of the aircraft situation, and in this article and in others which will follow I shall attempt to make clear the reasons why we have failed to keep our oversanguine and almost boastful aviation promises to our allies, and also to point out the now obvious ways in which we may retrieve our prestige by the creation of a large and effective air fleet.

There is no longer anything to be gained by cherishing the delusion that the Liberty motor is the mechanical panacea which will win for the United States and for international democracy the mastery of the air. It is neither a monumental failure nor a decided success. It is still in the experimental stage, with scores and probably hundreds of suggested changes and hoped-for improvements yet to be incorporated and tested.

A limited number of Liberty motors have been completed according to former drawings and specifications, and these have been tested with more or less success, and a few of them shipped abroad, but it is the simple truth to state that none of the Liberty motors thus far completed and tested is deemed by the Aircraft Production Board and the Signal Corps as fit for most of the exacting requirements which must be met when our airmen cross the battle lines and meet the enemy aviators in deadly combat.

The reader need not fear that this lamentable statement will give information, aid, or comfort to the German foe. There is ample proof that the German aviation experts have been able to keep in close and accurate touch with all we have been doing and have been attempting to do with aircraft production. I am reliably informed, in fact, that German airplane manufacturers have already incorporated certain of the features of our Liberty motor in the Mercedes type, which they more commonly use, and that German planes have been brought down back of our lines in which improved details of Liberty motor construction were incorporated in their engines.

It is ten months or more since we began the slow evolution of the Liberty motor, and since the German spy and intelligence service in the United States is distressingly efficient, there is every reason to believe that any of our improvements in motor construction have been in the hands of German designers long enough ago to have permitted their use in engines now attacking us and our allies.

There is nothing unusual or uncanny about this. We invented the submarine, the airplane, perfected the rapid-fire gun, created the first specimens of heavy artillery, gave to the world the basic idea of the "tank"—these five weapons constituting the leading agencies with which the war will be won or lost—and Germany adopted all of them and went ahead with their wholesale production with all possible speed, while we did practically nothing with these creations of our American inventors and scientists until war was actually on us. It was, therefore, almost inevitable that our Liberty motor would be used against us before we could take the offensive with it.

Liberty Motor Deficiencies.

Disinterested experts inform me that the existing defects of the Liberty motor are such that the present model of it can be used only where high speeds are not vitally essential. This means that it can be used only for work in which there is slight chance that it will be attacked by swifter enemy planes. This includes the use in most types of hydroplanes, when such relatively slow fliers are used in scouting for submarines in waters so far removed from German submarine bases that they will not encounter the lighter and faster enemy planes. Thousands of such hydroplanes are being constructed for the American and other allied navies, and here is one of the places where the Liberty motor is available.

It may also be used for advanced training purposes to a certain extent, and there are other duties which it can perform, but it is a generally conceded fact in expert and official circles that the existing design of the Liberty motor precludes its general use for land fighting purposes.

This does not imply that proposed or possible changes in design may not so remedy the defects of the Liberty motor that it may equal or surpass its rivals. But this is not the time to await the fruition of the dreams of the inventor, designer, or experimenter. The Liberty motor is good enough for certain purposes. Build it in quantity for those purposes. In the meantime let the inventors, designers, and experimenters do their best to correct the defects of the Liberty motor which now limit it to the more humble duties for which it is fitted, and if successful, build the improved models in quantity later.

I am able to state with absolute certainty that such will be the policy enforced in the future. One is not permitted to quote high Washington officials by name, and I obey this [illegible] may be permitted to

Intimate Details of Liberty Motor Revealed In Official Statement by War Department

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The War Department today issued its first authorized statement regarding details of construction of the Liberty motor. It discloses that the Liberty motor was a combination of many motors. The statement reads:

"Cylinder.—The designers of the cylinders for the Liberty engine followed the practice used in the German Mercedes, English Rolls Royce, French Lorraine Dietrich, and Italian Isotta Fraschini before the war and during the war. The cylinders are made of steel inner shells, surrounded by pressed steel water jackets. The Packard Company by long experiment had developed a method of applying these steel water jackets. The valve cages are drop forgings welded into the cylinder head. The principal departure from European practice is in the location of the holding-down flange, which is several inches above the mouth of the cylinder; and the unique method of manufacture evolved by the Ford Company. The output is now approximately seventeen hundred cylinder forgings per day.

"Cam Shaft and Valve Mechanism Above Cylinder Heads.—The design of the above is based on the Mercedes, but was improved for automatic lubrication, without wasting oil, by the Packard Motor Car Company.

"Cam Shaft Drive.—The cam shaft drive was copied almost entirely from the Hall-Scott motor; in fact, several of the gears used in the first sample engines were supplied by the Hall-Scott Motor Car Company. This type of drive is used by Mercedes, Hispano-Suiza, and others.

Angle of Forty-five Degrees.

"Angle Between Cylinders.—In the Liberty the included angle between the cylinders is forty-five degrees; in all other existing twelve-cylinder engines it is sixty degrees. This feature is new with the Liberty engine, and was adopted for the purpose of bringing each row of cylinders nearer the vertical and closer together, so as to save width and head resistance. By the narrow angle greater strength is given to the crank case and vibration is reduced.

"Electric Generator and Ignition.—A Delco ignition system is used. It was especially designed for the Liberty engine, to save weight and to meet the special conditions due to firing twelve cylinders, with an included angle of forty-five degrees.

"Pistons.—The pistons of the Liberty engine are of Hall-Scott design.

"Connecting Rods.—Forked or straddle type connecting rods, first used on the French De Dion car and on the Cadillac motor car in this country, are used.

"Crank Shaft.—Crank shaft design followed the standard twelve-cylinder practice, except as to oiling. Crank case follows standard practice. The forty-five degree angle and the flange location on the cylinders made possible a very strong box section.

"Lubrication.—The first system of lubrication followed the German practice of using one pump to keep the crank case empty, delivering into an outside reservoir, and another pump to force oil under pressure to the main crank-shaft bearings. This lubrication system also followed the German practice in allowing the overflow in the main bearings to travel out the face of the crank cheeks to a scupper, which collected this excess for crank-pin lubrication. This is very economical in the use of oil and is still the standard German practice.

"The present system is similar to the first practice, except that the oil, while under pressure, is not only fed to main bearings, but through holes inside of crank cheeks to crank pins, instead of feeding these crank pins through scuppers. The difference between the two oiling systems consists of carrying oil for the crank pins through a hole inside the crank cheek, instead of up the outside face of the crank cheek.

"Propeller Hub.—The Hall-Scott propeller hub design was adapted to the power of the Liberty engine.

"Water Pump.—The Packard type of water pump was adapted to the Liberty.

"Bore and Stroke.—The bore and stroke of the Liberty engine is 5x7 inches, the same as the Hall-Scott A-5 and A-7 engines, and as in the Hall-Scott twelve-cylinder engine.

Development of the Engine.

"Remarks.—The idea of developing Liberty engines of four, six, eight, and twelve cylinders with the above characteristics was first thought of about May 25, 1917. The idea was developed in conference with representatives of the British and French missions May 28 to June 1, and was submitted in the form of sketches at a joint meeting of the Aircraft (Production) Board and the Joint Army and Navy Technical Board June 4. The first sample was an eight-cylinder model, delivered to the Bureau of Standards July 3, 1917. The eight-cylinder model, however, was never put into production, as advices from France indicated that demands for increased power would make the eight-cylinder model obsolete before it could be produced.

"Work was then concentrated on the twelve-cylinder engine, and one of the experimental engines passed the fifty-hour test Aug. 25, 1917.

"After the preliminary drawings were made engineers from the leading engine builders were brought to the Bureau of Standards, where they inspected the new designs and made suggestions, most of which were incorporated in the final design. At the same time expert production men were making suggestions that would facilitate production.

"The Liberty twelve-cylinder engine passed the fifty-hour test, showing, as the official report of Aug. 25, 1917, records, 'that the fundamental construction is such that very satisfactory service, with a long life and high order of efficiency, will be given by this power plant, and that the design has passed from the experimental stage into the field of proven engines.'

"An engine committee was organized informally, consisting of engineers and production managers of the Packard, Ford, Cadillac, Lincoln, Marmon, and Trego companies. This committee met at frequent intervals, and it is to this group of men that the final development of the Liberty engine is largely due."

WILSON ASKS FOR VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. Thomas Martin, United States Senate.

Action of Senate Committee.

The outspoken opposition of the President to the Chamberlain resolution put an entirely new complexion upon the aircraft situation as it had been developing in the Senate. While Senators Thompson of Kansas, and Jones of New Mexico, Democratic members of the Audit Committee, had been willing, before the President's letter reached the Senate, to vote to report the resolution, with modifications so as to eliminate a broad investigation into the conduct of the war, they at once shifted, putting themselves on record as against reporting it. But the Senators were counter-checked by Senators Smoot of Utah and France of Maryland, Republicans. These, with Mr. McKellar, Democrat, at a conference of the committee during the morning, voted to report the resolution with "conduct of the war" eliminated, but with a proviso that the inquiry, besides going into aircraft, should embrace ordnance production and the Quartermaster General's Department.

Senators Thompson and Jones tried to persuade their confreres on the Audit Committee against reporting the Chamberlain resolution, whether amended or not, arguing that the Senate ought to defer to the wishes of the President. The three Senators on the other side argued that President Wilson's objection to an inquiry into the conduct of the war was met with the elimination of that from the resolution, and that an insistent demand had sprung up in the Senate for an inquiry into aircraft and other features of the war activity.

Senator Thompson insisted that the President had indicated in his letter to Senator Martin that he felt that the passage of the Chamberlain resolution, or one similar to it, would show lack of confidence in the Administration. This failed to move the three Senators, who maintained that it was the duty of Congress to conduct investigations. This one was needed, they argued, to "clear the air."

The Resolution as Amended.

Against the opposition of Senators Thompson and Jones, the committee voted to report the Chamberlain resolution, amended by Senator Smoot, to read as follows:

Resolved, that the Committee on Military Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, be and is hereby authorized and directed to inquire into and report to the Senate the progress of aircraft and ordnance production in the United States, or into the status of the Quartermaster General's supplies or expenditures in any of those branches of the War Department; that said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or during any recess of the Senate; to require by subpoena or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, documents and papers; to take the testimony of witnesses under oath, either orally or by deposition; to obtain documents, papers and other information from the several departments of the Government or any bureau thereof; to employ stenographic help, at a cost not to exceed $1 per printed page, to report such testimony as may be necessary; to employ such agents or assistants as may be necessary; and that all expenses, including traveling expenses, contracted hereunder, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate, not exceeding the sum of $10,000; provided that nothing in this resolution shall be held to authorize the Military Affairs Committee to take over or in any manner direct or superintend the executive branch of the Government in the conduct of the war.

The amended resolution differs from the original in striking out the phrase, "or into any other matters relating to the conduct of the war by or through the War Department," and the insertion of the proviso for investigating ordnance and "the status of the Quartermaster General's supplies or expenditures in any of those branches of the War Department." Otherwise the phraseology is identical with that of the resolution as offered by Senator Chamberlain, except that $10,000 is stipulated for expenses.

Will Make a Minority Report.

After the vote of the Audit Committee Senators Thompson and Jones announced that they would submit a minority report opposing the Chamberlain resolution in any form.

Explaining his attitude tonight, Senator Thompson said the Military Affairs Committee already had ample authority to conduct any investigation of the War Department and that further delegation of power by the Senate would be superfluous.

"I intend to abide by what the President asks," said Senator Thompson. "He feels that no more authority is needed for the Military Affairs Committee, and he has put himself plainly in opposition to the resolution offered by Senator Chamberlain. There is no equivocation about it. I intend doing what I can to defeat the resolution in the Senate."

Asked if the President had not told him at the White House last evening that he did not object to the aircraft investigation, Senator Thompson replied that that was true.

"He has not written in his letter to Senator Martin that he is opposed to an aircraft inquiry," said Senator Thompson. "He simply says he is against the Chamberlain resolution or any other like it. He does not question the right of the Military Affairs Committee to go ahead with the inquiry it began last Winter. He merely says he would regard the passing of the Chamberlain resolution as indicating want of confidence in the Administration. That is enough for me."

While the committee was in session Senator Thompson, its Chairman, sent for Senator Chamberlain, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee. Mr. Chamberlain soon appeared. Mr. Thompson told him the committee wanted him to explain the scope of his resolution. Senator Chamberlain started to reply, when Senator Jones broke in, suggesting that a stenographer be called to take down what the Oregon Senator had to say.

This angered Senator Chamberlain. Turning to Senator Jones he demanded:

"What do you mean by that? Is that the way you treat Chairmen of Senate committees here?"

"We merely want to get what you say down in the record," explained Senator Jones.

"Well, whatever I have to say for the record I'll say on the floor of the Senate," retorted Senator Chamberlain.

The stenographer was not sent for.

Senator Thompson asked Senator Chamberlain to explain the underlying reason for an inquiry into aircraft and other war production at this time.

"If you want to know the reason for it, you'll have to go back to the reports of the Military Affairs Committee's hearings last Winter," snapped Senator Chamberlain. "It's all clear enough."

Statement by Senator Chamberlain.

The Oregon Senator was not detained. Later in the day Senator Chamberlain put forth a statement in which he went into the reason for offering his resolution, as follows:

"It was not the purpose of the Military Affairs Committee or any member of it, when Senate Rostlution 241 was prepared and introduced, to interfere in the least with the constitutional powers and prerogatives of the President in the conduct and management of the war. Charges and countercharges have been made from time to time in reference to the loyalty, the efficiency, and the methods of some of those who have had immediate charge of aircraft production. Notwithstanding the fact that a report on this subject has been presented to the Senate by the Military Affairs Committee, these charges will not down. As a matter of fact, they have increased in frequency since that report was filed, and by the fact that other reports along the same lines have been made upon this same subject.

"To avoid seeming injustice, I want to say that no charges have been made reflecting either upon General Squier or Admiral Taylor of the Aircraft Production Board, but some of those responsible for aircraft production for the army have been charged with gross extravagance, and there is little if anything to show, so far as production is concerned, for the immense sums of money that have been spent in the production of aircraft.

"Charges and countercharges have been made with reference to the manufacture of ordnance, delays have been suggested which might have been cured, and it has been charged, too, that there has been extravagance in the department and that the production of ordnance might be speeded up by an inquiry which would let the people know the status thereof.

"In some other branches of the service the conditions are the same; and yet it is but fair to say that conditions seem to be improving in these several branches of the service, and it is hoped that the army will soon come when quantity production will become an accomplished fact and the needs of the army for the successful prosecution of the war met.

Its Purpose to Interfere.

"The purpose of the resolution in question was to broaden the power of the committee to ascertain the facts with reference to these subjects which I have mentioned, including, of course, the Quartermaster's Department and the question of the cross-license agreement entered into with reference to the production of aircraft, and it was not the purpose of any member of the committee to interfere with the Administration in the conduct of the war in any way whatever, but to ascertain how the appropriations were being expended and what the progress of manufacture and delivery was along the line indicated.

"The President has no more ardent supporters in the United States than the Senators comprising the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate; in all they have done, their single purpose has been to aid, and not to hinder, and I think the country pretty generally understands that the results of their efforts have been to aid rather than to hinder.

"During the civil war the joint committee of the Senate and House was an entirely different committee from the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, and its purpose was broader and its work extended over a very much broader field. That committee inquired into victories and defeats of the army, the character, and quality of the personnel thereof, and a multitude of subjects which this committee has never had any idea of inquiring into; nor does the resolution propose any such inquiry, nor that the committee shall in any way interfere with the military control of the army. The Military Affairs Committee has no such purpose as this in view, and some, at least, of the members of the committee thought it was but accepting the invitation of the President in his letter to Senator Thomas some days ago when he proposed a further investigation into the subjects under consideration. In that letter it will be remembered the President said:

You were kind enough to consult me the other day about the wholesale charges in regard to the production of aircraft which have been lodged by Mr. Gutzon Borglum. I take the liberty of writing you this letter in order to say more formally what I said to you then informally, namely, that every instrumentality at the disposal of the Department of Justice will be used to investigate and pursue charges of dishonesty, or malversion of any kind, if the allegations made by Mr. Borglum are considered worthy of serious consideration, and I sincerely hope that the matter will be treated as one for searching official investigation by the constituted authorities of the Government.

"The Military Affairs Committee is a co-ordinate branch of the Government, a part of the constituted authority thereof, and is one of the facilities that propose to carry out the request of the President as contained in that letter for an investigation, to the utmost of its ability and in perfectly good faith.

"I regret exceedingly that the President feels that a vote for this resolution or for the resolution in a modified form as it may be modified by the committee and by the Senate would be looked upon by him as an act of disloyalty to him."

Baker Welcomes Complete Inquiry.

Senator Thomas of Colorado, a member of the Military Affairs Committee, made public today a letter he had received from Secretary of War Baker in which the aid of the War Department was offered in any investigation the Military Affairs Committee might make. The letter, dated last Saturday, read:

War Department,
Washington, May 11, 1918.

My Dear Senator: I have received your letter of May 10, enclosing a copy of Senate Resolution 241, introduced by Senator Chamberlain, providing for the investigation by the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate of the progress of aircraft production and into any other matters relating to the conduct of the war by or through the War Department. I do not know how far additional powers are needed by the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, and clearly the War Department could have no wish adverse to the most complete inquiry by the Senate Military Affairs Committee. I point out, however, that every facility which the War Department has is freely at the disposal of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, whether any additional authority is conferred by resolution or not. Respectfully yours,

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

Hon. William H. Thompson, United States Senate.

"The Secretary of War does not seem opposed to the contemplated investigation," said Senator Thomas. "I do not believe, from a talk I had with the President yesterday, that Mr. Wilson is opposed to an aircraft or ordnance investigation. My understanding, from what he said, is that he favors having any such inquiry confined to the War Department. I think the Military Affairs Committee will go ahead."

The amended Chamberlain resolution will be reported to the Senate probably tomorrow. Judging from opinion expressed in the lobby today, it will be adopted. The sentiment in the Senate for a reopening of the Military Affairs Committee's investigation is pronounced. Democratic and Republican leaders alike predicted tonight that not only would the inquiry be authorized, but that the Military Affairs Committee undoubtedly would have all the funds it wanted. While in the Chamberlain resolution as amended $10,000 is allowed for expenses, it was explained that this limit was fixed only because that was the amount available in the contingent fund. If more is needed, the Senate will have to vote it later on.

QUIDDE DENIES PROPOSALS.

Says He Made No Peace Offers to Professor Herron.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Professor Quidde of Munich, in a statement to Berlin newspapers, supplements the denial recently made by the semi-official North German Gazette that he had been officially commissioned in Germany to make the peace offers which the London Daily Mail recently reported him to have extended to Professor Herron, an American living in Geneva, for transmission to President Wilson.

Professor Quidde, in this statement, denies that he made any peace proposals to Professor Herron for transmission to President Wilson or any one else.

questioned authority and ability informed me that there was pending "an absolute divorce between experiment and production in the aircraft program." More welcome news could not be announced. We have been afflicted with a Saturnalia of experimenting and a Barmecidia of production.

Our Eggs Put in One Basket.

Those who have been dismayed and distressed over the breakdown of our aviation program demand to know why those in charge of it placed all their hopes on the success of the Liberty motor instead of supplementing its production with the largest output of the foreign types of motors possible to construct in the United States. I doubt if any justifiable excuse can be made for the adoption of such a policy. It must have been founded on the egotistical conclusion that one or a number of American automobile engine experts could surely and speedily perfect a design that would so far surpass any and all of the available foreign types that a consideration of their mechanical merits could be ignored.

It must also have been founded on the hazardous conclusion that a number of American manufacturers, experienced only in the standardized production of automobile engines, could surely and speedily master the fabrication of the wonderfully delicate and complicated aviation motors able to compete with types on which thousands of German and other foreign aircraft experts had expended years of study, and for which they had conducted tens of thousands of experiments before they were in a position to manufacture in quantity an aviation motor of proved and practical merit.

Here was the initial, colossal, and absolutely inexcusable blunder. The man who put all of his eggs in one basket and then attempted to walk a tight rope over a valley during a hurricane in order to bring relief to his starving family—whom he might easily have reached by making a slight detour—was a cautious and ultra-conservative individual compared with those who committed the aircraft fate of the United States to designers and manufacturers with slight or no experience in one of the most difficult and complicated of arts, who relied on their luck or intuition, and who scorned to take advantage of what the rest of the aircraft world had evolved after the vast expenditure of time, money and genius. Some explain what thus has happened on the ground of monumental egoism. Others prefer the excuse of monumental stupidity. I am unable to formulate a theory which will account for it.

Getting More Types Now.

However, the sure indications are that the reorganized aircraft bodies in Washington will now do what should have been done more than a year ago, viz.: Obtain quantity production of aviation motors regardless of type and country of design or manufacture, provided they are fit for battle duty and for all of the ends the Liberty motor was mistakenly proclaimed able to meet. It may be stated positively that the policy of John T. Ryan, the new head of the Aircraft Production Board, will be to take aviation motors where he can find them, and to encourage and stimulate by all fair means the quantity production in the United States or elsewhere of any domestic or foreign type of motor which will help win the war.

From now on the Liberty motor will have to stand on its own merits. It will be used where it can be used to advantage, and our aviation program will no longer be halted by awaiting its further evolution and possible eventual perfection.

It is probable that there are a number of American types of aviation motors which have been developed and tested to a point where they can speedily be put into quantity production. One of the most lamentable results of the officially announced perfection of the Liberty motor was to discourage the normal incentive of American inventors and capital to go ahead with the creation of rival motors, some one of which would put this nation to the fore in this vitally important war art. Such men had no heart to enter in competition with the officially adopted and triumphantly vaunted Liberty motor. That barrier to inventive ingenuity and mechanical skill may now be considered as removed.

In the meantime, as I shall later explain more fully, we are fortunate in being able to obtain, and, in fact, are already obtaining, a large and steadily increasing supply of foreign types of motors of the highest excellence and which are now being manufactured in the United States. Thus we already have at our command types of aviation motors which will help fill the void.

Six More Kinds Being Made.

Those who have assumed that we were entirely dependent on the Liberty motor will be surprised and encouraged to know that there is the highest authority for the statement that the United States Government is now receiving six types of aviation motors exclusive of the Liberty. So far as I can learn, only two of these six additional types are being delivered in quantity, viz., the Curtiss and the Hispano-Suiza, but it is pleasing to know that four others are actually in production if even in small quantities. They are said to have successfully passed the designing and experimental stage, and it may be presumed that the day is near when they can be delivered in numbers sufficient to count.

The Curtiss "O. X." engine is designed for the Curtiss plane, which is intended not for war duty but more particularly for what is known as primary training purposes. These are of relatively low power and speed, but are admirable for the initial training use which gives the aviator novice relative control and confidence. A much faster plane is required for "advanced training," and it now seems certain that the existing type of Liberty motor will not wholly serve this vital need, an unexpected and most unfortunate development, but one which may be overcome by the employment of the Hispano-Suiza and other motors provided they can be built in sufficient quantities.

The Hispano-Suiza (Spanish-Swiss) motor is of the model most generally used in France, where seventeen large manufacturing plants are working night and day in their construction. The Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation began their production in the United States under contracts with the French Government early in 1916, more than a year before we declared war against Germany. It has completed for France 450 of these motors, and is now delivering to the United States motors of 150 horse power at the rate of 500 a month, which I consider the most encouraging bit of news yet announced concerning our aviation program.

This corporation has a contract with the United States for the production of 3,000 motors of 300 horse power each, and will fabricate them in a huge plant which it has purchased in Long Island City. Both the 150 and 300 horse power types are motors for fighting purposes, including pursuit, scouting, combat, battle, bombing, and all of the duties which can be met only by engines and planes which can face the German foe on equal or better terms.

We are also producing in this country most of the parts of the famous English engine, the Rolls-Royce, and there is reason to believe that arrangements could be made with the British Government or the manufacturers for the complete building and assembling of this motor in the United States. We are now getting none of this product.

There is also being manufactured in this country the Bugatti motor. The Duesenburg Corporation is filling a large order of these Bugatti motors for the French Government, and I am informed that deliveries have been made or can be made in quantities to the United States.

Concerning the positive identity and manufacturing position of the other corporations declared to be delivering motors I have no accurate information, but the facts just stated are highly encouraging in proof that our success in aircraft war work is not confined to the performance of the Liberty motor, and that we can send abroad a large and steadily increasing supply of fighting planes, regardless of the complications which seem to surround our overadvertised attempt to win the war with a motor which has existed too much only on paper and in ever-changing specifications.

HUGHES APPOINTED AS INVESTIGATOR

Will Help Department of Justice on Borglum Charges, at President's Request.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—On President Wilson's invitation, Charles E. Hughes, ex-Governor of New York and ex-Justice of the United States Supreme Court, who was Mr. Wilson's opponent for President in 1916, will act with Attorney General Gregory in investigating the charges of graft, inefficiency, and pro-German tendencies directed against the military aircraft administration by Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor. Announcement of the designation of Mr. Hughes was formally made this afternoon.

It is believed here that no recent act of President Wilson will bring more praise than this recognition of his late political opponent. By the appointment of Mr. Hughes the President has taken the ground from under the feet of those disposed to criticise the fact that he had placed the investigation of the Borglum charges in the hands of one of his Cabinet, who had turned over the detailed work of the inquiry to an official aid, Assistant Attorney General William L. Frierson, the junior member of the Attorney General's immediate staff.

With Mr. Hughes as investigator, backed by his high reputation as a jurist and legal examiner, and the additional fact that he is a political opponent of the President, whose administration he did not hesitate to criticise severely in the 1916 national campaign, there is hardly any likelihood that even the most active partisan antagonists of the President will find ground for complaint that the investigation will not be conducted with complete regard for getting at the facts and making a report that will show neither fear nor favor.

It is being suggested that the designation of Mr. Hughes will minimize the importance of the inquiry which the Senate Committee on Military Affairs has undertaken into the aircraft production program. Mr. Hughes will conduct a legal investigation under the nominal direction of the Attorney General with a view to ascertaining whether the Borglum charges justify criminal proceedings.

The Invitation and the Reply.

President Wilson's letter to Mr. Hughes, which was furnished to the press by the Committee on Public Information with the statement that its issuance was authorized by the President, reads:

May 13, 1918.

My Dear Judge Hughes:

You have doubtless noticed that very serious charges of dishonesty have been made in connection with the production of aircraft.

Because of the capital importance of this branch of the military service, I feel that these charges should be thoroughly investigated and with as little delay as possible, in order that the guilty, if there be any such, may be promptly and vigorously prosecuted and that the reputations of those whose actions have been attacked may be protected, in case the charges are groundless.

I requested the Department of Justice to use every instrumentality at its disposal to investigate these charges, and, with the approval of the Attorney General, I am writing to beg that you will act with him in making this investigation. I feel that this is a matter of the very greatest importance, and I sincerely hope that you will feel that it is possible to contribute your very valuable services in studying and passing upon the questions involved.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. Charles E. Hughes, 9 Broadway, New York City.

Mr. Hughes's response, the publication of which was also authorized by President Wilson, follows:

New York, May 15, 1918.

The President, the White House.

My Dear Mr. President:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 13. Appreciating fully the gravity of the matter, I shall be glad to co-operate with the Attorney General in making a prompt and thorough investigation of the charges of dishonesty in connection with aircraft production. You may be assured that nothing will give me greater pleasure than to render any assistance within my power. I assume that the Attorney General will advise me of his wishes for a conference with a view to the making of definite and adequate plans for the investigation, and I shall endeavor to arrange my affairs so that these plans may be carried out with as little delay as possible.

I remain, with great respect,

Very sincerely yours,

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

Brandegee Rebuffs Borglum.

In the Senate today Senator Brandegee of Connecticut presented a telegram from Mr. Borglum asking Mr. Brandegee to place before the Senate Mr. Borglum's denial of the charges made by Kenyon Mix of the Dodge Manufacturing Company to the effect that while Mr. Borglum was engaged in making an inquiry into his own charges by authority of President Wilson he was negotiating with the Dodge Company with a view to starting an airplane production concern which would have the advantage of information obtained by Mr. Borglum from the Government in his capacity of investigator.

Senator Brandegee informed the Senate that he declined to present Mr. Borglum's statement and would return it to him. In a statement issued in Washington last week, Mr. Borglum had said that Senator Brandegee would place before the Senate on Tuesday or Wednesday evidence to refute the testimony of Mr. Mix and Henry Harrison Suplee, the consulting engineer of the Dodge Company.

Stamford, Conn., May 14, 1918.

Senator Frank B. Brandegee:

I shall have delivered to you between two and three tomorrow (Wednesday) my denial of Mix's slanderous charges presented by Senator Thomas. Please place this reply before the Senate and oblige, yours faithfully,

GUTZON BORGLUM.

Mr. Brandegee was brief in his explanation of why he would not serve Mr. Borglum.

"I think Mr. Borglum labors under a misapprehension as to my function in this matter," he said. "I do not know what Mr. Borglum's charges are or what his affidavits are. I do not know anything about the evidence that he may have. He says he is going to send me some papers. I do not feel that it is my duty to lay before the Senate a whole lot of affidavits and assertions and charges. Therefore, if these documents are received by me through messenger or otherwise, I shall return them to Mr. Borglum and tell him that he had better take them to the Military Affairs Committee, if the Senate shall authorize that committee to make an investigation."

LIMIT PRESIDENT'S POWER.

Mrs. Wilson's "No," He Says Clearly Marks Its Boundary.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—There are some arbitrary limitations on even the wartime powers of President Wilson. At the flying field here today, watching the departure of the first airplane mail carrier to New York, the President posed for motion pictures. After once passing through the ordeal, he was asked to pose once more with Mrs. Wilson. The President conferred with his wife and then replied:

"Mrs. Wilson says 'No,' and you know, boys, my authority stops there."

FIRST AIR MAIL IN WASHINGTON

his impressions of the front, one addressed to the President and the other to Postmaster General Burleson.

Among the mail carried by Lieutenant Webb was the first letter postmarked for air delivery. It was from Governor Whitman assuring President Wilson of this State's support for the coming Red Cross drive.

There were also letters from Postmaster Patten to President Wilson and Postmaster General Burleson, congratulating them upon the beginning of the air mail service, and a letter to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in which the officers and the men of the Pelham Bay Training Camp gave him a "hearty invitation" to attend the opening performance of an entertainment, "Biff Bang," to be given by the enlisted men of the camp at the Century Theatre.

Expects Atlantic to be Crossed This Year.

Discussing the significance of the departure of Lieutenant Webb, President Hawley of the Aero Club said in part:

"This day will go down in history as marking the advent of a new epoch because this New York-Philadelphia-Washington aerial mail line is the forerunner of a network of aerial mail lines which, hence, entire world and will be a dominant factor in the reconstruction that will follow the war. Progress in aeronautics in the last eighteen years has been enormous. The marvelous flights of the giant Caproni and Handley Page air cruisers give an idea of what we may expect in the coming twelve months. The flight of 1,000 miles without stopping made recently by a squadron of Caproni triplanes, and the flight of a Handley Page biplane from London to the Dardanelles, 2,000 miles, with several stops but no mechanical trouble, carrying five passengers and spare parts, complete camping equipment, provisions, and bombs, are but some of the hundreds of such performances. The tendency is toward large machines, larger and larger. I feel certain that before the year is over we shall see airplanes equipped with motors of 2,000 horse power, which will be capable of flying across the Atlantic."

Byron Newton in his address at Belmont Park predicted that the establishment of a regular passenger airplane route was not far distant.

"The aerial mail service," he said, "ought to be called the cloudland mail." Postmaster Patten declared that the "moment was historical" in that the first flight of the aerial mail service marked a new epoch in the transmission of intelligence.

After the departure of Lieutenant Webb for Philadelphia most of the spectators who had assembled to see him off lingered to welcome the arrival of the first air mail for New York. At 3:30 P. M. Lieutenant Culver's plane came into view from the south, and a convoy of seven airplanes soared into the sky from the field to meet him, forming a wide circle around the arriving courier, darting and diving like birds at play.

Within seven minutes after his first appearance Lieut. Culver made a perfect landing, hauled two mail pouches out of his machine, and turned them over to a waiting postal clerk. The clerk threw them into a Post Office automobile and sped off to the special train which was waiting at the Queens Station of the Long Island Railroad. The mail arrived at the Post Office at Thirty-third Street and Eighth Avenue at 4:12 o'clock, and was being distributed to the stations at 4:15. The air route mail from Philadelphia beat railroad time by about an hour and fifteen minutes.

Lieutenant Culver flew in a direct line from Philadelphia to Belmont Park. He declared that his trip was uneventful, and that he had encountered no difficult air conditions.

According to the Post Office officials the air route will be in operation every day, except Sundays, when weather conditions make flying dangerous. The schedule provides for the departure of one plane daily from Washington and New York at 11:30 in the morning. With the perfected relay at Philadelphia it should not take more than three hours for mail from Washington to reach New York. The fastest railway service between the two cities consumes about five hours.

For "aeroplane post" a letter will cost 24 cents an ounce, including special delivery. At present the new 24-cent stamp for airplane mail can be obtained only at the Post Office, at Eighth Avenue and Thirty-third Street, but it will soon be placed on sale at all substations. Ordinary stamps, however, will serve if the letter or package is marked "For Airplane Service."

After the present it is the intention of the Post Office Department to accept only first-class mail for transmission. Small parcels, however, whose dimensions do not exceed thirty inches, combined length and girth, will also be carried. Inasmuch as the 24-cent stamp includes special delivery after the letter arrives in the city to which it is addressed, the air mail service costs only 11 cents more than a special delivery letter or telegram.

The War Department has furnished twelve large training planes for use in the mail service and aviators have been detailed from the regular service. The planes are built along the lines of the regulation bombing machine and are "one seaters," as a maximum of space is desired for storing mail. It is estimated that an airplane carrying 300 pounds of mail will bring a revenue of $1,152 for each trip. When the planes carrying 675 pounds of mail are ready to go revenue from each trip, if a capacity load is carried, will be $2,592.

On days when the weather forbids flight the mail sacks will be forwarded by rail and distributed by special delivery. Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster General, has expressed the belief that sufficient experience will be gained during the Summer to make it possible to maintain the service through the Winter. As the present routes are developed, it is the aim of the department to extend the service to other parts of the country, the route from New York to Boston being the next most likely avenue of air service.

PRESIDENT SEES START OF AIR POST AL SERVICE

Post Office Officials Pleased with First Trial—Many Letters of Congratulation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The first regular air mail service in the world was inaugurated today between Washington, Philadelphia and New York.

Three of the four airplanes utilized delivered safely and on time the mail intrusted to their care. One of the planes, the one which left the Polo Grounds in Washington this morning in the presence of President and Mrs. Wilson, Postmaster General Burleson and other high officials was forced to land in Maryland after it had made a brilliant start.

This machine was piloted by Lieutenant George L. Boyle. He left Washington at 11:50 o'clock, and less than twenty minutes later he had landed at Waldorf, Md. Philadelphia was notified, and the machine into which the mail carried by Lieutenant Boyle's machine was to have been transferred at Philadelphia left for New York in charge of Lieutenant Paul Culver.

The two aviators with the first consignment of air mail from New York to Washington completed their job successfully. Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb, who started from New York this morning, transferred his mail to a second machine which Lieutenant James C. Edgerton successfully piloted to Washington, arriving at the Polo Grounds here at 2:50 this afternoon.

Lieutenant Boyle left the Polo Grounds this morning seventeen minutes behind schedule time. As he entered his airplane bouquets of flowers, the gifts of President and Mrs. Wilson and of Postmaster General and Mrs. Burleson, were handed to him by the Postmaster General. There were four sacks of mail in the machine, three for New York and one for Philadelphia, weighing in all 150 pounds. The delay in departure was chiefly due to a wait for gasoline.

Lieutenant Edgerton, who piloted the machine from Philadelphia to Washington, landed at the Polo Field at 2:50 o'clock this afternoon. He was twenty minutes behind his schedule and brought 5,000 letters from New York, as well as a number from Philadelphia. Shortly after 3 o'clock letters brought by this plane were delivered to President Wilson at the White House and to Postmaster General Burleson.

Among the letters received by Postmaster General Burleson was one from John Wanamaker, who served as Postmaster General during the Harrison administration. The letter, which was mailed in Philadelphia, follows:

Private Office, John Wanamaker,
Philadelphia, Penn., May 14, 1918.

Hon. Albert S. Burleson, Postmaster General of the United States.

My Dear Sir: It will not seem intrusive for the oldest Postmaster General to offer his congratulations to the Postmaster General of the United States, in whose administration the great war mail service emergency has been so well organized and conducted, and to whom has come the greater and ever to be memorable privilege of inaugurating an airplane mail service.

As the head of the postal system for four years I labored industriously to take the first steps in the parcel post and the postal savings, to accomplish the greatest forward step of all—the Government ownership and control of the telegraph and telephone—in which I fared mainly on political grounds.

I very earnestly hope that you will add to your honors and usefulness in gaining for the people of the United States a governmental guardianship of their personal correspondence by wire, which can only be attained by ownership, which would result in undoubted economies and much reduced rates that would extend millions of people.

I have the honor to remain your obedient servant,

JOHN WANAMAKER.

Of the letters received by Postmaster General Burleson, the first one that reached him was from W. C. Burton, Postmaster of Brooklyn, N. Y. It reads:

Office of the Postmaster,
Brooklyn, N. Y., May 15, 1918.

Hon. A. S. Burleson, Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

My Dear General Burleson: I desire to extend my hearty congratulations to you upon the inauguration of the aerial mail service between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

It is one more achievement of the most enlightened and progressive postal administration ever enjoyed by this or any other country. I wish for this new service unbounded success and rapid extension.

With best wishes for your health and long continuance in the great office which you have administered with farsighted vision and great advantage to the American people, with much regard, Yours sincerely,

WALTER C. BURTON.

The Aero Club of America,
297 Madison Avenue,
New York, May 15, 1918.

Hon. Albert S. Burleson, Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.:

My Dear Mr. Burleson: The Aero Club of America sends you a message of greeting by the first aero post leaving New York for Washington.

We sincerely hope and confidently believe that the aerial mail route inaugurated between New York, Philadelphia, and Washington, which carries this message to you, is the forerunner of a network of aero mail lines which will cover the entire world, and will be a dominant factor in the reconstruction that will follow the war.

The rapid development of flying over the land will soon be followed by extended flights over the sea, and we will soon have large aeroplanes crossing the Atlantic, which will lead to the establishing of transatlantic aerial mail lines as well as the delivery of airplanes from the United States to our allies by air.

We extend our most hearty congratulations upon the inaugurating of aero mail service, thus adding the facilities of aerial navigation to another great department of the Government. The Aero Club of America has fostered the development of aeronautics for thirteen years, and has urged and supported the carrying of mail by airplanes since 1911.

Yours very sincerely and cordially,

ALAN R. HAWLEY,
President Aero Club of America.

Still another of the letters read:

Office of the Postmaster,
New York, N. Y., May 14, 1918.

Hon. A. S. Burleson, Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

Permit me to offer you my sincere congratulations upon the inauguration of the airplane mail service, which will stand as a permanent record of a fine achievement in your administration and is an enduring memorial of progress in the department in expediting mail transportation.

Very truly yours,

T. E. PATTEN,
Postmaster.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Praeger, speaking of the inauguration of the airplane mail flights today, said:

"Three of the airplanes in the New York-Washington aerial mail route successfully completed their work, with the result that letters mailed up to 11 A. M. in New York and up to noon in Philadelphia were delivered by 4:15 P. M. in Washington, and made railroad connections for nearly every State in the Union up to eight hours in advance of the quickest service that could have been given by railroad.

"This service will be operated day after day excepting Sundays, and when all the reserve airplanes have been placed and the aviators have become familiar with the route and program of flying, the service must increase in efficiency, speed, and dependability. Especially will there be a marked reduction in time of flight between the three cities when the larger machines with the higher power engines are in operation.

"As in all pioneer work dealing with unknown and uncertain factors, there will be occasional accidents and temporary interruptions, but every preparation has been made for such emergency in the way of extra landing fields, special automobile facilities at every point between New York and Washington, and the stationing of reserve airplanes, with a view to reducing unavoidable delays to a minimum.

"The Signal Corps of the army and the Post Office Department will each do its full share of the work, and it only remains for the public to give us cooperation toward making this new and difficult project a success."

The following official order regarding the new air mail service was promulgated tonight:

"Airplane mail service between Washington, Philadelphia, and New York was established May 15, 1918—the rate of postage is 24 cents per ounce or fraction thereof, including special delivery service.

"Mail by airplane from New York arriving at Philadelphia not later than 1:30 P. M. will connect with earlier trains than those conforming to train schedules for Atlantic City and Cape May, N. J.; Chester, Reading, and Pottsville, Penn.; Wilmington, Del., and Port Deposit, Md.

"Mail by airplane arriving at Washington by 3:30 P. M. would make connections with the Baltimore & Ohio train leaving Washington at 4 P. M. for Cumberland, Grafton, Wheeling, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, and St. Louis. It would also make connection with the Southern Railroad train leaving Washington at 4:15 P. M. for Charlottesville, Lynchburg, and Danville, Va.; Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, N. C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala., and intermediate points.

"Mail by airplane from Washington will connect at Philadelphia with earlier trains for Trenton, Atlantic City, and Cape May, N. J.; East Stroudsburg, Chester, Reading, Pottsville, and Bethlehem, Penn., and Wilmington, Del., and intervening points.

"Mail by airplane from Washington and Philadelphia arriving at New York before 3:30 P. M. will make connections for Bridgeport and New Haven, Conn.; Springfield and Boston, Mass.; Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, and Buffalo, N. Y.; Cleveland and Toledo, Ohio; Elkhart, Ind., and Chicago and intervening points.

"The fastest time between Washington and New York by train is five hours; by airplane two and a half to three hours.

"Mail can be sent by airplane from New York to any city which has mail connection with Philadelphia or Washington, from Washington to any city which can be reached by mail connection from Philadelphia or New York, and from Philadelphia to any city which can be reached through mail connections at New York or Washington.

"OTTO PRAEGER,
"Second Assistant Postmaster General."

FAST MAIL IN POLITICS IN WEBSTER CAMPAIGN

New-York Times of That Day Sought Pony Service to Serve Aims of Democrats.

Among the letters sent by the first Washington to New York air mail service yesterday was one written by Postmaster General A. S. Burleson to the publisher of THE NEW YORK TIMES, inclosing a letter written in 1835 by the proprietors of "The New-York Times" of that day, which disappeared long before the present NEW YORK TIMES was founded, urging quicker mail service between this city and the capital. Mr. Burleson's letter, held up at Philadelphia, failed to reach this city last night. Duplicates of it and its inclosure, sent in advance by train, got in safely, however. Postmaster General Burleson's letter follows:

Office of the Postmaster General,
Washington, May 15.

Mr. Adolph S. Ochs,
Publisher and President THE NEW-YORK TIMES, New York, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Ochs: As early as 1835 THE NEW YORK TIMES showed its interest in the speedy delivery of mail between Washington and New York. The editor of THE TIMES then wrote to Amos Kendall, Postmaster General, calling attention to the establishment of the "Pony Express" by a combination of newspapers as a private enterprise, to facilitate the delivery of newspaper dispatches between Washington and New York, and suggesting that this service should be performed by the Post Office Department.

I am inclosing a copy of the letter, which you may value as a souvenir of both a time long past and the first trip of the Airplane Mail Service.

As this letter is purely personal to THE TIMES in its character it will not be made public by the department, but you are, of course, at liberty to make any use of it you may desire.

Sincerely yours,

A. S. BURLESON.

Following the receipt of the copy of Mr. Burleson's letter it was pointed out that he erred in inferring that THE NEW YORK TIMES of today and The New-York Times which eighty-three years ago urged better mail service were the same newspaper. Though the title is the same, except for the hyphen, the newspaper which addressed the Postmaster General of 1835 had gone completely out of existence years before the present NEW YORK TIMES issued its first number on the morning of Sept. 18, 1851.

The newspaper to which Postmaster General Burleson referred was a four-page sheet published daily and semi-weekly at 10 Wall Street by W. Holland, E. Sanford, and E. W. Davies, whose names are signed to the letter which Mr. Burleson inclosed. There were seven columns to each page of this New-York Times and the reading matter was set in exceedingly small type. The newspaper was founded by Mr. Holland and his colleagues in 1833, succeeding The New York Standard. Diligent research failed to establish the identity of the newspaper's editor or the date upon which it ceased publication.

The full text of the communication, reproduced partially in fac-simile elsewhere on this page, which the proprietors of the old New-York Times addressed to Postmaster General Kendall, and which Mr. Burleson forwarded, is as follows:

(Private.)
Times Office,
New York, Dec. 4, 1835.

Hon. Amos Kendall, Postmaster General.

Dear Sir: We take the liberty to enclose announcements from The Courier and Enquirer and Journal of Commerce, of this city, of an intention on the part of those establishments to have reporters at Washington, and to run an express by which to give the proceedings of Congress a day in advance of The Times and other morning papers.

It is not probable that The Courier and Journal will have to bear the expense themselves. The hope is, no doubt, that these papers will eagerly be sought for by all classes on account of the late information which they will thus obtain, and that an opportunity will be afforded to promulgate doctrines, under the form of Congressional news, that will have a favourable bearing in relation to the success of their favourite candidates at the President Election for the next term.

The Courier, it is known, has already declared itself in favor of Mr. Webster. It is backed (as is The Journal) by most of the mercantile and paper money power in the city, and its principal Editor is reckless of expence, so long as he obtains his ends. The political feeling of The Journal is also well known by its repeated declarations, particularly in a violent and uncalled-for editorial philippic against our excellent and patriotic Vice President immediately previous to the gubernatorial election in this State last year, when they said they would view the election of Mr. Van Buren as the greatest calamity, &c.—but it is unnecessary to repeat their language. Their feeling in relation to the candidate for Vice President is also well known, and their backers and supporters will use every exertion to defeat the clearly expressed will of the republican portion of the land.

Knowing that the resources of THE TIMES would not warrant an expenditure equal to the establishment of a rival express, and being desirous of furnishing our democratic friends with the news as early as any other paper, I called on Mr. Webb and asked if he would allow us to participate in the express on our paying a proportion of the expence. He unhesitatingly declined. I then called on Mr. Bates, our active Assistant Postmaster, who informed me that you were about making a new contract for carrying the mail between Washington and New York, and that perhaps you contemplated hastening it so as to gain something on the present time. This would enable the public at large to possess the earliest information on National affairs, by which means particular individuals could not present their own undisputed views to the community and promulgate sentiments which, if not adverse to fact, were intended to create a bias favourable to their own immediate views.

If (as a member of Congress, sir, could be received in New York by midnight it would be in season for the next morning's papers. The Editor of the Courier has been south, and, no doubt, has made arrangements to supply copies of his report, (by the aid of a manifold writer) to the Whig Editors of Baltimore and Philadelphia. The papers North and East would necessarily receive the Courier and Journal by the morning mails. The Whig papers would repeat their report and remarks, while the Democratic ones would either have to wait for the regular mail or spread the Whig intelligence thus given them, either of which, no doubt, would have an unfavorable influence on the public. If there should be a bane, Sir, thus spread, should it not be accompanied by an antidote. The TIMES is desirous of giving as late news to its subscribers and democratic contemporaries as can be found elsewhere, so that an opportunity will be afforded them to read and decide for themselves.

Respectfully soliciting a line, Sir, relative to your views on the contract about being entered into, and the time it is intended to have the mail arrive in New York, I remain, with much respect, Your very obdt svt,

EDGAR W. DAVIES,
For Self and Colleagues, W. Holland and E. Sanford, N. Y. Times.

The Mr. Webb mentioned in the foregoing was General James Watson Webb, editor of The Courier Enquirer.

PHILADELPHIA'S QUICK WORK

New York Mail Sent on Its Way to Washington in Six Minutes.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Air mail service between Washington, Philadelphia, and New York was successfully established today, so far as this city's part in the venture was concerned. A crowd of nearly a thousand persons saw Lieutenant Torrey H. Webb of California, an army aviator, land at Bustleton, in the northeastern part of the city, with mail from New York. Six minutes later Lieutenant J. C. Edgerton departed for Washington with the New York mail and a big batch from the Philadelphia Post Office.

When it became known that the airplane carrying mail from Washington had landed in Maryland, Lieutenant H. P. Culver was ordered to proceed at once to New York with Philadelphia mail. He departed at 2:15 o'clock.

When the airplane from New York arrived its mail for Philadelphia was quickly loaded upon a motor truck and started for North Philadelphia to be distributed. No time was lost shifting mail from New York for Washington to Lieutenant Edgerton's machine, and he had hardly time to say "Thank you" to a delegation of citizens who presented him with a wrist watch.

Lieutenant Webb, who also received a wrist watch to commemorate the occasion, said he found the atmosphere at the higher altitudes "a little bit cold." He crossed New York at a height of 8,000 feet and flew over New Jersey at at average of 4,500.

Postmaster John Thornton of this city headed the delegation of citizens who saw the inauguration of the service. Mr. Thornton mailed letters to Postmaster General Burleson and the Postmasters at New York and Washington.

TO ADVANCE AIR SERVICE.

Institute Organized with Major William Thaw as President.

The Aero Club of America announced last night that it had been informed from Washington of the organization of the Air Service Institute of the United States, which is to be conducted on the lines of the United States Naval Institute, for advancing the professional and scientific knowledge of military and naval aeronautics. Major William Thaw, dean of American aviators in France, has been selected President and Major Raoul Lufbery, an American ace, Vice President.

Following the practice of the United States Naval Institute, the Air Service Institute will offer prizes annually for the best essays on aeronautic subjects.

The institute has temporary offices in the Union Trust Building on Washington. It will also have offices in France, England, and Italy.

BORGLUM SUBMITS CASE TO BRANDEGEE

Says Dealings with Mix Antedated Work for President—Sends Two Affidavits.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Gutzon Borglum sent to Senator Brandegee of Connecticut tonight a part of the evidence he desires placed in the Senate record in answer to the charge that he sought to form a private airplane corporation to take Government contracts while he was investigating aircraft production at the invitation of President Wilson. It was in the form of a long letter reiterating and amplifying his denial of the charge, accompanied by affidavits from Hugo C. Gibson, an employe of the British War Mission at New York, and Benjamin Harris.

Mr. Gibson, named as associated with the sculptor in the proposed private corporation, swore in his affidavit that in December Borglum intended to engage with him in a commercial enterprise, but that, after receiving authority from the President to make an investigation, Borglum withdrew, and they had no further negotiations.

Mr. Harris, said to have been selected to represent Borglum in the proposed corporation, denied that Borglum ever had asked him to become interested in an aeronautic company, either on his own behalf or as a representative.

In his letter the sculptor said he had just been informed that Gibson had been suspended from connection with the British mission at the request of the War Department, although he was a highly valuable and necessary expert. He also declared every effort was being made to prevent him from getting affidavits, that several of his witnesses had been summarily "shipped away from Washington," and that others were pleading with him not to involve them for business reasons.

After discussing in great detail the telegrams put into the Senate record with the statement of Kenyon W. Mix, Jr., of the Dodge Manufacturing Company, accusing him of negotiating with Mix for the organization of the airplane company, Borglum said:

"I shall give no more time now to this red herring they have dragged across the trail of investigation and add only this—that all the telegrams Mix offers, together with my letters furnished by the Secretary of War and General Squiers, antedate my work as investigator and indicate knowledge and enthusiasm in touch with the subject. I claim all with pride, and challenge any one not bent on slander and deception, after possessing all of these documents, some for nine months, to read honestly into them any of the charges made, except with malice born out of the need of the hour."

Mauser Interests Profiteered in a Philadelphia Concern, Reichstag Member Charges.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—A member of the Reichstag, Dr. Suedekum, adds another interesting story to the many which of late have let in the light on the profiteering of German munition firms.

He has given notice of a motion in which he asserts that Privy Councilor Arnhold, President of the Board of Directors of the Deutsche Waffen und Munitions Fabriken, makers of the Mauser rifle and a gigantic munition concern, lately declared that the firm, shortly before America entered the war, had sold its interests in a certain large munition factory in Philadelphia.

Those interests, he added, were capitalistic and technical, and the German company's patents, &c., had been made over by license to an American firm. By this sale the German concern made a profit of 9,500,000 marks.

In his motion Dr. Suedekum asks the German Chancellor what he has done to prevent a state of affairs by which during the war Germany's enemies are provided with arms and munitions by the capitalistic and technical co-operation of German firms.

Germany Uses Metal for Projectiles —Zinc Substituted.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Germany is calling in her nickel coinage, the metal of which is needed for projectiles, and is substituting zinc for minting coins of this class.

Authority has just been given for the minting of 10,000,000 marks' worth of zinc 10-pfennig pieces.

Summon La Follette's ex-Partner.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Senate Elections Committee, considering La Follette's much-discussed St. Paul speech, today took up the protest of Gilbert M. Roe of New York, La Follette's former law partner, that it was without jurisdiction in the proceeding and summoned Roe to appear Tuesday.

PUBLISHERS FIND CANADA IS FAVORED

TO STUDY POSTAL LAWS

The possibility that the new postal zone law might make it profitable for American magazine publishers to issue their periodicals from Canadian soil was suggested yesterday by Charles Johnson Post, Director of the Publishers Advisory Board, following a meeting held at the offices of the board at 200 Fifth Avenue, at which representatives of the associations of publishers of medical, religious, agricultural, and business magazines, as well as publications of general interest, and heads of the allied printing trades and the Authors League were present.

The meeting appointed a committee to study the Canadian postal laws in connection with the postal treaty between the United States and Canada, which does not bring Canadian periodicals under the effect of the new zoning regulations which were put into the revenue law.

"Under the zoning provisions which take effect July 1," said Mr. Post, "a magazine published in Canada will be handled by the United States Post Office and delivered to American subscribers throughout the West at a lower cost for postage than if the same magazine were published in any of the great cities of the East.

"In other words, this law passed by an American Congress gives preferential rates in a great part of the United States to Canadian publishers. It has a tendency, therefore, to destroy American publications or to compel them to study the possibilities of Canadian postage and publication in the light of our postal treaties with that country.

"The postal zone law will add from 100 to 900 per cent. to the present postage on American periodicals. The higher rates of postage apply to Western subscribers and Western readers. Subscribers west of Colorado will have to pay for many of our leading magazines from 7 to 9 cents a copy in postage, while the postage rates on many of the most important business publication will be from 10 to 40 cents postage a copy. These same publications, if published in Canada, however, will be delivered by United States Post Office to the same reader and under the same conditions at from 4½ to 5 cents a copy.

"This postal zone law was not a revenue law and was so stated explicitly by Congressman Claude Kitchin of North Carolina, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who was its originator and who put it on the statute books under the implied threat that unless it was adopted the passage of the War Revenue act would be delayed."

It was upon the presentation of these facts that a committee of the publishers was appointed. The committee will make a preliminary report to a meeting of the Publishers' Advisory Board, to be held next week. Among those present yesterday representing the various publishing interests were: A. C. G. Hammesfahr, Vice President of Collier's, representing the Periodical Publishers' Association; M. C. Robbins, President of the Associated Business Papers, Inc.; Jesse H. Neal, Secretary of the Associated Business Papers, Inc.; Dr. H. Edwin Lewis, American Association of Medical Publications; George E. Cook, President of the Association of Religious Press; A. S. Walmsley, Secretary of the Association of Religious Press; Thomas A. Barrett of the Agricultural Publishers' Association; John Adams Tracy, Secretary of the Periodical Publishers Association; Allen H. Richardson, President of the Periodical Publishers' Association; Rex Beach, President of the Authors' League of America; Eric Schuler, Secretary of the Authors' League of America; Peter J. Brady, President of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, and Charles Johnson Post, Director of the Publishers' Advisory Board.

KILLED ATTEMPTING RESCUE

Col. Clive Gave His Life to Save a Wounded Brother Officer.

LONDON, May 4, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Colonel Percy Archer Clive, member of the House of Commons for the South Division of Herefordshire, gave his life on the western front a few days ago in a gallant attempt to rescue a wounded officer.

Colonel Clive, at the head of his battalion of the Lancashire Fusiliers, had just straightened out the line by a successful counterattack when it was reported to him that the Colonel of the regiment on his left was lying severely wounded between the battlelines.

Colonel Clive went out immediately alone to aid the wounded Colonel and was killed by a German sniper. Subsequently the wounded Colonel was brought in by stretcher bearers.

TELLS OF CAPTURE OF BLACK SEA FLEET

German Correspondent Says Few Ships at Sebastopol Were in Serviceable Condition.

45 NOTABLES SHOT BY REDS

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—The Berliner Tageblatt's Special Commissioner to the Ukraine, Leonard Adelt, in a telegram dated at Odessa, May 12, gives the following particulars concerning the capture of the Russian Black Sea fleet:

"When the Germans entered Sebastopol the Sailors' Executive Commission placed the fleet at the disposal of the Ukrainian Peoples' Republic. It was found afterward, however, that the bunkers of the ships were empty and that a majority of the vessels had been so neglected that only the battleship Volga and the cruisers Pamyat Merkuria were in serviceable condition.

"The remainder of the fleet consisted of the battleship Rostislav, the cruiser Potemkine, and a number of torpedo boats and submarines and twenty transports. The protected motor boat flotilla already had been seized at Odessa, as had been the new war vessels lying on the slips. The latter consisted of a dreadnought of 23,000 tons of the 1911 class, two protected cruisers of 7,600 tons each, and two unprotected cruisers.

"At Sebastopol the Bolsheviki shot forty-five notables, including Rear Admirals Sachs and Lvoff, and four Captains and two Colonels. The Bolsheviki had demanded 20,000,000 rubles from the City of Odessa and 10,000,000 rubles from Sebastopol, but the wholesale execution of the leading citizens of these two places were prevented by the timely arrival of the German troops."

Herr Adelt says that General Korniloff has gone to Orenburg to join forces with the Cossack Hetman Dutoff. Korniloff, he adds, is supposed to have a force of 22,000 men, but the number varies daily, as his men, like the Bolsheviki, come and go as they please.

It is noteworthy, the correspondent concludes, that the official name of the Ukraine now is "The Ukrainian State," instead of the Ukrainian Peoples' Republic.

A dispatch from London on May 12 showed that all of the Black Sea Fleet was not taken at Sebastopol. It said that the Russian Ambassador at Berlin had been instructed to notify Germany that part of the fleet, which had left Sebastopol and was at Novorossysk, had no intention of attacking the German ships in that port, which was the pretext given by the Germans for the threatened capture of the place.

LITTLE PLANTING DONE IN RUSSIA

Less Than Half of the Land Usually Tilled Will Be Cultivated This Year.

SAMARA, Russia, May 2.—(Associated Press.)—Much of the fertile land of European Russia will go uncultivated this year. Less than half the land, which has in times past produced large quantities of grain and other crops, now remaining in control of the Soviet Government will be tilled, owing to the shortage of seed, horses, and implements and the unsettled conditions brought about by the land division.

Peasants have hidden their seed and resisted the food committees. Many districts, consequently, have seed potatoes, wheat, barley, and oats, but the peasants are not willing to plant all the acreage possible, fearing the future disposition of the land and the control of the harvested crop. The hostility of the farmers toward city workers generally is shown by their unwillingness to surrender grain to the food committees and their hesitation to plant extensively lest their crops be requisitioned.

The wheat planting season ends this week in Central Russia; and in most of the districts less than half the grain land has been plowed. The exodus of city dwellers into the grain sections has been so large that breadstuffs are extremely scarce, even in grain centres like Samara, where bread sells for 2 rubles per pound. The price gradually rises approaching Moscow, and at some towns in the grain States children gather at the incoming trains and beg bread from the passengers.

Several provinces have issued their own money, but the peasants and merchants refuse to accept it, unless forced to do so by armed guards. Even the provincial cities are issuing their own money and are legalizing the circulation of officially indorsed checks on State banks, but the peasants do not willingly accept such mediums of exchange.

Samara Province has thousands of German colonists owning from sixty to eighty acres each, who have forcibly resisted the land committees and retain their property. These colonists are Russian citizens, and have been in Russia for several generations. The amount of land allotted to individual peasants varies in different sections, according to the density of the population, the nature of the land, and the size of the families. Two and a half to five acres is the average allotment in the grain-growing districts.

ROSTOV RECAPTURED BY RUSSIAN FORCES

Germans Driven Out of Important Base After Occupying It for One Day.

MOSCOW, May 10, (Associated Press.)—Rostov-on-Don, the largest city in the Don Cossack territory, was recaptured today by the Russian Soviet troops, who drove out the Germans. The Germans, who had held Rostov for only a day, are retreating.

The armistice on the Kursk front has been extended to the Voronezh and Don districts. Martial law has been declared and the Soviet troops have been ordered to disarm the bands invading Russian territory despite the armistice.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin announces today that war has had to be proclaimed at Ekaterinoslav, Odessa and Poltava as a strong countercurrent to the order of things was observable. There are several groups of Great Russian forces in the Don region, the newspaper says.

PLANS FREE UKRAINE.

New Government Denies It Disregards Rights of Peasants.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—The new Ukrainian Government declares in outlining its program, a dispatch from Kiev reports, that it aims at the establishment of a free, independent, and powerful Ukraine. The main task of the Government, which is characterized as provisional, is to restore order and administer State affairs until the convocation of Parliament.

The Government announces that strong measures will be taken against agitators. It denies that it is serving the interests of large landowners and disregarding those of the peasants.

SEMENOFF ROUTS REDS.

Cossack Chief in Siberia Captures Karimskaya Railroad Junction.

HARBIN, May 11.—The Karimskaya Railway Junction has been captured by General Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevist leader.

Military railroad engineers have been despatched to restore the railway in the rear of the retreating Bolsheviki.

The people in which districts of Siberia are dying of starvation owing to the lack of transportation of foodstuffs.

Caucasus Seeks Peace with Turkey.

MOSCOW, May 10, (Associated Press.)—The Caucasus Government has proposed peace negotiations. Foreign Minister Tchitcherin is informed by the Turkish Government. Turkey, acting with Germany, has insisted that the Caucasus Government send its delegates to Batoum.

FIVE U-BOATS SUNK IN A SINGLE WEEK

Two Large Ones Among Them—Average Weekly Sinkings Show Great Increase.

LONDON, May 15.—The Evening Standard says that in a recent week no fewer than five German submarines are definitely known to have been sunk. These included two large U-boats.

The average weekly sinkings, the paper adds, are not so high as that, but the rate shows a great improvement over that of six months ago.

Asked in the House of Commons today by Robert P. Houston for information as to our successful operations in capturing enemy submarines around the coast during the last three weeks, Thomas J. Macnamara, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty, made this reply:

"On the whole, the general trend of the submarine warfare has progressed quite satisfactorily since the 1st of January.

"News from neutral countries and the increased boastfulness and public disclaimers of the enemy are proof of our recent success; but the Admiralty is adverse to stating results, good or bad, of a short period.

"The total number of British steamers attacked by submarines which escaped uninjured from Jan. 1 to April 30 was 172."

The British Admiralty restrictions on navigation in the northern part of the North Sea, in consequence of the laying of a great mine field for the purpose of foiling submarines, became operative today, and hereafter all shipping in that era must comply with stringent regulations, or ignore them at their own peril.

After dark no ship will be allowed within the prescribed area, which lies between the coasts of Norway and Scotland, and any vessel finding itself there half an hour after sunset must anchor in accordance with the admiralty's direction.

The vast barrier, which seems to have been over-estimated in extent in earlier reports, is now said to cover approximately 22,000 square miles.

Many details obviously cannot be divulged, and some of those printed appear to be based on assumptions by non-official experts; but it is generally accepted that the barrier is designed to fence in as far as possible U-boats and other enemy craft in the northern end of the North Sea in the same manner as the barrier across the Straits of Dover already effectively blocks their access to the Channel. It is remarked that if the barrier is to exclude submarines, the mines must have been laid at an unusual depth to cover the limit of the average submarine's diving capacity.

GERMAN NET LOSSES 5,000,000 TO JAN. 31

4,456,961 in Killed and Prisoners Alone, Plus Deaths from Illness, at Sea and in Colonies.

Karl Bleibtreu, the German military statistician, writing in Das Neue Europa of April 22, gives the German losses from Aug. 2, 1914, to Jan. 31, 1918, as 4,456,961 men. His figures deal exclusively with those killed in action or taken prisoners. They are official from Aug. 1914, till July 31, 1917, and are then estimated to Jan. 31, 1918. His figures and comment read:

August	172,500	November	93,000
September	214,500	December	80,200
October	139,600

February	39,000	May, June, and
March	39,900	July	154,850
(Total, 7 months)			320,450

These figures give, on the western front, from Aug. 2, 1914, to July 31, 1917, an aggregate of 2,604,961 casualties.

EASTERN FRONT.

1915	390,000	1917	261,250

This gives a total from Aug. 2, 1914, to July 31, 1917, of 1,851,550, and for the two fronts combined of 4,456,511.

From Aug. 1, 1917, to Jan. 31, 1918, Herr Bleibtreu estimates the total losses on both fronts at 367,450, making in all 4,456,961 men.

In adding those who died from illness or wounds, the losses resulting from the colonial and maritime fighting, as well as in the noncombatant and auxiliary services, not comprised in the preceding enumeration, the grand total considerably exceeds 5,000,000.

TWO MINISTERS RESIGN IN ITALY

Heads of Munitions and Transport Departments Are Out—Places Filled.

ROME, May 15.—General Dallolio, Minister of Munitions, and Signor Bianchi, Minister of Transport, have resigned.

Senator Giovanni Villa has been appointed Minister of Transport, while the Minister of War will take charge temporarily of the Ministry of Munitions.

LUXURY TAX A SUCCESS.

It Yields France $3,000,000 in First Month of Enforcement.

PARIS, May 15.—The new 10 per cent. tax on luxuries produced nearly 15,000,000 francs in the first month during which it was in force.

The Ministry of Finance expresses satisfaction over this outcome, as it was achieved despite the fact that many persons anticipated payments for goods in order to avoid the tax, while many others postponed payments, hoping that the tax would be repealed, as there has been considerable agitation against it. As an additional handicap upon receipts, the month included the Easter holidays, when business was dull.

Lend $3,000,000 More to Serbia.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Serbia received another credit of $3,000,000 from the Treasury today, making her total indebtedness to the United States $9,000,000 and the total of all the allies $5,768,850,000.

50,000 SOLDIERS IN CHORUS.

Mme. Schumann-Heink Leads Singing of National Hymn at Camp Dix.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., May, 15.—Fifty thousand soldiers who are awaiting transportation to France tonight joined Mme. Schumann-Heink in the singing of the national anthem and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" in the amphitheatre of the Y. M. C. A. stadium here. The singing was heard in every barracks in the camp by sentries left on guard there, and a mile away officers and soldiers heard the roll of the 50,000 voices and stood at attention until the chorus was finished. Many other airs, some of them the anthems of the Allies, and others old American favorites, were sung by Mme. Schumann-Heink. W. Stanley Hawkins, the song master at the camp, said he had no doubt that the Kaiser heard the singing above the noise of the guns.

CONCRETE SHIP A SUCCESS

The Faith Will Begin at Once to Take on Cargo.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15.—The 7,500-ton concrete steamer Faith, the first of its kind and tonnage constructed in this country, had a successful trial trip today at sea off San Francisco. A wireless message sent from the steamer by W. Leslie Comyn, President of the San Francisco Shipbuilding Company, said:

"The Faith is proving herself the equal, if not the superior, of any steel ship of similar size and equal power."

The Faith will begin at once loading a cargo of salt for a North Pacific Coast port, and will return with coal.

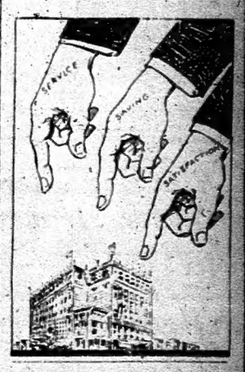
We Sell Dependable Merchandise at Prices Lower Than Any Other Store, but for Cash Only.



Three Testimonials:

SAVING

Commander Booth of the Salvation Army approached the superintendent of our main floor, not so very long ago, with the unsolicited information about the prices of our merchandise as compared with those of several of the larger stores in the city with whom the Salvation Army dealt, to the effect that in this store the commander could, notwithstanding a 10% discount given by these other houses, make a bigger saving. We give discount to NO ONE.

SERVICE

Would it interest you to know that only this past week a well known woman who has just turned over her country home to the Government for war purposes, wishing to furnish it accordingly, asked us to extend to her the discount privilege as a special patriotic contribution on our part? We refused her request to her entire satisfaction on the sensible grounds that it would be an empty honor to set aside a fundamental principle of our establishment and sell to the Government at a special discount under prices already lower than those of our competitors. And She Made Her Purchases Here.

SATISFACTION

A woman bought a mahogany electric table lamp. Somehow the wires inside it became crossed and the fire which resulted cost her considerable. She could not remember where she bought the lamp, but recollected seeing like ones in this store. The store received her complaint, but we were obliged to ask for the evidence (the iron tube which runs through all Our Lamps in compliance with the insurance laws), which must have been saved from the fire. Nothing in Her Lamp remained but Ashes. In fact, we soon realized that the burned lamp had not been supplied with the iron tube. The woman told us that she had accounts at two other stores, and to make our position sound we sent to these stores and bought lamps similar to the one burned. We cut them open along with one of our own, at our own expense. Then the woman took her complaint to one of the two other stores.

THE POINT:

If it's a case of getting satisfaction you will always find it in this store.

SLUMBER UNDER FIRE BECOMES A HABIT

SUMMONED TO DO HIS BIT

By FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

[Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.]

[SIXTH ARTICLE.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES UNDER GENERAL FOCH IN FRANCE, May 15.—Returning to the battalion headquarters at night by a route apparently as popular to the German artillery as the one used in the forenoon, we found the telephone switchboards in full operation in a subcellar and headquarters mess established in a clean kitchen above ground. The food was served in the kitchen, and we noticed that one door had suffered some damage which had caused it to be boarded up, and that the plaster of the ceiling of the room was full of fresh holes and rents in a dozen places. At every shock to the earth a little stream of oats would trickle through the holes from the attic above. These, falling down an officer's neck in the midst of a meal, would have no effect other than causing him to call for his helmet to ward off the cereal rain.

We learned more about the sinister meaning of that broken door and the holes in the ceiling when it became necessary later in the evening to move mess to a safer location. The kitchen was located just thirty yards back of a certain crossroad, and an unhealthy number of German shells that missed the intersection caused too much interruption in our cook's work. We found that this mess room was vacant by reason of the fact that it had become too unpleasant for the French officers, who had relinquished it the day before. We followed suit and were not surprised when an infantry battalion mess followed us into the kitchen, and just one day later, to the hour, followed us out of it.

Lying on the floor in a chalk cellar that night and listening to the sounds of arriving shells on nearby cross roads and battery positions, we estimated how long it would be before this little village would be completely leveled to the ground. Already the gables were disappearing from houses, sturdy chimneys were toppling and stone walls were showing jagged gaps. One whole wall of the village school had crumbled before one blast, so that now the wooden desks and benches of the pupils and their books and paper were exposed to view from the street. On the blackboard was a penmanship model which read: "Let no day pass without having saved something."

It is strange that sleep comes in surroundings not unlike the interior of a boiler factory, but it does. I heard of no man who slept in the cellars benpath our village that night being disturbed by the pounding of shells and the jar of the ground, both or which were ever present to the dormant senses. Strange still was the fact that at midnight, when the shelling almost ceased for a small interval, almost every man in the command was aroused by the sudden silence. When the shelling was resumed, sleep returned.

"When I get back home on the farm outside Chicago," said one officer, "I don't believe I will be able to sleep unless I get August to stand under my window and shake the undershoot all night."

It is remarkable how a tired human under such conditions can turn off the switch on an energetic imagination and resign himself completely to fate. In those cellars that night every man knew that one direct hit by a 210 German shell on his particular cellar would mean "taps" for everybody in the cave. Such a possibility demands considerable action in the slowest moving minds. Mentalities and morale of varying caliber cogitate upon this matter at varying lengths, but I doubt if there is much difference in the conclusion arrived at. This soliloquy produces one vital decision: that if one particular shell is to come into your particular abode, there is nothing you can do to keep it out.

It must have been 3 o'clock in the morning when a sputtering motorcycle came to a stop in the shelter of our cellar door, and the gas guard standing there exchanged words with some one. It ended in the sound of hobnails on the stone steps as a dispatch rider descended, lighting his way down the gray shaft with an electric pocket lamp.

"What is it?" inquired the Major, awakening and rolling over on his side.

"Just came from regimental headquarters," said the messenger. "I'm carrying orders on to the next town. The Adjutant gave me this letter to deliver to you, sir. The Adjutant's compliments, sir, and apologies for waking you; but he said the mail had just arrived and the envelope looked important, and he thought you might like to get it right away."

H-mm-m," said the Major, weighing the official looking envelope in one hand and observing both the American stamps in one corner and the numerous addresses by which the missive had been forwarded. He tore off the end and extracted a sheet which he unfolded and read while the messenger waited at his request. I was prepared to hear a promotion order from Washington, and made ready to offer congratulations. The Major smiled and tossed the paper over to me, at the same time reaching for notebook and fountain pen.

"Hold the light for me," he said to the messenger as he sat on the edge of the bed and began writing. "This is urgent, and I will make answer now. You will mail it at regimental headquarters."

The stationery bore the heading of an alumni association of a well-known Eastern university. The contents ran as follows:

Dear Sir: What are you doing for your country? What are you doing to help win the war? While our brave boys are in France facing the Kaiser's shells and gas, the Alumni Association has directed me as secretary to call upon all old boys of the University and invite them to do their bit for Uncle Sam. We ask your subscription to a fund which we are raising to send cigarettes to the young students of the university who are serving with the colors and who are so nobly maintaining the traditions of our Alma Mater. Please fill out the inclosed blank, stating your profession and present occupation.

Fraternally yours,
————, Secretary.

The Major was watching me with a smile as I concluded:

"Here's my answer," he said, reading from a note book leaf:

Your letter reached me tonight in a warm little village in France. With regard to my present profession will inform you that I am an expert in ammunition trafficking and am at present occupied in exporting large quantities of shells to Germany over the air route. Please find inclosed check for 50 francs for cigarettes for the youngsters, who, as you say, are so nobly upholding the sacred traditions of our school. After all, we old boys should do something to help along the cause.

Yours to beat the Kaiser,

Major ——, Field Artillery, U. S. A., on the Front in France.

"I guess that ought to hold them," said the Major as he folded the letter and addressed an envelope. It rather seemed to me it would, but before I could finish the remark the Major was back asleep in his blankets.

General Pershing Reports 121 Casualties, Making Total of 5,682 in Overseas Army

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The War Department today made public a list of 121 casualties in the American army abroad, bringing the total from the beginning to 5,682. OUR AIRMEN DOWN THREE MACHINES

Peterson passed him and looped again, with his machine gun going. He got ahead of the German, who swerved quickly, but Peterson's stream of bullets literally severed one of the wings of the German machine, and it fell with the severed wing fluttering after. Peterson had brought down both German fliers in five minutes.

Within the hour Captain Kenneth Marr had brought down a German biplane machine.

The impressive decoration ceremony took place on the American field and the honors were conferred by a French army instead of by a French corps.

The ceremony brought the first news of the fate of Captain Norman Hall, who was missing after a fight four days ago. He and Lieutenant Charles Chapman Read were reported as dead on the field of honor and the cross was awarded to them. Others Americans to be awarded the Croix de Guerre with palms were Lieutenant Eddie Rickenbacher and Lieutenant James Meissner. Both of them recently brought down German machines under exceptional circumstances.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 15 (Associated Press.)—Captain David Peterson of Honesdale, Penn., who brought down two enemy aviators today was one of five men who were decorated. The others were Captain Norman Hall, Lieutenant Charles Chapman, who is missing; Lieutenant Edward V. Rickenbacher, the former automobile racer, and Lieutenant James Meissner.

Major Robert B. Paddock of the Signal Corps has been recommended for the War Cross. Recently under terrific shell fire he made an inspection of the wire communications, which was not expected of him because of his rank. He discovered the wire cut by the enemy and repaired it, being wounded in the leg while doing so. He is a native of Wyoming.

Sergeant W. B. Connell of Pittsburgh, Penn., and Sergeant H. R. Webb of Monroe, Utah, members of the Signal Corps, have won the War Cross for conspicuous bravery in repairing wires under a heavy shell and gas attack. Both are now in the hospital.

One of the American reconnoissance airplanes late yesterday afternoon from an altitude of about 400 yards fired upon German trenches, in which there were a number of the enemy, with a machine gun.

The indications today pointed to the possibility that the American biplane, which suddenly dropped out of the clouds yesterday, killing the two men in it, was shot down by an enemy machine, for it was established that the engine of the biplane was running at full speed when it struck the ground.

A heavy barrage was laid down by the Germans on American positions northwest of Toul this morning, but no infantry attack developed. The Americans in the line were ready for the enemy at all times during the firing.

There was a general movement behind the German lines today, perhaps owing to heavy casualties inflicted by the American artillery. The air activities were above normal, the weather being ideal.

TELLS OF UPTON MURDERS.

Negro Soldier Now Awaiting Trial in Military Prison.

After he had signed a confession that he killed Private Michael Maloney of the Second Outgoing Casuals and Mrs. J. Harrity of 30 Fourth Street, a visitor to Camp Upton on May 5, while he was on guard duty at the camp, Private Layton James, a negro member of the 367th Infantry, was taken from the Third Branch Detective Bureau last night to a military prison to await trial by court-martial. Army officers took James away manacled and under a heavy guard.

James told officers that he was on guard duty near the edge of the woods when he saw Maloney and Mrs. Harrity walking there. When he saw Maloney leave for a few minutes he started to talk to Mrs. Harrity. Maloney had his hand on his pistol holster when he returned, James said, and the sentry began firing in the belief that Maloney intended to shoot. James said that he was forced to kill Mrs. Harrity as she was kneeling over the body of Maloney, because he knew that she would tell about the crime.

James said he then ran through the woods and got back into the camp by another road. His inquiries about the cause of the commotion prevented the fastening of suspicion upon him immediately, and he was assigned to stand guard over the bodies while a search of the wood was made by other soldiers.

Although the authorities say that James can hardly read or write, and was a laborer in a shipyard at Newport News when he was drafted last October, he is devoutly religious, and placed his hand on his Bible when he swore to the confession of the details of the murder. He was held for examination after another negro, accused of the crime, said that he had seen James run through the woods.

AMERICANS MADE UP BANNER CAREY UNIT

300 Railway Engineers Fought in Volunteer Force Which Plugged British Gap.

CHIEF WAS COMMANDEERED

Passing in Auto, He Was Called in After Leader Collapsed—Outwitted the Germans.

LONDON, May 14. (Associated Press.)—The banner company of "Carey's Detachment" which, under Brig. Gen. Sanderman Carey, held an important gap in the Fifth British Army in the first week of the German offensive, was made up of 300 American railway engineers. Like all the others of the famous "nondescripts," which included Canadian and British supposedly noncombatant units, the Americans were volunteers.

The American engineers won quite a reputation for the manner in which they handled machine guns, a weapon entirely new to the road and railway builders.

A disastrous-looking gap appeared in the Fifth Army south of Hamel in the later stages of the opening battle. The Germans had crossed the Somme at Hamel and had a clear path for a sweep southwestward.

No troops were available to throw into the opening. A certain Brigadier General was commissioned by Major Gen. Gough, commander of the Fifth Army, to gather up every man he could find and to "hold the gap at any cost." The General called upon the American and Canadian engineers, cooks, chauffeurs, road workmen, anybody he could find; gave them guns, pistols, any available weapon, and rushed them into the gap in trucks, on horseback, or on mule-drawn limbers.

Confiscated Machine Guns.

A large number of machine guns from a machine gun school near by were confiscated. Only a few men, however, knew how to operate the weapons, and they had to be worked by amateurs with one "instructor" for every ten or twelve guns. The Americans did especially well in handling this arm.

For two days the detachment held the mile and a half gap. At the end of the second day the commander, having gone forty-eight hours without sleep, collapsed. The situation of the detachment looked desperate.

While all were wondering what would happen next, a dusty automobile came pounding along the road from the north. It contained Brig. Gen. Carey, who had been home on leave and who was trying to find his headquarters.

The General was commandeered by the detachment and he was found to be just the commander needed. He is an old South African soldier of the dare-devil type. He is famous among his men for the scrapes and escapades of his schoolboy life as well as for his daring exploits in South Africa.

Carey took the detachment in hand and led it in a series of attacks and counterattacks which left no time for sleeping and little for eating. He gave neither his men nor the enemy a rest, attacking first on the north, then in the centre, then on the south—harassing the enemy unceasingly with the idea of convincing the Germans that a large force opposed them.

Whenever the Germans tried to feel him out with an attack at one point, Carey parried with a thrust somewhere else, even if it took his last available man, and threw the Germans on the defensive.

Hungry for Punishment.

The spirit of Carey's troops was wonderful. The work they did was almost supernatural. It would have been impossible with any body of men not physical giants, but the Americans and Canadians gloated in it. They crammed every hour of the day full of fighting. It was a constantly changing battle, kaleidoscopic, free-for-all, catch-as-catch-can. The Germans gained ground. Carey and his men were back at them, hungry for more punishment.

It was fortunate that Carey's supply of ammunition was well-nigh inexhaustible, for he had a big ammunition dump right behind him. There was also a good backing of field artillery and the 33d supported him loyally, firing mostly with open sights.

Had the Germans been able to bring entirely fresh troops against it the detachment might not have been able to hold out for six days as it did. The detachment took its place in the line just at the moment when the Germans had used up all their reserves and the enemy did not have any fresh divisions to throw against them.

At the end of the sixth day, dog-tired and battle-worn, but still full of fight, the detachment was relieved by a fresh battalion which had come up from the rear.

PERSHING TO LEAD MIXED DIVISION

ers face recurrent reports of a new drive on the Italian front.

The information that the brigaded allied divisions in the west probably will be placed under the command of General Pershing when the numbers of American troops contained in them predominate, was taken to mean that the same principle would operate when the predominating numbers were French or British.

As giving the view of the allied military experts on this plan, a high officer in the service of one of the powers at war with Germany today gave these opinions to The Associated Press:

"From the news received and from the knowledge of conditions as they were when I recently left France, I cannot believe that the situation is so completely in hand as to warrant any slackening off in the rushing over of American troops.

"Even should this supposition be correct, it would be a great military error to work on such a thesis. There has been no more insidious propaganda than that which tends to seduce popular opinion in the Entente countries into a false sense of security. What is being written today about the Germans having used up all their reserves and having staked their all on victory or defeat has been written almost literally, almost word for word, at every crisis since the beginning of the war. The results have often been to delay preparation and to procrastinate in the carrying out of measures, which eventually were forced to be adopted.

"An incident such as the Ottawa incident is one that might be seized with avidity by the enemy to cause the slowing up in the flow of American troops and to cause argument and feeling about a matter upon which there seems to be perfect accord.

"I cannot see that the statement as published in Ottawa in any way alters the plans for building up a big independent American army as popularly understood here. It seems to me that it is absolutely essential that the officers and noncommissioned officers now en route for France should be given war experience in order that they may form the nucleus upon which the great American army will be built which is to take the field, we hope, as an independent unit in the Spring.

"This arrangement would appear to satisfy both sides of the argument, if the case admits any argument, because not only would the American Army be expedited as an independent unit as shown above, but the supply of the American reinforcements at the present moment would be bound to take some of the burden off the shoulders of the British and French, to say the least of it, and might possibly save a situation should it arrive.

"In war there is nothing certain, and a large number of American troops actually over in France and ready to fight within the next few months would seem to me to be worth five times the number which would go to make up an army of the future, as seems to be the desire of those responsible for the Ottawa statement. Of one thing I feel convinced, that the prestige among the nations of the world gained by America's spontaneous offering of her troops to France and England in the first days of the crisis will be one of the greatest things known to history, and is of far more spiritual importance now than fifty victories next year.

"One idealistic thought like Lincoln's at Gettysburg is worth twenty-five Waterloos. Thoughts and speeches in themselves do not win wars, but had there been no speeches there would have been no Waterloos. It would be interesting to know what General Foch thinks upon the subject, as it would appear to us that that is the only thing that counts at this time.

"The French, British, and Americans are out to win the war as quickly as possible, and it does not matter one little bit who does it as long as it is done, and the time cannot be far distant when, possibly, French and British troops may be brigaded under American commanders."

LIEUT. CONN, WOUNDED, WAS ARCHITECT HERE

Second Lieutenant Robbins L. Conn, who is reported slightly wounded in yesterday's list from General Pershing, is a son of Mrs. Martha Scudder Conn of 70 West Forty-sixth Street, New York. He was an architect and was accepted for the first officers' training camp at Plattsburg. Lieutenant Conn, his mother said, was graduated from the Beaux Arts in this city, being the honor man in a class of more than 700. He is a veteran of the Seventh Regiment.

Private Peter J. Bohan, reported wounded in action, is a member of the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division, the command of which the old 69th Regiment is the backbone. He has a twin brother, Thomas, also in the 165th. The brothers came to this country three years ago from Ireland and enlisted in the Sixty-ninth when that regiment was ordered to the Mexican border in 1916. Peter was a bookkeeper at the Hotel Biltmore when he enlisted for the war with Germany. He and his brother lived with their uncle, Joseph Keller, a builder, at 1,444 Seventy-fifth Street, Brooklyn.

Corporal Patrick Farrell, reported killed, was also of the 165th Infantry. He was a member of Company G and enlisted in the old 69th a few days after Congress declared war. He was 30 years old and had been employed by the American Can Company.

Corporal Bernard Loughlin, slightly wounded, is said to be in the Rainbow Division. His home is in Plainfield, N. J., and he enlisted in New York in the first week of the war. He is 19 years old.

General Pershing, in his telegraph list of those killed in action on May 8, gave the name of Private Patrick L. Morahan, Company H, 165th Infantry. Morahan was one of a large number of bellboys employed in the Biltmore and Manhattan Hotels who were called into the service.

Private John Duhig, reported dead of disease, lived at 425 West Fifty-sixth Street. He was an old 69th man, and went to France with the Rainbow. His parents live in Ireland.

Private Stanford M. Grant, who died of disease, was 20 years old, and enlisted in November in Company G, 15th Infantry. Before that he was employed as an elevator operator in the Pittsburgh Glass Company's plant at Third Avenue and Pacific Street, Brooklyn.

Announcement Regarding Red Cross Week

May 20th to 27th

The Second Red Cross War Fund Committee of Greater New York appeals to the citizens for contributions to the Red Cross under the following plans:

1. TEAMS CAMPAIGN—31 teams, with ten members each, have been formed in Manhattan. Each team has been given the names of 800 persons upon whom they will call for contributions. Similar teams have been formed in other boroughs. Pledges may be made payable during a period of four months, July 1st, August 1st, September 1st and October 1st.
Headquarters:—Woolworth Building. Telephone Barclay 8400.

2. CORPORATIONS CAMPAIGN — Committees in various trades in all boroughs will appeal for contributions from corporations in their respective trades, each trade reporting through the Corporation Committee of its borough.
Headquarters:—1 Madison Avenue. Telephone Gramercy 6636.

3. HOUSE TO HOUSE CAMPAIGN—25,000 workers in Greater New York will conduct a house to house canvass, including offices and small stores, seeking contributions of $1 to $100 to the Red Cross War Fund. Contributions may be in cash or in pledges covering four months.
Headquarters:—1 Madison Avenue. Telephone Gramercy 6152.

4. INDUSTRIAL CAMPAIGN—Committees in various trades in all boroughs will present an opportunity to the employees in factories and places of business employing more than 50 persons to make weekly or monthly contributions to the Red Cross War Fund for a period of one year, all contributions payable through the employer.
Headquarters:—120 Broadway. Telephone Rector 7600.

5. PROFIT SHARING DAYS CAMPAIGN—Trade committees have been organized so as to afford all retail stores of the city an opportunity to contribute 10% of their gross sales on a certain day during Red Cross Week to the War Fund. The campaign in Brooklyn is known as Retailers' Division, and it is asking for a percentage of sales for the entire week.
Headquarters:—5 West 34th St. Telephone Greeley 4319.

In the House to House Canvass a special subscription book entitled "Your Opportunity" has been issued to each authorized worker, in which all persons making contributions or pledges should sign their names. This book contains the following statement to the public:

"No money should be paid to any person other than an authorized worker, who will wear an official Red Cross badge and carry an official card of authority bearing the worker's signature, and countersigned by the Chairman of the War Fund Committee.

ANY SOLICITATIONS PRIOR TO MONDAY, MAY 20TH, ARE UNAUTHORIZED.

ANY SOLICITATIONS AT ANY TIME BY ANY PERSON UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE ARE FORBIDDEN.

NO MONEY SHOULD BE PAID TO ANYONE WHO IS NOT AN OFFICIAL WORKER CARRYING FULL AUTHORITY OF THE WAR FUND COMMITTEE.

TAUSCHER SHOWED RIFLES HIDDEN HERE

WOULD AID THE REBELS

Plan Was, He Testifies, for the Weapons to Fall Into Hands of the Revolutionists.

The hearing which Attorney General Lewis is conducting, at the request of the Federal Government, in order to establish the truth of the report, current at various times since the outbreak of the European war, that Germans have a vast amount of small arms and ammunition hidden in this country, was continued at 51 Chambers Street yesterday. That many rifles, most of them of the Mauser type, were owned or under control of Germans, or persons in sympathy with their cause, is the belief of many Federal officials who in the last three years have been engaged in a fruitless search to find these weapons.

Testifying at yesterday's hearing, Ivan Narodny, a Russian, who said his sympathies were with the revolutionary element in Russia, swore that he had conferred with Hans Tauscher, the former agent of the Krupps, and also with Freiherr von Gersdorff, regarding the rifles, and had been assured by both that they did exist and that it was possible to supply them to the revolutionary element to make war on the Czar, but that they could not be sold to the Russian Government to use against the Germans. Narodny said that some of the rifles which, he added, were stored in New Jersey were shown to him.

Willard G. Stanton, the first witness called yesterday, said that he had been told about three different lots of rifles—one of 100,000, another of 267,000, and the third of 200,000. He was unable to close any contracts, he added, for the purchase of these guns. The rifles were not shown to him by the alleged agents of the owners.

William F. Horne of Mount Vernon followed Mr. Stanton on the stand. He said that in the late Fall or early Winter of 1916 he met Mr. Edwards of the National City Bank, who was at that time, according to Narodny, representing somebody with cartridges to sell. Later he met a Mr. Harris and a Mexican of the name of Urquidi, the latter said to be a close adviser of Francisco Villa, and with them went to the Hotel Netherland and conferred with Joseph B. Headley.

"Mr. Headley assured us," Mr. Horne testified, "that he could deliver the guns if a bona fide responsible purchaser was found. Later we were informed that 20,000 guns were stored in this vicinity. Mr. Harris informed me that the guns were within a few hours of New York City."

Narodny Describes Negotiations.

Ivan Narodny, the witness who brought in the names of Tauscher, Mme. Gadski-Tauscher, his wife, and Freiherr von Gersdorff was the next witness called by the Attorney General. He said that he had heard of rifles and had cabled to A. Bodisco, then a Municipal Director of Petrograd, concerning the matter, and Bodisco, after a conference with the then Russian Minister of War, has cabled back that Russia needed and wanted them if they were to be had. After telling of his introduction to Gustav Luessing, who is said to have passed as the representative of the owners of the rifles, Narodny continued:

"I was introduced in the Fall of 1914 to Captain Hans Tauscher, the German munitions expert, and the husband of Mme. Gadski, the opera singer. I had previously met Mme. Gadski, and it was Mme. Gadski who told me that her husband, Captain Tauscher, wished to meet me. So I was introduced to Tauscher, and after a short conversation Tauscher broached the subject of the guns. Captain Tauscher asked me if Russia needed guns, and I replied that I could not personally answer the question, but that I had a friend, an Attaché of the Russian Embassy, who could answer the question, and that I could communicate with that friend. The friend I referred to was Captain Vassiliev, then the Naval Attaché of Russia in this country.

"I thought it rather strange that Tauscher wanted to sell these guns to Russia, and so I asked him if he thought it was exactly the proper thing for him, an enemy of Russia, to try and sell the guns to a country with which Germany was at war.

"At any rate, I communicated with Captain Vassiliev, and he replied that before considering the matter he would have to know what kind of guns they were, who owned them, and so on. Subsequent to this I again met Captain Tauscher and told him that I thought Russia was interested in the proposition. He then informed me that he did not know whether they could be sold to Russia or not, but he assured me that the guns were in existence. In order to convince me that the guns did exist, he said he would show me some of them.

"Tauscher said that a German officer named Hansen or Muck, I have forgotten which, would take me to a place where some of the guns were stored. A date for the inspection was arranged, and on the day in question Tauscher and I and the German officer dined at the Ritz or the St. Regis. I am not certain which, but I think it was the St. Regis, for Mme. Gadski lived there at that time.

"After dinner we went in an automobile to New Jersey, the machine belonging to Tauscher. We drove for about an hour and a half or two hours and arrived at a place where I was permitted to inspect several of the guns. I was told that the number stored in that place was about 100,000.

"I reported back to Vassiliev that I had seen some of the guns and after a time he notified me that I was persona non grata as a representative of the then Russian Government and added that anyway if Russia bought the guns they would probably be sunk on the way to Russia."

Narodny said that in a conversation with Tauscher he learned that the German, who was then the Krupp agent in the United States, had rifles in this country which were intended for Mexico and Central America. Tauscher, he added, told him that some of the guns were for Huerta.

"Was there anything said about a shipment of these rifles to Vera Cruz?" Deputy Attorney General Becker asked.

"Yes, there was, but I forget the number of rifles said to have been shipped."

"What kind of guns did you see in New Jersey?"

"They were absolutely new rifles."

Germany Would Arm Rebels.

"Who is Fretherr von Gersdorff?"

"He is a German. I went to the same German university with him. Gersdorff on one occasion showed me a letter from the German Crown Prince. With regard to the rifles said to be stored here, Gersdorff said that he thought it entirely possible to deliver the guns to revolutionists, who were bent on the overthrow of the Russian autocracy. He suggested that it might be well to arrange a conference in Sweden between representative German Socialists and representatives of the Russian revolutionists. In case an uprising was started he said Germany would give the Russian rebels the rifles for nothing. He said that if the revolution was successful it would then be possible to negotiate a separate peace between Russia and Germany. I told him that would make me a traitor and it was out of the question."

"Tauscher was not willing to sell these rifles to the Russian Government to be used against Germany, was he?"

"No, he was not. He was willing ostensibly to sell them to Russia, the understanding being that the revolutionists would get them. It was said that they would be sunk rather than permit them to fall into the hands of the Imperial Government."

Narodny said he was also assured by a Countess von Stevers, whom he described as a Russian noblewoman, that the rifles were here. The Countess, he added, was a personal friend of Mme. Gadski. Gustav Luessing told him, Narodny said, that the rifles were owned by German-Americans.

"Did you ever say that you had been informed that Herman A. Metz knew anything about these guns?" Mr. Becker asked.

"No. I remember that Gersdorff mentioned Mr. Metz's name once, but in what connection I do not remember. I asked Luessing if Mr. Metz knew anything about them, and he replied that he might and he might not."

Joseph H. Headley, when examined, said that he knew nothing about the rifles, and that anybody who testified otherwise was in error.

Gustav Luessing was called to the stand near the close of the day's hearing. He has been in this country thirty-seven years, and has been mentioned by numerous witnesses as the man who was supposed to represent the owners of the 1,000 Mausers. He denied that he had ever seen the rifles. His examination was brief.

"You have tried to sell these rifles within the last few weeks, have you not?" asked Mr. Becker.

"I have not," he replied, somewhat angrily.

"You will be our first witness a week from today. You will probably be on the stand some time," replied Mr. Becker, as he announced the adjournment.

SHABUOTH BEGINS TODAY.

Religious Ceremonies at Sunset in All Synagogues and Temples.

At sunset this evening the celebration of the Jewish Feast of Shabuoth, the Hebrew Pentecost, will begin with the religious ceremonies appropriate to the occasion at all the orthodox synagogues and the reform temples throughout the world, wherever there is a Jewish community. This festival is also known as the Feast of Weeks, as it is celebrated seven weeks, or really fifty days, after the Passover festival.

GIFT OF POLAND TO BIND AUSTRIA

tions—a participation which was not desired in Berlin circles—was due to the same cause."

Commenting upon the political and military importance of the meeting, the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger says:

"The meeting of the two Emperors at which, as the head of the second largest German Federal State, the King of Bavaria was present, was a world political event of first-rate importance, which in view of the tremendous military strain in the west is particularly calculated to enable us to look forward hopefully, and confidently to further successes for the German sword."

Dispatches received in Zurich from Vienna say that while the German parties in Austria express great satisfaction over the renewal of the alliance with Germany, the Czechs and the South Slavs have declared their intention to offer most determined opposition to the Parliamentary delegations.

Vienna newspapers, according to an Austrian dispatch, welcome the announcement that the Emperors decided upon a deepening of the alliance between the two countries.

"The renewal of the alliance," says the Neues Wiener Tageblatt, "satisfies the political intelligence of Austrians, while at the same time it is the heart's desire of us Germans in Austria."

The newspaper adds that only an alliance with a strong Austria can have a value for Germans in Austria, and that the reconstruction of the alliance with Germany will, therefore, have to be followed sooner or later by the internal reconstruction of Austria. This will serve both for defense and the long-desired peace, internally as well as externally.

The Reichspost says that news that the fundamental guiding lines for a reconstruction of the alliance have already been fixed is encouraging and full of promise. The Neue Freie Presse says that as a result of the experience of the past four painful years the alliance probably will be made general, "as desired by old Emperor William."

AIM AT MITTELEUROPA IN TEUTON AGREEMENT

Stricter Military Obligations Are Said to be Imposed for Twenty-five Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—According to an official French telegram received here today, an effort was made at the conference between Emperors William and Charles to establish a basis for the realization of the so-called Mitteleuropa plan. The dispatch follows:

"According to a telegram from Zurich, the Berlin newspapers indicate that the agreement made at the conference between the Emperors appears to have concerned three points:

"1. The duration of the alliance was fixed for twenty-five years.

"2. Germany and Austria are to sign a military convention imposing upon each much stricter military obligations than did the preceding treaty.

"3. The economic relations will be regulated so as to realize the plan of Mitteleuropa.

"It moreover deals with an agreement purely in theory and principle whose practical realization will necessitate further negotiations still. It is enough, on the other hand, to read the Austrian semi-official note published upon the subject of the interview to realize that at Vienna they desire at the same time to lull the mistrust of the Entente and the suspicions of the non-Germans of the dual monarchy while dwelling upon the defensive character of the agreement and declaring with a certian hypocrisy that this cannot be in opposition to the ideas of the sovereignty of nations.

"It is the same old manoeuvre. To appreciate the worth of such statements one only has to observe that in the same note it is affirmed that the Central Empires were attacked. This gross lie shows the character of this document."

A Zurich dispatch received here reads:

"The Neue Züricher Zeitung has received from Vienna the following information upon the interview of the two Emperors:

"'No formal agreement was signed this time because the moment did not seem opportune. Nevertheless, the direction and basis of a new treaty of alliance were definitely fixed, and it only remains to frame the different clauses as well as to establish the precise form of the continuation of the present alliance and of its extension.'"

A Paris telegram quotes L'Homme Libre as saying in connection with the conference:

"We are told that after the recent German conquest the situation of Europe will be changed completely. They exaggerate. The foundations of Mitteleurope are not so solid as is pretended, and if the union of the Germans of Germany and Austria is established it will clear the situation, for it will inevitably bring with it the rupture of the Austrian equilibrium and the revolt, more or less soon, of the Czech and Jugo-Slav nations. While waiting for the verification of this hypothesis, we shall learn more this time without further ambiguity where the enemies of peace are to be found, and if Germany has just played her last card, as is probable, that does not mean that this makes her the winner of the game."

An official dispatch from Moscow received today stated that a telegram had been received there from Kiev to the effect that the Germans and Austrians had established spheres of influence for the exploitation of the rivers in the Ukraine. A part of the Dnieper was assigned to the Germans and another part of that river as well as part of the Bug River was assigned to the Austrians.

DISSENT IN BOTH EMPIRES.

Liberals and Socialists Alarmed—London Papers Scoff.

LONDON, May 15.—German and Austrian Liberal and Socialist newspapers, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen, are dissatisfied greatly with the far-reaching decision that has been made at German Great Headquarters without the sanction of the Parliaments.

At the meeting of the Emperors, the London Daily Chronicle says, apparently a step was taken toward formally defining and recognizing the subservient relations of the Dual Monarchy toward the German Empire.

"An independent Austria-Hungary," the newspaper adds, "is impossible, chiefly because not one of its constituent nationalities wants it. The Austro-German and Magyar dominant minorities ruling over Slav majorities do not want an independent monarchy, but a monarchy dependent on Germany, which can help them maintain their unnatural position.

"Meanwhile we do well to realize that all attempts, whether in enemy camps or in our own, to trade on the idea of Austria-Hungary as a separate power are profoundly deceptive. 'Austro-Hungarian independence' is a phrase which has only one value, namely, camouflage for German sovereignty over Central Europe."

TRYING TO DIVIDE SLAVS.

Austrian Effort Rebuffed in Bosnia —Starvation in Provinces.

LONDON, May 15.—The Jugoslav movement and its growing political activity have perturbed greatly the bureaucrats in Vienna, according to information received in Serbian quarters here. As a result, they are doing every thing possible to sow discord in the ranks of the Jugoslavs.

For this purpose a new political group has been formed in Bosnia under the leadership of Dr. Pilar, an exponent of Austrian imperialism. The aims of this group are the formation of a Croatian State within the borders of the Austrian Empire, an idea irreconcilable with the ideals of the Croatian, Slovenian, and Serbian peoples, whose only desire is to be united in a free and independent Jugoslav State.

With reference to this new intrigue of the Austrian Government and its failure, the Glasiloboda of Agram says:

"Dr. Pilar invited some thirty-eight of his supporters to a meeting to discuss matters in connection with the formation of a new political party, but to his great disappointment even those men who he thought would share his opinions condemned his action bitterly, calling his leadership and conduct treacherous and unpatriotic. Dr. Pilar was sharply reproached for abandoning the town of Rieka-Fiume to the Magyars and for ignoring the Slovenians and their interests.

"'Go away from us. Your place is not among us, and we do not want to have the Prussians and Magyars as overlords in our State,' they declared."

The Glasiloboda gives a graphic picture of the terrible economic situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, saying that only two provinces in the empire have suffered more than those.

"Those two provinces," it says, "are Galicia and Bukowina, which were the cockpits of great conflicts between the Austrian and Russian armies. Nevertheless, the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina is horrible.

"Entire districts of eastern Bosnia and the whole of the eastern part of Herzegovina are today depopulated and devastated regions which look as if a terrible typhoon had visited them with its devilish destruction. A great number of inhabitants were deported and have since died in internment camps. Those who remained were massacred by Austrian soldiers. In other districts the population is dying of starvation."

TILLMAN BEHIND PRESIDENT

"To Hell with All German Sympathizers," Senator Exclaims.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 15.—"To hell with all German sympathizers and thank God for Woodrow Wilson!" exclaimed Senator Tillman, concluding an address before the State Democratic Convention here today.

The Senator declared he wanted the people of the State to know where he stood on the one issue before them—the war issue.

"As your Senator now and as Chairman of the great Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate, I am proud to say to you that when the test came those of us connected with the navy could truthfully tell our people, 'All is well' with the fleet,'" he said.

DOUBT IN GERMANY ON MONARCHS' DEAL

folly" of such a scheme as Mitteleuropa. It may bring gold, fame, honor, and so on, he says, but Austria wants meat, copper, wool, and all kinds of raw materials. As prices will be high, she will need money. Already she is burdened as a debtor to Germany alone with a yearly interest amounting to over £700,000,000.

Where will the needful money come from? Harden asks. Not from battlefields or victories, but chiefly from America, and he thinks it conceivable that Austria should long for a peace which will secure for her the friendship of the United States. He adds:

"The dual monarchy is not married to her neighbor. She needs freedom to make agreements with powers which are our enemies but not hers. She needs more than any other people the friendship of America. Austria is not a German State and can never be one, Austria and Hungary know that they have essentially other interests, another spiritual and ideal outlook."

Slav Resentment Deepens.

Austria-Hungary must, in Harden's opinion, be "a bond of States in which each people has liberty of speech and every State free government." He concludes that in Austria the cleavage was never deeper than now between the Germans, sullen in their inherited desire for power, and the impatient, forward-striving Slavs. "Never was resentment so bitter as today," he adds.

Reports from Vienna show that the news of the "strengthened and extended alliance" is not received with the slightest approval by the Slavs and Czechs, who, a Frankfurter Zeitung dispatch declares, will fight it with all their strength. The Poles are said to be rather pleased, as they think it means an early Polish settlement on the lines of union with Austria, but it is doubtful if that pleasure is general.

AUSTRIANS CALL WAR "CRAZY."

Belief That Ruler Is Seeking Peace Sustains the People.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—The Tijd prints the following significant and much-censored letter from its Vienna correspondent:

"The reason why all classes of the population have regretted Count Czernin's departure (from the Foreign Office) is that in him they saw the herald of peace, and the people want peace above all. This is not surprising, because the misery is extreme. (This part censored.) The people will probably hold out through the next difficult months until the Ukraine grain arrives in sufficient quantities. But it is natural that everybody yearns for peace (censored.) Hundreds of times daily one hears the lament, 'How long is this crazy destruction to last?'

"Only the conviction that the Emperor honestly desires peace and has given evidence of this in recent incidents keep the people going."

CLEAR FIELD FOR J. H. LEWIS

No Opposition Expected to Renomination of Illinois Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 15.—Following conferences between Illinois Democratic chieftains and national leaders of the party in Washington, an agreement has been reached whereby Senator James Hamilton Lewis probably will be unopposed for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in this State next Fall. The Roger C. Sullivan wing of the Democratic party in Chicago is the only disturbing factor, and between now and the primaries it is deemed probable that the Sullivans will be won over to the support of Lewis.

Ex-Mayor Carter H. Harrison, one of those participating in the conference at Washington, said today he was firmly of the belief that Senator Lewis would be unopposed for the nomination.

On the Republican side there are three candidates for the Senatorial nomination, ex-Governor Charles S. Deneen, Mayor William Hale Thompson and Congressman-at-large Medill McCormick. The indications are that McCormick will get the nomination.

TO BLOCK GERMANS IN PLOT FOR SHIPS

Government Adopts Program to Prevent Foe from Getting Vessels After War.

BILL INTRODUCED IN HOUSE

Gives Shipping Board Power to Pass Upon Requests from Foreign Interests.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A comprehensive program to defeat attempts by German agents to obtain an interest in shipping now being constructed in American yards, and to place contracts for ships which would gain preference over other orders after the war, has been adopted and a thorough investigation started which it is believed will unearth all efforts at intrigue of this nature, which are backed by the Central Powers.

It has been suspected that German capital, in various disguises, has been endeavoring to obtain a foothold in the shipbuilding situation, as in many other industries of the nation. Under the plan adopted, every safeguard will be provided against such an emergency, and indisputable evidence must be submitted to show that German interests are not involved in proposed dealings relating to America's shipping program.

Congress, the Shipping Board, the War Trade Board, and the Alien Property Custodian are all involved in the fight to see that in this direction as well as in all industrial and commercial relations the Central Powers shall be discarded as undesirable. It is reported that the most subtle and questionable attempts have been made by German interests to re-establish themselves and prepare for the future at the expense of the United States and the allied nations.

Broad Program Adopted.

The move now under way to fight the German agents is, in effect, a part of the broader program which has gradually been put into force to strip Germany of financial holdings in America and end any hope it may have had of being able surreptitiously to retain its holdings here and, if possible, add to them, so that it could emerge from the war in a position to take a commanding place in international commercial relations.

The scope of the plans as they affect shipping was made known today when the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, of which Representative John W. Alexander is Chairman, reported favorably a bill giving the Shipping Board unusual powers to prevent foreign interests in any way from obtaining financial holdings in the shipyards or vessels constructed, except with the unqualified permission of the board. The Representative asked that this bill, and another affecting rates, be placed on the calendar as war legislation.

Mr. Alexander explained that the legislation was designed to prevent German capital from obtaining a foothold, and indicated that offers and requests had been made through brokers, some of which had aroused the suspicion that the agents of the Central Powers were at work.

Hundreds of requests, it is said, have come through brokers and others for the right to place contracts for the construction of shipping in American yards as soon as the American war program is completed, whether that point is reached before the war ends or soon after.

While it is admitted that the large majority of these offers, many of which are made in behalf of financial interests of foreign nations, are legitimate and open to the most searching investigation, there is no intention on the part of the Administration to give the German intrigues the slightest loophole for furthering their interests.

Yards under jurisdiction of the Emergency Fleet Corporation—and they include practically every yard of importance in the country—will not be permitted to consider the acceptance of other than Government contracts, at least until it is known that all of America's needs are provided for and that offers which have been made by brokers bear no pro-German taint.

This policy is not aimed at any neutral or allied nation, and applications by these countries for permission to let contracts for ships to be constructed later will receive every consideration.

In carrying forward the program the officials have at their disposal the mass of invaluable information concerning enemy connection with financial interests of all kinds, in this nation and in foreign countries, which has been gathered by the War Trade Board, the Alien Property Custodian, and the allied nations.

It has been announced that the department of the Alien Property Custodian, which has been ridding many of America's industrial interests of the German menace, is prepared to seize any property, shipyard or ship, where it is shown that German agents have succeeded in obtaining an interest, and to take steps to purge the property involved of its undesirable connections.

The Government, through the Shipping Board, now has complete control of and must pass upon all ship contracts before they may be accepted by shipyards, and this power of supervision will be used to the full where occasion is found. The Trading with the Enemy act provides ample power to deal with any combinations which attempt to transact business with enemy interests, and heavy penalties are named.

The more important of the bills which have been reported by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries gives full authority to the Shipping Board to pass upon requests coming from foreign interests with the object of preventing German capital from obtaining, even indirectly, any grip on the shipping interests through the holding of mortgages, stocks, or bonds. Ships built in American yards under the terms of the legislation will not be leased to any corporation influenced by German interests.

Power for Shipping Board.

The Shipping Board is vested with the power of making the decisions involved in order to defeat the efforts of Germany and assure a control of all shipping constructed here by interests in which the Central Powers have no holdings or authority. The legislation is applicable for a reasonable period after the war.

A careful watch on all efforts on the part of Germany to act in the guise of a neutral agency—and these attempts have been made despite the best efforts of neutral Governments to discredit them—is being maintained and a thorough organization is being built up, through the co-operation of all of the Government departments dealing with such matters, by which it is predicted Germany's hold on any of the shipping interests, as well as on other industries, will be broken.

The recent agreements made by the War Trade Board with the allied Governments to fight German efforts to play a part in commercial relations among those nations by having exports and imports favoring the United States carefully vised and purged before production and shipment are permitted, is believed by officials to have gone far to defeat many of the plans which the Germans had prepared.

RESUME WORK FOR ARMY.

Cloth Spongers to Explain Demands to Arbitration Board.

Edward Fillmore, President of the Textile Finishers' Association, announced after a conference at the Manhattan Club yesterday that 350 striking cloth spongers and examiners, working on Government contracts for uniforms, had agreed to return to work pending arbitration of their demands by a Federal arbitration board.

The men, who went on strike last Saturday for an increase of $6 a week, returned to work on the condition that they should receive an increase of $2 a week at once, and that an immediate hearing be held before a Federal arbitration board. Major Rosensohn of the industrial division of the Quartermaster's Department, who came from Washington at the request of Secretary Baker, and Major Charles E. Jones of the Quartermaster's Department in this city attended the conference as Government representatives.

TRY QUAKER TEACHER FOR VIEWS ON WAR

GAVE TO WAR CHARITIES

The case of Mary S. McDowell, a teacher of Latin in the Manual Training High School, Brooklyn, on charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher, was tried yesterday by a committee of the Board of Education consisting of Frank D. Wilsey, George J. Ryan, Joseph Yesta and Mrs. Annie M. Murray. Miss McDowell is a Quaker, and the charges grew out of her religious objections to taking any part in the various war measures. She was represented by Austen G. Fox and John P. Broomell, who were engaged by the Religious Society of Friends to defend her. The society in January last passed a remonstrance against the action of the educational authorities in preferring charges against her, and decided that as it was a purely religious question they would stand by her. It is their intention, if the Board of Education should decide to dismiss her, to carry the case to the State Commissioner of Education, and in the event of his sustaining the board to take the matter up to the United States Supreme Court.

When the trial began, Mr. Fox asked if the committee would render its decision for the entire board, and was assured by Corporation Counsel Charles McIntyre that this would be so. Mr. Fox then moved that the charge against Miss McDowell should be dismissed on the ground that it was purely a religious matter. Chairman Wilsey denied the motion.

Mr. Fox said that his client was a birthright member of the New York Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends commonly known as Quakers, that her father and mother were also birthright members of it, that most of her ancestors for generations had been members of it, and that these ancestors for more than 100 years had been citizens of the United States. One of the cardinal principles of the society was the conviction that all war was immoral and unchristian.

He declared that statements made by Miss McDowell in reply to the interrogations of the Board of Superintendents on Jan. 10, 1918, were in accord with the religious belief and principles of the Society of Friends relative to the subject of war, and that the statements directly expressed the religious belief of Miss McDowell herself.

Mr. McIntyre offered in evidence Miss McDowell's answers to the Superintendents as to her attitude with regard to the war in which she said that she was opposed to it because of her religious convictions; that she did not believe in bearing arms, and that she thought there was another way of meeting the difficulty.

Mr. Fox then called Miss McDowell to the witness chair. He asked her if she had distributed War Thrift Stamps or circulars in the school. She answered that she had done so.

He presented to her a number of checks and she identified them as made out by her for the Armenian sufferers, Red Cross work and other charitable objects.

Miss McDowell said that her salary as teacher amounted to a little more than $203 a month. Mr. McIntyre asked her when she had joined the Red Cross Society, and she said that it was about the time of her suspension from school duty. He wanted to know whether she had refused to teach civics in the school when requested to do so by her Principal. She denied this. She said that she taught Latin, English and patriotism.

Principal Snyder testified that he had requested Miss McDowell to teach citizenship to her pupils and that she had asked that some one else should do so.

DOUBT MISS DEWAR'S DEATH.

Lawyer Obtains No Confirmation from the Washington Authorities.

Frederick W. Marquand, a lawyer at 165 Broadway, expressed yesterday his conviction that Miss Minnie E. Dewar, whose death in France was announced by her father on Monday, was not dead, and that the report of her death had been due to a misunderstanding. Mr. Marquand is a friend of Miss Dewar, and, speaking in behalf of the girl's mother, Mrs. Janet Dewar of 581 North Eighth Street, Newark, said:

"I have received answers from the Bureau of Navigation, the Navy Department, and the Adjutant General's Department to the effect that none of those agencies has a record of Miss Dewar's death. In addition I have cabled, and the War Department has done the same, to France asking information, but as yet have not received a reply. I am positive, however, that inasmuch as Washington has not confirmed the report, Miss Dewar is not dead."

The first news of the killing of the nurse was obtained from her father, John Dewar of 581 Washington Avenue. When reporters visited him on Monday night it was understood that he had received a cable dispatch telling of his daughter's death. Yesterday Mr. Dewar said that it "was all a mistake." A friend in Brooklyn, he said, had received the dispatch and told him about it. He added that the friend in Brooklyn had since told him the report probably was a mistake. He would not disclose the Brooklyn man's name.

COHEN KILLED FOR DEBT.

New Evidence in Murder Case Reaches the District Attorney.

New evidence that has reached the District Attorney in the murder of Harry Cohen, known also as "Harry the Yot," a gambler, who was shot to death in the corridor of the apartment house at 7 West Ninety-second Street, removes the suspicion that the man was slain to prevent him from giving information against gamblers. The motives for the murder, it now appears, were an unpaid gambling loan of $500, borrowed by Cohen, and a personal quarrel concerning a woman, whose name is known to the District Attorney.

This new evidence brings in the names of two other suspects, and indicates that Morris Rothenberg, who has been held in the Tombs for some time on the charge of firing the shot that killed Cohen, had no actual part in the crime. One of the suspects, under arrest at Cleveland on a charge of burglary, has been interviewed by a member of Judge Swann's staff, and his statement, together with other evidence, will be presented to the Grand Jury today.

UPHOLD PRESIDENT WILSON.

Catholic Legion Pledges Its Support to Administration.

Resolutions pledging the support of the Catholic Benevolent Legion to President Wilson in his conduct of the war and urging the support of the army and navy were passed yesterday at the annual meeting of the Supreme Council in Brooklyn. The resolutions assert confidence in ultimate victory and in the disinterestedness of the Administration's war aims and continue:

"Those boys serving the colors have the right to expect that the American people will stand behind them even to the last dollar of treasure that this nation owns." Richard Tippett of Baltimore, newly-elected President, signed the resolutions for transmission to the President.

TEUTONS SCHEMING TO WEAKEN ITALY

HOLT TO GO ON MISSION

Information which has come to the Federal Government within the last twenty-four hours as to the extent and character of German propaganda in Italy against America for the purpose of undermining Italian morale preparatory to a military or peace drive so astounded a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Italy-America Society, held yesterday afternoon in the Lawyers' Club, that immediate steps were taken to meet the emergency, which, according to speakers, is comparable to a military crisis.

The source of the information and some of the most important steps which are to be taken to meet the situation cannot be revealed owing to military exigencies. It was announced, however, that the following action was taken:

1. Hamilton Holt, who is now in London, was directed by cable to proceed immediately to Italy and co-operate with the staff of the Committee on Public Information and with the Italy-America Society to meet the insidious Teuton scheme.

2. The committee favored sending immediately American troops to Italy, preferably Italian-speaking citizens of this country, to march from Sicily to Rome and thence to the battlefront.

3. The appointment of a special economic mission was authorized to take up the task of cementing the friendship of the two countries and to formulate plans for meeting certain economic emergencies due to the war.

4. As a feature of the celebration of Italy-America day on May 24, a nationwide effort will be made to cause citizens of this country of Italian birth to write to their relatives and friends in Italy describing the war preparations of this country and giving a true picture of the loyalty of the larger portion of the foreign-born population here and the whole-hearted and sympathetic attitude of America generally toward Italy and her people. The plan is to make each of these letters practically the beginning of a chain letter, suggesting that upon their receipt in Italy they be immediately transmitted to other friends, with the suggestion that they be still further passed on.

Germans Allege Disloyalty Here.

It was revealed that the State Department has received important reports on the elaborateness of German propaganda in Italy directed against this country. Before the disaster of Caporetto, where the fraternizing of German troops with Italian troops succeeded in breaking down the Italian morale so that the Teutonic forces broke through the Italian lines and caused the sacrifice of an army, German propaganda in Italy was directed against Great Britain. Strenuous efforts were made to drive a wedge between Italy and England by the systematic sowing of suspicion of her ally in the minds of Italians.

This effort on the part of secret German agents and disloyal elements in Italy is directed with renewed emphasis against the United States. The Italian people are being told that America will never get troops in any considerable number to Europe, because the army which is being raised here will be absolutely needed in this country to keep down the foreign born population, which is alleged to be on the verge of revolt.

They are also being told that Italian-born citizens of this county are on the verge of revolt against being forced into the American Army.

Another story is that America was forced into the war by the moneyed interests which had grown fat on profits from the manufacture of munitions and, having lent money to the Allies, forced an unwilling people to fight to protect their interests.

Still another tale is that these interests have no real desire to win the war, but that their purpose is to secure a mortgage on an impoverished Europe and thus monopolize her trade after the war, reaping huge profits from the loans that must be made.

These stories are dressed up with imaginative details, such as that the declaration of war was preceded by a secret visit to the White House by the head of one of the largest banking houses in this country.

Hughes Presides at Meeting.

Charles E. Hughes, President of the Italy-America Society, presided at the meeting, which was called for the purpose of planning final details for the concert and mass meeting to be held at the Metropolitan Opera House on the evening of May 24th, as a climax to New York City's celebration of Italy-America Day.

Others present were William Fellowes Morgan, George F. Baker, Jr., Lindsay Russell, Capt. P. M. Guardabassi, Richard Washburn Child, Dr. Felice Ferrero, Dr. Antonio Stella, J. G. White, Charles B. Alexander, John Poord, Abram I. Elkus and Karl V. S. Howland.

Following the presentation of the alarming reports from Italy, Mr. Russell suggested that the society urge with all possible emphasis the immediate dispatch of American troops to Italy to give the lie direct to one of the most sedulously circulated German fictions.

This suggestion was cordially seconded by Dr. Ferrero, head of the Italian information service in this country. Dr. Ferrero said that no action that could be taken by the authorities here would have a more instantaneous effect on the morale of the Italian people than the march of American troops through that country, and if the march could take the course of Garibaldi's famous advance across Italy the enterprise would still further appeal to the Italian imagination.

There Are Just a Few Who Make Collections Costly

MOST TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBERS pay their bills promptly and the labor expended in collecting the majority of telephone accounts is therefore reasonable.

BUT THERE ARE A NUMBER of subscribers who overlook their telephone bills, who neglect to pay them within the reasonable specified time, and the labor of collecting these accounts is great —probably two or three times as great as that involved in collecting all the accounts that are paid within the desired period.

THE LABOR involved in collecting overdue accounts is labor that would be unnecessary, if all accounts were paid within a reasonable time, and particularly under present war-time conditions, it might better be devoted to other work of value to the community's telephone service.

We are taking this means of placing the facts before telephone subscribers in general and we feel certain that they will co-operate by paying their bills promptly.

Hamilton is Watch of U. S. Mail Aviators

The fastest of fast mails, the U. S. Mail aeroplane route between Washington, Philadelphia, and New York, reckons its flying time on a Hamilton Watch schedule.

The pilots of the first aeroplanes that carried United States mail yesterday between Washington and New York all wore military aviation model Hamilton Watches.

Major R. H. Fleet, Jr., who was in charge of the history-making flights, and Lieutenants Howard P. Culver, Torrey H. Webb, Walter Miller, James C. Edgerton, George L. Boyle, and Stephen Bousale, Jr., all of the Aero Service Signal Reserve Corps, the pilots picked for the initial trips, were presented with their Hamiltons, before the start, by Charles F. Miller, president of the Hamilton Watch Company.

Hamilton Watch

"The Watch of Aeroplane Accuracy"

Known for years as "the watch of railroad accuracy," Hamiltons are carried by the engineers of America's most famous express trains—also by the majority of all train crews on lines having official time inspection.

Now the Hamilton is destined to become the watch of aeroplane accuracy, as well as the watch of railroad accuracy, because of its thoroughly dependable, continuous, uninterrupted service.

Let your next watch be a Hamilton. This perfect timepiece measures exactingly up to every requirement of the modern pace, whether in the air, on the ground, or at sea. If you don't carry a Hamilton you're losing time.

There are 32 Hamilton models to choose from, ranging in style from rugged utility cases to slender objects of extraordinary artistic beauty.

Prices, $28 to $150. Movements $15 ($17 in Canada) and up. Sold by all leading jewelers everywhere. Send today for "The Timekeeper"—the story of Hamilton supremacy.

PRESIDENT TO SPEAK FOR RED CROSS HERE

Will Start Drive for Fund Saturday Night at Metropolitan Opera House.

FIRST ADDRESS SINCE WAR

Corporations May Contribute Legally, Says Morgan J. O'Brien in Opinion to Committee.

President Wilson will start the Red Cross drive in this city with a speech at the Metropolitan Opera House on Saturday night. Word was received last night from Washington by the National Red Cross War Fund Committee, of which Cleveland H. Dodge is Chairman, that the President had decided to accept their invitation. President Wilson has not made an address in this city since the United States has been at war with Germany.

Mr. Dodge will preside at the meeting. The only speaker besides the President will be Henry P. Davison, if he arrives in this country in time from his trip to Europe, where he has been in charge of the activities of the Red Cross.

Ex-Judge Morgan J. O'Brien gave an opinion yesterday that the law authorizing direct gifts by corporations to the Red Cross was constitutional, because such gifts were made for the protection of the corporations' interests. He thus summed up his opinion:

"A war which is aimed at the destruction of our Government is necessarily aimed at the destruction of the interests of our corporations."

The opinion of ex-Judge O'Brien and other eminent lawyers, including Charles Evans Hughes and Richard V. Lindabury, counsel for J. P. Morgan & Co., was obtained by the Red Cross Committee on Corporations to clear all obstacles from the way of making collections amounting to millions of dollars from New York City corporations.

Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers Trust Company, who was one of the speakers at a luncheon to editors of New York City papers at the Bankers' Club yesterday, spoke of the work of the Red Cross in France, which the new $100,000,000 is to maintain and expand, as follows:

"I have seen in France the chains of storehouses, stocked with American food, which could, with present shipping conditions, not be duplicated. In Paris alone there are five storehouses full of staple food, and the value of it is $6,000,000, I am informed. I have seen the dispensaries taking care of mothers and children and aiding the tuberculosis ravages. I have seen the hospitals run by the Red Cross. I have seen the transportation facilities; the social workers and the hotels provided to take care of refugees pending their assignment to different destinations."

The following appreciation of the work of the Red Cross in France from the Parisian newspaper La Presse was received yesterday at the Red Cross headquarters in the Woolworth Building:

"The American Red Cross directs twenty model hospitals, gives assistance to five others, and directs seventy-five dispensaries for the civilian population of France. In addition to this, it supports almost 4,000 hospitals in France and sends surgical dressings, instruments, and various supplies to 1,935 hospitals. Twenty-five canteens serve approximately 3,000,000 soldiers a month. They have given to General Pétain 6,000,000 francs ($1,200,000) to be distributed among the permanently disabled and the wounded soldiers of France and their families."

The participants in the agreement of stores to donate 10 per cent. of one day's receipts to the American Red Cross increased yesterday by B. Altman & Co., A. A. Vantine & Co., Rothenberg & Co., L. W. Blumstein, and the Mark Cross Company in Manhattan, and Abraham & Straus, Frederick Loeser & Co., and A. I. Namm & Son in Brooklyn. The United Cigar Stores Co., the Exchange Buffet, A. Schulte Cigar Co., and the Liggett Drug Stores were among those who entered into the profit-sharing agreement yesterday.

Preparations on a vast scale are being made under the direction of ex-Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson for the great Red Cross parade on Saturday, which is to be the largest ever held by that organization. It was announced that, among the 75,000 who are expected to parade there will be great choruses of women singing as they march, knitting brigades producing socks and mufflers as they move along, Red Cross nurses for home service and for service abroad, wives and mothers of soldiers and sailors, and other classes of women engaging in war service.

Ethan Allen, Director of the Red Cross, designated as an error yesterday a statement sent out several days ago that no person with a German name or German antecedents for three generations back was acceptable for Red Cross work. He said that persons found on investigation to be thoroughly loyal and patriotic were acceptable, regardless of their antecedents. Many persons of German descent, he said, had been approved by the British and French Embassies and sent to France for Red Cross service.

SALVATION ARMY FUND HAS REACHED $150,000

Leaders in Drive Confident That Balance of $100,000 Will Be Raised by Saturday.

A number of large checks yesterday helped swell the total of the Salvation Army collections to $150,000. With $100,000 more to raise by next Saturday the leaders are confident that the total of a quarter of million asked for will be obtained. One of the biggest gifts yet received came to Commander Booth yesterday in the form of five $1,000 Liberty bonds from John Markle of 2 Rector Street and his wife.

Mrs. Russell Sage sent her check for $2,500, with a message of cheer for Commander Booth. In response to an appeal by George Gordon Battle, the following, Simon Guggenheim, J. E. Beurwind, R. F. Patterson, Vernon C. Brown, Judge R. E. Lehman, C. H. Sabin, and the Lorillard Tobacco Company, each sent $1,000.

A tea in aid of the War Work Committee of the Salvation Army was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Lewis B. Woodruff, 14 East Sixty-eighth Street, at which Sergeant Barr of Pershing's army made a brief address, detailing the work done by the Salvation Army lasses in their work at the front.

Society girls assisted Mrs. Woodruff in receiving, among them being the Misses Evelyn Byrd Smith, Vera McNair, Edith Gould, Lucile Baldwin, Claire Van Lennep, and Mrs. Walter Kobbe, and Abby Putnam Morrison, First Class Electrician of the Navy, who poured tea. A number of subscriptions to the Army's work were made by the civilian guests.

Russellites' Case Adjourned.

Ex-Judge Joseph F. Rutherford, successor to Pastor Russell, and seven of his followers were brought before Judge Chatfield in the Federal Court, Brooklyn, yesterday for examination on charges of conspiracy to incite insurrection and disloyalty in the military and naval forces of the United States and violation of the Trading with the Enemy act. Assistant District Attorney Buckner urged an immediate trial, but Frederick Sparks, representing the defendants, succeeded in obtaining an adjournment of the case until June 3.

CARUSO IN RED CROSS DRIVE

He Will Sing at Two Benefits, One on Italy-America Day.

Signor Caruso is to appear in two Red Cross benefits for allied nations in the next two weeks. As announced last Monday, the tenor will head a gala program for the American Red Cross at the Metropolitan on May 27, the closing day of the Red Cross drive. He will also appear there Friday, May 24, the evening of Italy-America Day, in observance of Italy's third year in the war, when the proceeds will be given to the Italian Red Cross.

President Charles E. Hughes of the Italy-America Society will preside at the Italian concert, which is in charge of Captain Guardabassi of the Second Grenadier Guards, now on a war mission to this country. The program will include Mmes. Alda and Muzio, Messrs. Caruso, Scotti, Amato, Martinelli, De Luca, and two American artists, Anna Chase and Sophie Braslau.

'OUT THERE' SEEKS $500,000

Red Cross Play Touring, with All-Star Cast, in Brooklyn Tonight.

The all-star "Out There" cast, which is touring the country in aid of the Red Cross, will make its first appearance in Greater New York to-night, when a performance will be given at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn. It is expected that the receipts of the three weeks' tour, from sale of seats and premiums alone, will be in the neighborhood of $500,000. The tour began in Washington on Monday night with receipts of $18,000, and in Baltimore the following night $29,000 was taken in. A matinee performance was given yesterday in Wilmington, and a night show in Philadelphia.

The first of the Manhattan performances will take place tomorrow night at the Century, and two more performances will be given on Saturday.

Want Music in Hands of Patriots.

Friends of the New York Chamber Music Society will hold a meeting this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. James Gamble Rogers, 160 East Seventieth Street, in the interest of plans of this organization, founded by Carolyn Beebe, "to place the future musical interests of our country in the hands of patriotic Americans."

MUSIC NOTES.

The Rehearsal Club's School for Professional Children will hold its third annual commencement at the Morosco Theatre this morning at 11 o'clock, with addresses by Winthrop Ames and Mrs. August Belmont.

Two concerts daily during the week of the Red Cross drive will be given at the house of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, 677 Fifth Avenue, to be opened May 20 by Clarence Whitehill, Marcia Van Dresser, and the Trio de Lutece.

The National Patriotic Song Committee will hold a rally of its members at the MacDowell Club on Friday evening, when E. H. Sothern will tell of his recent trip to France.

Rudolph Ganz, the pianist, will be in America till midsummer, sailing in August to play in Paris and in camps and hospitals in France.

Cleofonte Campanini, now in Havana, has abandoned his European trip and will return to New York in June to plan his Chicago opera season.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Liberty Gun," the Robert Mears Mackay-Victor Mapes war play, will have its first production in New Haven on May 30. Heading the cast are Robert Edeson, Malcolm Duncan, Henry Kolker, and Arline Hackett.

Emily Ann Wellman will soon return to vaudeville in a playlet by Richard Madden, entitled "Where Things Happen."

Laura Hope Crews will be Cyril Maude's leading woman next season in Haddon Chambers's comedy, "The Saving Grace."

The Hoyt farce, "A Trip to Chinatown," will begin a tour of the cantonments on June 10. Jefferson de Angelis and Howard Kyle will be in the cast.

Johnny Dooley has been engaged for the midnight revue at the Century Grove, and will make his début next Wednesday night. The Dolly Sisters will begin a roof engagement at the same time.

Grace La Rue has been added to the players who will appear at the Morosco Theatre on Sunday night in aid of the Stage Women's War Relief.

"Going Up" was produced on Monday in Manchester, England, and will begin a London run on May 22.

A season of Yiddish drama will begin at the Irving Place Theatre on June 2 with the production of "Allah Carim," by L. A. Orloff.

Frank Carter, now in the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic, will be in the cast of the "Follies" this season.

Harold Hartsell has been added to the company which will be seen at the opening of the Actors and Authors' Theatre at the Fulton Monday night.

CITY BREVITIES.

A bazaar to raise funds for the War Service Bureau of Greenwich House will be held at the headquarters at 27 Barrow Street today, and it will continue until Sunday. In addition to sales of pottery, woodwork, and other articles, the bazaar will have several shows and entertainments. All the money is to be used in carrying on the work of the centre, which includes the War Service Information Bureau.

Ralph D. Paine, who has returned from five months with the Allied naval forces in the war zone, will speak on May 23 at a gathering at the Morgan Library, 33 East Thirty-sixth Street. Official naval films from the British Admiralty, the French Ministry of Marine, and the United States Navy Department will be shown.

The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense will hold a meeting at the City Hall at 3 o'clock this afternoon to discuss plans for conserving the lives of 100,000 children. Health Commissioner Copeland is expected to attend.

Workmen are now installing a 2,000-pound bell, key of F, in St. Paul's Chapel at Columbia University. Cast in relief, the bell bears the following inscription: "To Ring Out Through the Ages for Truth, Justice, and Liberty. Presented to Columbia University by the Class of 1893, School of Arts, Columbia College, on its Twenty-fifth Anniversary, June 5th, 1918."

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

President WILSON's protest against the Chamberlain resolution will undoubtedly dispose of it. It proposed that the Military Committee act as a committee to investigate the aircraft mess or "any other matters relating "to the conduct of the war, by of "through the War Department." To an aircraft investigation the President has no objection; but "any other matters" is a large phrase. He thinks it would constitute Senator CHAMBERLAIN's committee a committee "to take over the conduct of the war," or, at least, to superintend it. And he is certainly right when he says that such action would amount to "a direct vote of want of confidence in "the Administration."

The people are with him in his opposition to a committee on the conduct of the war, in whatever form it may be proposed to create such a committee. Whatever of confusion may exist anywhere would be intensified a hundredfold if Congress tried to take over the executive business, or superintend it, or overhaul it, or meddle with it. It is not what Congress is for; and the Congress which did try to exercise such functions in LINCOLN's time, although it was headed by much abler men than most of those at the head of this Congress, only succeeded in interfering with the nation's war activities and making bad matters worse. It never did any good. Congress should be warned by that historic example.

While the President is undoubtedly right in the position he has taken, it is to be regretted that in taking it he should have made use of certain expressions such as, "These are serious "times, and it is absolutely necessary "that the lines should be clearly drawn "between friends and opponents." They are serious times, and for that reason no line should be drawn between patriots who differ concerning methods; the only line should be between friends and enemies of the United States. There are few of the latter in Congress. In times so serious it should not be regarded as an offense for a patriotic Congressman to differ with the Administration in a matter of policy. Nor should the President speak of "friends and opponents," for in this matter of the war no Congressman should be either. No Congressman should vote on any war question as a "friend" of the President, or as an "opponent" of the President; he should vote as a "friend" of the United States, and his conscience should instruct him.

ALL GERMANY WANTS.

If Germany's peace offensive is to be characterized by the elephantine naïveté which distinguishes its first output, it will not deceive even the densest. That "prominent German politician" who sends out the first balloon via Copenhagen begins coaxingly: "We have lost, including "killed, wounded, and prisoners, "3,000,000 men. Do you think that "we intend to make foolish claims and "send our children through another "four years of war?" Obviously, Germany is in a most docile, gentle mood. What does she intend to claim, then? Why, we "only demand that "the Western Powers shall give back "our colonies."

Surely, nobody could object to that; and that is all Germany demands. But, incidentally, our German friend produces a further argument to prove that she is in no mood to "make foolish claims" and so prolong the war. Here it is: "Moreover, we shall have "enough to do during the age of man "to control the new Russian countries "and secure their mercantile and industrial influence." Will our reasonable, amiable, conciliatory, plausible German friend pardon us if we say that that makes it necessary to reconstruct his innocent and idyllic statement of Germany's demands? So reconstructed, it reads as follows:

We only demand that the Western Powers shall give back our colonies and let us absorb the Russian half of Europe and the Russian half of Asia, so that the German Empire shall extend from the Baltic to the Pacific. Then there will never be another war, because such an empire would be irresistible, and the whole world would not dare to oppose anything it wished to do.

The trial balloon will have to be hauled down and repainted, if anybody outside of Germany is to be deceived by it.

FOR A LOYAL CONGRESS.

We are heartily in sympathy with the appeal to loyal voters sent out by the League for National Unity, urging them to see to it that a Congress 100 per cent. loyal is elected next Fall, and especially with this sentence in it:

If in any Congressional or Senatorial election there proves to be danger of the election of disloyal candidates, it will become the duty of Americans, regardless of party affiliations, to defeat such candidates and to set loyalty to the nation above personal loyalty to the party.

Not only above "personal loyalty to the party," but above personal ambition, factional feuds, and old hostilities. It is so obvious that one would think it did not need a League for National Unity to set it forth. Yet when we look at the way the Congress campaign is beginning, what do we find? We find that in South Carolina COLE BLEASE is running for the Senate on a platform of open, rampant hostility to the war, calling for the damnation on Judgment Day of the President and those members of Congress who have supported him. Is there union against BLEASE? The loyal vote is divided already by the appearance of four candidates, Senator TILLMAN, Representative LEVER, N. B. DIAL, and the Rev. J. E. MAHAFFEY, and more are expected to appear.

In Mississippi the opposition to Senator VARDAMAN is divided between ex-Governor NOEL and Representative HARRISON. In Georgia Senator HARDWICK is in the happy position of having six candidates against him already, with more in the offing. These three are the only States in which the yalty issue has appeared so far, but there will be more, both North and South, and the way in which South Carolina, Mississippi, and Georgia have started to deal with the question is not encouraging. There is work ahead for the League for National Unity, judging from these beginnings.

THE ZWEIBUND.

Yesterday THE TIMES spoke of the rapprochement of the Austrian-German Socialists and the Czechs and Southern Slavs, and of the expressed sympathy of the Arbeiter Zeitung, the Austrian-German Socialist organ, for the Bolshevist Revolution, and its criticism of the counter-revolutionary German invasion of Finland and Ukraine. Before that revolution the Austrian Socialists were imperialists. At his trial in the Spring of 1917, Dr. FRIEDRICH ADLER, the assassin of the Austrian Premier, Count STUERGHK, said of the Arbeiter Zeitung, of which his father, Dr. VICTOR ADLER, founder of the Austrian Social Democratic Party, was proprietor, that "a Wilhelmstrasse official" discussed foreign politics in it every day. FRIEDRICH ADLER was an extreme Socialist, hot for the proletariat, disgusted with the submissiveness of his party to absolutism, with Kaiserite Socialist North German leaders like SCHEIDEMANN.

Now the German-Austrian Socialists are getting Bolshevist. The Arbeiter Zeitung insisted the other day that "even the German bourgeois "parties cannot imagine that they "will be able to withhold from the "Czechs the right to form a State of "their own"; an Amsterdam dispatch shows the German Chancellor admitting in the Reichstag that this Arbeiter Zeitung, this official voice of Austrian Social Democracy, is kept out of Germany by the German Government "in full accord with Vienna," and is "considered every day more and more a perverted newspaper."

That is, the Austrian Socialists have turned away from absolutism. They have got much further than the German Independent Socialists. In Austria, South Slavs, Czechs, Ukrainians appeal by a program of agrarian reform to the Socialists, who support them in turn on the principle, brought to Austria by the Bolshevist Revolution, spreading also now by means of Austrian soldiers returned from Russia, of national self-determination.

Amid all this thunder and bomb at German Great Headquarters, this meeting of WILHELM and KARL, where the latter becomes, in feudal phrase, the former's man of life, limb, and earthly worship, and holds the Hapsburg lands, if held they can be, by the might of the German sword; amid all this chatter of professors and political economists, this paper Middle Europe, let us keep in sight what Austria-Hungary is—a ragbag, a crazy quilt of nationalities, nine or ten, to name only the principal ones. In Hungary eight or nine million Magyars have kept a brutal sway over eleven or twelve millions of non-Magyars. In Austria less than ten million Germans have ruled 18,000,000 non-Germans.

That condition cannot last. In Austria, at least, a political revolution is in preparation. Two great subject nationalities, the Czech-Slovaks and the South Slavs, demand separate States. Other irredentist movements have long existed. All have been quickened by the tyrannies, the illegalities, the cruelties, the persecutions, imprisonments, hangings, that have gone on for almost four years, especially in the Banat and Carniola, Bohemia, Bosnia, Croatia, and Dalmatia. Now the Austrian Socialists join the Czechs and South Slavs. The social revolution joins the political revolution. Austria is in a variously bad way. So is Hungary.

The patter of a clerical organ like the Vienna Reichspost, of an organ of the "financial barons" like the Neues Wiener Tagblatt, gulls nobody. The renewal of the alliance—it is not an alliance, but a surrender on Austria-Hungary's part—"satisfies the political intelligence of "Austrians," says the Tagblatt. Anybody of any political or other intelligence in Austria-Hungary knows that the motley monarchy is on its last legs. Only complete German victory on the west front can save the moribund Dual State.

LINKING THE RAILWAYS AND NEW YORK'S CANALS.

When CLINTON's ditch was opened in 1825, water brought by the Erie Canal from the Lakes was poured into the ocean at Sandy Hook, along with other water brought from many of the world's greatest rivers. The ceremony signified that commerce over the canal was part of the world commerce. The opening of the enlarged barge canal, over the same route extended, is marked by a marriage of railways and canals not less significant than the mingling of the waters almost a century ago. It was not in the foresight of any man that the canal when opened would be operated by the nation in connection with the railways of the nation as a unit. Yet the opening of the canal was accompanied by official notice that the United States is building a fleet of suitable boats for work through the canal, which it took over April 17.

These two announcements together are most heartening. If the announcement merely was that the canal was ready for service, it would be necessary to add, with regret, that there was no sign of its being put to the designed use. The State has spent $150,000,000 upon the enlargement of a work which has cost, from the beginning, $386,000,000, upon the assumption that there would be a rush to use it. But, until the Federal intervention, there had been no preparations worth mention. The old boats were unsuitable for the larger canal and only four new boats were under construction. There was danger that a potential annual capacity of 20,000,000 tons would go almost to waste. Even now the nation's boats to ply over the State's canal are unbuilt, and there will be delay in the use of the canal at a time when the demand for its use is at the maximum.

The canal was built as a competitor of the railways, as a means of reducing their rates and profits. It will go into use as a feeder and distributer of railway traffic, as a supplement to the railways and not as a rival or competitor. As a competitor of the railways there was no future for the canal. Its work was done when its existence brought the basing rate of railway rates for the United States to the rate between New York and Chicago. That was a water rate, the lowest rate in the world, perhaps too low a rate for the good of the United States itself, and a benefit more for foreign buyers of goods exported through its stimulus. The entire rate structure of the nation would be much higher if it were built upon a land rate, say from New York to St. Louis. The canal has the capacity to reduce even the present low rate, but it is not to be supposed that it will be used for that purpose. There is a deficit for the railways payable by the nation to a total of hundreds of millions, and railway rates are about to be raised a quarter or more. To suppose that the canal will be put to the carriage of grain at 2½ cents instead of 5 cents is unreasonable. There is no sense in reducing rates when traffic cannot be done which ought to be done, and it is a favor to get transportation at any price. It will be a service of almost incalculable value if the millions of tons of capacity over the canal, corresponding to the use of hundreds of thousands of cars, should be provided at existing charges.

It would have shocked the entire country if the canal had fallen into the control of the competitive railways under private management. It is different when the railways are operated for the national account. Under competition, each canalboat owner competed with every other, and the railways competed with all of them. The Interstate Commerce Commission forbade the railways to have water extensions, and there was dry rot in the canal business. Interchange of business is the present policy, and it is full of hope. The railways and the canal will make joint and through rates, and there will be no cutting of rates. The Interstate Commission has issued a general order, at the request of the Director General, authorizing carriers to file all-water rates, all-rail rates, and joint rail and water rates at all-rail figures, regardless of the long and short haul, and with Duluth and Chicago on an equality.

The result of the operation of the railways and canal in that manner will be to increase the capacity of both, and not to put either out of business, as the Panama Canal has put the Tehuantepec Railway out of business. Before that order there was announced a river, canal, and lake rate tariff of a competitive nature, which presumably will be dropped, and without mourners. The craze for too low rates has passed. Service is the present need and demand. It can be supplied by co-operation better than by competition, and that is the new note.

It is hardly necessary to add that the event is of worldwide importance. It has direct relation to winning the war. Foodstuffs will be brought east and coal will be sent west by millions of tons. Traffic more suitable for water than for land transport, and which the railways had fought for with uneconomic rates, will be taken out of the way of the railways. It will be the same as expediting food and munitions to the men in the trenches, of whatever allied nation. It is a war measure which it will be peculiarly profitable and seemly to continue when peace shall return. It is one of many signs that the war on business and the domestic war between rival businesses are both ended. War dividends carry a costly penalty. The dividends of peace are more honest and fruitful. The marriage of the railways and the canals is an auspicious event, foreseen by no man and to be regretted by none.

THE SALVATION ARMY WAR FUND DRIVE.

Next Saturday the "drive" of the Salvation Army for its war work fund ends. Already 400,000 contributions have been received for a work which must appeal to every heart. These are the small and cheerful subscribers who were particularly sought for the Liberty 4¼s. No doubt the 400,000 will be a half million before the books are closed, but there are grounds for an appeal of a sort the reverse of the effort in the Liberty Loan drive. The Salvation Army is in especial need of larger givers, for the mites of their sympathizers mount up slowly and meagrely. The Salvation Army has never been accused of waste or misuse of funds. The money given to it is used for the purpose designed, and there can be none higher. It is in the same class with Red Cross work, and in the case of the war is effective for earthly consolation as well as for religious counsel.

There have been many reports of the good work done by the army among the defenders of democracy "over there," and it is work of a sort which cannot be duplicated, and should not be allowed to languish. There are many appeals nowadays, but this is exceptional. When hundreds of thousands of small givers have done their share, they have set an example which may well be followed by those to whom this war has brought large profits. It might seem that such money would rest more easily in the pockets of anybody if a share, even an insignificant share, comparatively, were contributed for the use of those who ask nothing for themselves, and who are grateful for the help which enables them to help others in need. It is desirable that those so disposed should be prompt as well as generous. After this week the books will be closed.

AERIAL MAIL SERVICE.

The Post Office service has had historic days since Sir BRIAN TUKE became Postmaster, (A. D. 1533,) "both "in England and in other parts of "the King's dominions beyond the "seas"; but from TUKE to Sir ROWLAND HILL, the father of penny postage, no Postmaster or reformer seems to have dreamed of the conveyance through the air of mail matter by any other medium than a carrier pigeon. Perhaps BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Postmaster General in the American Colonies, had a vision of the flying machine, but one can think of no man of the posts except him whose mind so far outran his time. Therefore the inauguration of a regular airplane mail service between New York, Philadelphia, and Washington on May 15, 1918, even though the first day's program was not carried out entirely, may be regarded as the most historic event in the Post Office Service, in that of the United States beyond cavil.

It is true that Denmark is preparing, under the auspices of the Danish Aeronautical Society, for such a service after the war. Thirty-nine municipalities are planning to construct landing stations and hangars. In Austria the International Air Traffic Company has been formed to carry letters and parcels on the Hamburg-Berlin-Dresden-Vienna, Budapest-Belgrade-Sofia-Constantinople route. These enterprises are interesting as indicating a great revolution in the postal business of all countries, (there will be an Atlantic service some day, of course,) but that is of the future, when swords have been turned into plowshares.

In the United States, engaged in the great war with all its resources, but happily 3,000 miles from the shock of conflict, the dream of an aerial post can be realized in a practical way. Yesterday the service was begun, and it will be extended and carried on until the mail flier shall become only less familiar in the sky than the sable crow. When there are "flivvers" of the air, a creation perhaps not very remote, the rural free delivery route will have its flying machine, and the housewife paring potatoes under the apple tree will hardly pause in her task to mark its passing.

The air mail wagon which Lieutenant TORRET WEBB piloted to Philadelphia yesterday on the first stage of the journey to Washington carried 350 pounds of mail, or 12,000 letters and parcels, for which there was plenty of room in his fuselage. A great Caproni plane could carry many times that weight of mail, together with sorters and stampers. Twenty-four cents an ounce seems like a reasonable rate for the rapid service provided, and the rate is bound to fall when mail planes darken the sky, as they surely will some day. It is not fantastic to believe that in course of time all first-class mail will be carried through the air at a speed of 150 miles an hour.

At this stage of aeronautic development the elements will sometimes be deterrent; at a later stage the aviator may be able to triumph over even the tempest and the blizzard, and find his way through the fog, guided by signals from the earth. It wasn't many years ago that the WRIGHT brothers would not make a flight if the wind was ruder than a zephyr. Today the skillful flying man scorns to stay on the ground in half a gale.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Honors Are Due to Italy.

There ought to be made—and there will be made, if public attention can be aroused to the need for doing it—an earnest, sincere, and cordial effort all over this country to make the celebration of May 24, as "America-Italy Day," a fitting expression of the gratitude which we, as a part of the right-thinking world, owe to Italy for the services she has rendered and the sacrifices she has offered in the great war.

For reasons not very easy to understand—for reasons that certainly are not adequate—we, like the other allies against Germany, too often fail to remember the importance of Italy's contribution to the common cause, and we, with our large Italian population, have less excuse than some other countries for forgetting that the Italian flag well deserves equal honors to those we so gladly pay to the flags of France and Great Britain. Of Italy it certainly can be said with truth that she has done what, and all, she could.

Never since she entered the war—and truly it is not for us to recall her delay in doing that—has there even been a moment of doubt about her loyalty as a nation to the common cause, about the courage of her sons, or about their fighting efficiency. She has utilized to the full resources comparatively small, and we can well afford to let oblivion cover her one disaster for the sake of her magnificent recovery from it—the speed with which her momentarily broken lines were reformed. Again and again she has taken the offensive against a foe whose strength would have justified her in remaining on the defensive, and today she is repaying help received with help given.

Over here, Italians have been among the readiest to volunteer for service in our armies, and they have not been surpassed by the representatives of any racial strain in cheerful acquiescence in the draft. They have not resented, though they have felt, what has seemed to be the tendency to treat Italy as a minor factor in the war. Of real inappreciation, however, there has been none, and this fact should be made manifest on the day that has been selected for paying valiantly earned tributes to the country to which, more than to any other, the whole world has been so long and deeply indebted.

A Practice Better Abandoned.

There was another long and slightly acrimonious discussion this week, in the Senate at Washington, of an ancient abuse—the printing in the Congressional Record of columns and columns of words which, not having been spoken in that august chamber, are out of place in a publication that pretends to be, and should be nothing more than, a chronicle of proceedings in our National Legislature.

It was Senator WADSWORTH of New York who brought the matter up this time, and his text was the insertion by Senator THOMAS of Colorado of a long series of criticisms of President LINCOLN, made by inappreciative contemporaries. Senator WADSWORTH admitted that these reminders of long-evaporated animosities had an academic interest, but he denied their right to a place in the Record unless actually "read into it," as the phrase is, and so made a part of the day's transactions. "Leave to print" he condemned both as a violation of the legislative veracities and as a waste of paper, especially at a time when paper is scarce and expensive.

THE TIMES has what might be called a special interest in this controversy, for very frequently, of late, both Senators and Representatives have asked and received permission to reprint in the Record articles of one sort or another that first appeared in THE TIMES columns. This is an appreciated compliment, and it probably has advertising value. Neither of those considerations, however, is sufficient to prevent THE TIMES from seeing the soundness of Senator WADSWORTH's contention that the practice of loading up the Congressional Record in this way should cease, or at any rate should be far more strictly regulated than at present.

In only a few cases are public interests served by "leave to print." Far oftener the interests served are those of an individual legislator, and the chances are that even he rarely gets much advantage from the privilege he so much enjoys. It provides him with "documents" to shower on his constituents, but the number of people that read them must be small and the number influenced by them smaller still.

Idleness Has Its Utilities.

Unless Governor WHITMAN takes great pains in wording the proclamation putting in force the anti-loafing law, our police and our Magistrates are going to have some most difficult problems to solve, and only the fact that laws of the same sort seem to work smoothly enough in New Jersey and Maryland enables one to view the prospect with composure. For while we are all content to have real loafers made to justify their existence by doing some honest work, opinions differ as to what constitutes the difference between reprehensible idleness and a commendable enjoyment of leisure.

The case of actors out of engagement has already excited understandable apprehension in their class. There are also not a few "literary fellows" whose activities, while vastly important in their own esteem, are regarded as a lamentable waste of time by editors and other inappreciative members of the general public. Again, a large amount of "loafing" seems to be an essential part of several kinds of production. Genius must wait for inspiration, and meanwhile genius cannot, or at any rate it won't, turn its hand to bricklaying or the running of street cars.

And how about men more or less like THOREAU—men who scorn luxuries and cut down necessaries to what other people hold an intolerable minimum, and do it in order that they may have more time in which to invite their souls? Mr. Gradgrind would call them all loafers—and prove the accuracy of his characterization by all the recognized tests.

Only war, and only just such a war as this one, would warrant the condemnation of all men to the sedulous performance, for a fixed number of hours every day or week or year, of what is obviously "useful labor." But all such thoughts as these only make it the more evident that we must "get on with the war" and have it over with—in the right way and with Germany beaten—as soon as possible. If the new law does that, it is all right—as is anything else that has the same effect or can be hoped to have it.

GERMAN PROFESSORS.

Statement of the Department of Justice on Their Position.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may be instructive to the administration offices in other colleges to read the inclosed letter from the Department of Justice. The inquiry which elicited this letter dealt with the problem of retaining on the academic staff professors of German citizenship who, while known to be loyal to their native country, conducted themselves in all respects conformably to the regulations of the Department of Justice.

I proposed to the Department of Justice that if professors were to be considered as a class apart from other German aliens the Department of Justice should issue an intimation to American college boards of trustees that the continued presence of German aliens as professors was not desired.

The letter which follows was written after consultation by Mr. Wallace with the Attorney General:

H. N. MacCracken, Esq., President, Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Dear Sir: I reply to your letter of May 1, 1918, submitting memorandum as to employment of German aliens as teachers in American colleges. The Attorney General requests me to advise you that the Presidential proclamations expressly state that there should be no discriminations against alien enemies other than those specified in these proclamations. As the feature you suggest is not covered by the proclamation, to attempt to enforce it would be opposed to the proclamation itself.

Very truly yours,
William Wallace, Jr.
Special Assistant to the Attorney General.

What Soldiers Can Find.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article, "Of Course, They Stole That Stove," in today's TIMES reminded me of the following extract from a letter written early in March by an English soldier:

About huts, &c., I am one of a lucky few. We are six in a hut with bunks, but the wood is hard, so we just look about and, hey, oh, it's softer. Winter came; no stoves for us. Looked about again; one stove came in. Must have walked in. Any rate, we were warm.

A fresh officer came to my late battery one day; just come from Blighty. He wanted to know why we always said that we found this or that; so explained. A soldier, walking along, sees something he wants, takes it. Result: Found it. Get me? If you don't look after yourself a little bit on active service, other people won't. That's our motto.

You wrote some time ago of the English mail service being satisfactory. It takes three weeks, as the rule, for letters both coming and going, though my letters are not censored. His letters are censored by an officer at his depot and again at the base. Only twice in the last two years have I received letters without the base censor's strips. Considering the fact that he is now behind the lines with an engineer detachment, this does not seem to be fast mail service.

The Gentle Conductorette.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your article of May 11 you have taken up the subject of the conductors and conductorettes, as to their efficiency, comfort, &c., and of the all-important topic of women in men's jobs. Will you allow at least one of the third party to this arrangement, or a passenger who rides a great deal on the cars of the city at all hours, a remark? I find, since we have these conductorettes, I am able to get on and off cars, pay my fare, receive change when needed, can be told to move up front, &c., and all in a civilized manner, absolutely no brutality, and a great deal less confusion and just as much speed. By all means let us have the cheery "Fares in the box, please!" compared with the "Money-or-your-life!" method of old.

A SIMPLE LIFE.

"A few strong instincts and a few plain rules."
Sufficed to guide thy life aright,
To make thy name a true and steady light
Where most men err and many more are fools!

Still ring the echoes of thy old appeal
To us, who heard thee once with joy.
From thee no platitudes that shortly cloy,
But sturdy truths for men who still can feel.

They, touched, impressed, respond with worthy deeds.
No subtleties of mystic lore,
No fruitless dogma, rotten at its core,
No labyrinth of philosophic creeds—

Not such thy gospel to a pain-wracked age,
But simple trust in God, and Faith
That Righteousness is not an empty wraith,
And hope, that saves when powers of evil rage!

Last came thy call that men should join the fight Against the imperiling tides of crime
Or stand convicted to the end of time
As equal criminals, and foes to Right.

"To make of life a something more sublime
Than merely life"—this was thy aim.
Thou hast achieved it. Well we know thy flame
Renews itself beyond the grasp of Time!

War Stamps Better Than Fireworks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why not start a movement to make the coming Fourth of July holiday a stamp day celebration? Instead of buying fireworks, it should be the duty of each one to buy war saving and thrift stamps. A movement like this would save noise, life, and money.

ART NOTES.

Furnishings and ornaments belonging to the estate of Grant B. Schley and to several other estates and private owners are on view at The American Art Galleries until the dates of sale, which commence the afternoon of May 20 and continue until May 25, inclusive.

The exhibition includes a great variety of objects, furniture, rugs, pottery, bronzes, glass, pewter, porcelains, and pictures. Perhaps the most interesting section is the pewter, with examples of French, English, Flemish, Dutch, American, Swedish, Danish, and German, many of the pieces very large and in beautiful condition, with the soft rich surface that has never known a buffer. A very unusual piece is a Persian pewter kettle with curved spout, domed cover, and flat wrought iron bail handles. The body is engraved with diapered scrollings of leaves and flowers, and the lid is repoussé with a lotus leaf pattern.

INTERNATIONAL THINKERS.

A Board Suggested to Consider Matters of Foreign Relations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"The science of creating and transmitting public opinion under the influence of collective emotion is about to become the principal science of civilization, to the mastery of which all Governments and all powerful interests will in the future address themselves with every resource at their command."

This quotation from Benjamin Kidd's book, "The Science of Power," points out what in the future may well be one of the most important branches of governmental activity.

The question arises, "What can or should be done by the United States to develop this science in its relation to foreign countries?"

It has been said that there are less than one hundred men in the United States who think internationally. If this is true, the imperial rescript of the Emperor of Japan commanding his subjects to go forth into the world in search of knowledge is applicable to us also. It is imperative that we conserve and utilize the experience and wisdom of the few men who have a knowledge of international relations.

It would seem that there might be a council on foreign relations or a house of diplomats which should comprise in its membership ex-Ministers and ex-Ambassadors of the United State and other American citizens who have done constructive work internationally. This council might be controlled by a Board of Governors, somewhat as the Federal Reserve Bank is controlled, who should give their undivided attention to the question of foreign relations, each Governor specializing on the country with which he is familiar; it should be as independent of politics as the Supreme Court; it would act in an advisory capacity to the President and departments of the Government if called upon. Its headquarters should be in New York. Its method of operation might be somewhat similar to that of the Roman College of the Propaganda, that is, through intensifying and multiplying the personal equation by conference and exchange of thought rather than by publicity. As a sheep is shorn of its wool to be converted into cloth, so would the international expert be shorn of his knowledge that it might be placed at the disposal of the Government.

Such a board would tend to stabilize our foreign policy and give it a continuity. It would also operate to maintain a happy medium between secret diplomacy and the tendency of the people to take diplomacy into their own hands.

TARIFF AFTER THE WAR.

As to New Fears of Foreign Competition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The textile trade organs are in ecstacy over the possibilities of "Made in U. S. A." It was the keynote of the late convention of cotton goods manufacturers held here, and a big feature of the textile show just closed. It does not therefore need the gift of second sight to uncover our old friends the tariff-pampered interests in the background. It is not difficult to see, either, why the cotton goods people especially should be thus enthused, and why so apprehensive about foreign goods coming in after the war.

In this agitation the familiar tactics of the protectionists are resorted to, the browbeating of the consumer. "If you allow yourself to be tempted to buy the cheaper goods from outside, home industry will be destroyed and all will starve." The consumer so far has preferred to do without the cheaper goods than to take a chance with his income. The protection plea rests on the proposition that for every dollar's worth of foreign goods bought there will be one dollar's worth of goods less produced here. Enterprise is a restricted quantity, not capable of expansion. The proposition is exactly the same as that of the laborer in respect to labor-saving inventions—there is a given amount of work to do and inventions by increasing individual output reduce the work for each. The protectionist uses the tariff to shorten the supply of goods, and the laborer restricts output to curtail the supply of labor. But notwithstanding the rising tariffs the world over the importations of each nation in response to economic necessity have tremendously grown, and without the calamities vociferously predicted. Inventions, too, have advanced at a marvelous pace and, forsooth, there is as much employment, relatively, as there ever was, if not more. In both cases lowered costs increased the power to buy, and in turn increased production. This basic fact, the consuming side, the balancing side of the proposition, the business and the labor restrictionists entirely ignore.

It is peculiar that in the industries where prices are decided by free competition there is no fear of the foreigner. That fear is the exclusive quality of the "regulated" trades. The manufacturers, too, that stand on their own bottoms are also ready to adjust themselves to conditions as they arise. If perchance competitors here and there are able to produce cheaper they are willing to turn to fields in which they may excel. They know that there are no bounds to enterprise, that there is plenty of room for home goods and foreign goods of merit. This is the spirit of progress, the spirit that conquers and builds up a nation, and not the spirit that depends upon favoritism, economic exclusion, and false appeals to patriotism.

GERMAN PROFESSORS WARN OF IDEALISM

Campaign Is Started Against Applying the Principles of "Dreamers" to Peace.

WANT WORLD LEADERSHIP

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 15.—The London Times says that a regular campaign is being conducted in certain quarters in Germany against the "perils" of international idealism and what is called "world citizenship."

The Suddeutsche Monatsheft, an influential review, published in Leipsic and Munich, devoted almost the whole of its last issue to warnings against all "German dreamers." The principal articles were contributed by university professors.

Dr. Martin Spahn, Roman Catholic Professor of History in the University of Strassburg, and son of the leader of the Centre Party, concluded a learned review of German political idealism with the assertion that if Germany consented to any league of nations, she must lead it. After admitting that it was necessary to discover a formula reconciling the right of States to self-determination with the "common right of Christianity," Dr. Spahn said:

"The need of the present hour is not yet universal peace, the rule of law and the freedom of peoples, but a clearness about the vital conditions of the German people as a State, and about the full development of our own condition of existence. We have to make good the omissions of centuries and to extirpate weakness that has penetrated our very being. Much was made good in the year 1871, but we could not be healed all at once.

"The unity of peoples will prosper only under the leadership of the most efficient people. The peoples are made for equality just as little as individuals are. Assuredly our leadership will not mean serfdom for other peoples.

"It was we who brought into the world the idea that the common state life of mankind should depend upon a trinity—the right of all, freedom for every individual member of the community and peace as an ordered state of civilization. Only a race so full of idealism as the Germans are was capable of lighting up the horizon of humanity with an idea so great and eternal. If mankind is gradually to draw nearer to such a superterrestrial goal, it will only be if we once more advance as leaders."

Professor Ernest Häckel of the University of Jena contributed a brief note on "the false cosmopolitan idealism of the German people the greatest danger to its national existence." He wrote:

"I am afraid that German dreamers are again being deceived by political phrases and Utopian imaginings of peace. Since the Reichstag, in its famous resolution of July 19, 1917, gave fresh and terrible proof of the proverbial political incompetence of the 'German Michael,' it must unfortunately be feared that at the impending conclusion of peace the ideal of an international itch for agreement will be victorious over the indispensable national real increase of power."

Professor Reinke of the University of Kiel, in an article called "Conciliation by Magnanimity," attributed German idealism to the fact that the Germans "were attacked and had to wage a defensive war for their existence." He wrote:

"The advocates of the ides of renunciation are theorists who have not even thought out their theory to its final consequences. In practical politics, as long as the world has existed, the only power which has won peace is the power that has been able to inspire the enemy with respect by force of arms.

"The latest example is provided by Brest-Litovsk. In the first act of the drama played there we achieved nothing because we appeared as gentle and benevolent characters. The third act will be successful because of the plain language meanwhile spoken by German arms.

"The proper maxim for us is to extract from the situation as much material advantage as the military state of affairs permits. If we were to act otherwise our enemies would laugh at us or gloat over us in secret. The idea that we could conciliate defeated enemies by magnanimity would be a dream, and not even a pretty dream. That idea is disproved on every page of history, and it is only from history that we can learn how a nation and an empire should behave in such a situation as the one in which we now are."

Federal Bureau's Policies to Date Total $15,663,514,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—No single organization in the history of life underwriting has ever matched the work achieved by the Government's War Risk Bureau, which has just completed its first six months of operations.

Up to the close of business last Monday night 2,029,886 applications for policies had been received and acted on, the total amount of insurance sought being $15,663,514,000. If all the business of twenty of the largest life companies of the United States now standing on the books were to be footed into one grand total, it would not equal this. The average amount of insurance applied for has been $8,200, the maximum under the law being $10,000.

The applications are coming in at the rate of 11,000 a day, and in the last fortnight the bureau wrote $1,000,000,000 of policies. The men have under the regulations 120 days after enlisting in which to put in their applications, and it is apparent that the new men are availing themselves of the liberal treatment extended to them by the Government. The insurance is against death and permanent disability.

RUMANIA'S KING HOPEFUL.

Expresses Confidence in Future—Ex-Ministers to be Prosecuted.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—A dispatch received here from Bucharest says King Ferdinand of Rumania, in a telegram to Alexander Marghiloman, the Rumanian Premier, has expressed his confidence in the future of his people. In the telegram the King also thanked Marghiloman and his associates for their work in the preservation of Rumanian rights.

"I hereby take cognizance of the peace which has been concluded at Buchsarest," says the King's message to M. Marghiloman, "and thank you and the other Rumanian delegates for the difficult and self-sacrificing work you have done to preserve our rights at a painful time.

"As King and a Rumanian, I have every hope for the future of my brave and valiant people. I thank you for the assurance of confidence you express in the prosperity and strength of the country under my leadership and that of my dynasty."

The Bucharest newspaper Steagul, a copy of which has been received here, forecasts the prosecution of the members of the Cabinet of J. J. C. Bratiano and Take Jonescu, former Minister without portfolio in the Rumanian Government. An investigation, says the newspaper, is being made regarding the preparations for and the conduct of the war, and also the administration of State funds.

21 INDICTED IN BISBEE FOR DEPORTATIONS

SEQUEL TO FIGHT ON I. W. W.

More Than 1,000 Were Expelled After Strike Order—Defendants' Bail High.

TUCSON, Ariz., May 15.—Twenty of the most prominent citizens of Bisbee, Ariz., were at liberty under $5,000 bond tonight following their arrest at Bisbee on Federal indictments returned here last week, according to advices reaching the office of the United States Marshal here. Twenty-one men were indicted for "conspiracy to deprive a citizen of the United States of his legal rights in violation of Section 19 of the Penal Code." The indictments grew out of the deportation from Bisbee and the Warren mining district of 1,186 copper miners and others following a strike which had been called at Arizona mines by I. W. W. officials in May, 1917.

The twenty-first man, for whom officers had a warrant, was reported to be in New York. He was said to be prominent in mining and financial circles throughout the United States.

The men arrested today appeared before an Acting United States Commissioner at Bisbee and gave bond for their appearance at Tucson May 28 for a preliminary hearing. All the men indicted are widely known in Arizona, and some of them have national reputations in mining and financial circles.

Prominent citizens among the indicted men, declared today they believed the deportations were made for the good of the community and of the Government, in that the I. W. W. strike which prevailed in the district at the time was hampering production of copper badly needed in wartime.

Among those arrested today were:

GRANT H. DOWELL, general manager of the Copper Queen Consolidated Mining Company at Bisbee.

M. J. CUNNINGHAM, Cashier of the Bank of Bisbee and former President of the Arizona Bankers' Association.

Captain JOSEPH PARK HODGSON, consulting engineer, Phelps-Dodge Corporation.

JAMES ALLISON, City Marshal of Bisbee.

ALVIN W. HOWE, Deputy Sheriff of Cochise County.

HENRY SNODGRASS, Bisbee miner, former City Marshal.

J. L. GANNON, Deputy Sheriff.

Sheriff Harry Wheeler, who was in charge of the deportations, is now a Captain in the American forces in France. James S. Douglas, one of the leading officials of the Phelps-Dodge Copper interests, and one of the owners of the Verde Extension mine, also is in France in Red Cross work and has with him as assistant, W. H. Brophey, manager of the Phelps-Dodge mercantile interests.

BOOM COLER FOR GOVERNOR

Friend Says Up-State Democratic Leaders Favor Candidacy.

Brooklyn friends of Charities Commissioner Bird S. Coler said yesterday that he was preparing to throw his hat into the gubernatorial ring. A close friend of the Commissioner said he would soon open campaign headquarters in his office, 215 Montague Street, to boom Mr. Coler for the Democratic nomination for Governor. According to this authority, Mr. Coler has given his sanction to the movement, and several up-State leaders who have been consulted have expressed themselves favorable to his candidacy. At Mr. Coler's home in Brooklyn last evening it was said that he was in Washington on business.

When Mr. Coler failed to win the Democratic nomination for Borough President last Fall it was generally understood among Brooklyn politicians that he would seek gubernatorial honors this year. He has made no definite declaration in that connection, however, and it was thought that following his appointment as Charities Commissioner he had dropped his Governorship aspirations.

Mr. Coler was the Democratic candidate for Governor against Benjamin B. Odell in 1902, and was defeated by only 8,800 votes.

SHIFTS SUFFRAGE FIGHT TO THE HERRENHAUS

Friedberg Announces Dissolution of Prussian Parliament if Equal Vote Fails.

AMSTERDAM, May 15.—Herr Friedberg, Vice President of the Prussian State Ministry, speaking yesterday in the Prussian Lower House, said, according to Berlin dispatches, that the Government continued to adhere unshakably to equal suffrage and was resolved to employ all constitutional means to carry through the suffrage plan. The Government, he also said, took the view that the Upper House was an equivalent factor of the legislature and must first pronounce its decision in the matter. The bill, accordingly, will be submitted also to the Upper Chamber.

Should this procedure not lead to the final acceptance of equal suffrage within a definite period, the Vice President said, the House would be dissolved at the earliest date compatible, in the opinion of the Government, with the war situation.

An amendment to Article 2 offered by the Centre Party was adopted to prevent the Lower House from being outvoted in the committee of the two houses, which sits in the event of a conflict, as that the budget right of the Lower House might not be prejudiced.

Deputy Lohmann's motion dealing with the question of plural voting, which provided that under certain circumstances two additional votes might be granted, was rejected by 338 to 73.

The franchise bill as amended, eliminating the provision for one vote for each man, was passed on the third reading. The Poles, Social Democrats, and Progressives voted against it. The House adjourned until June 4.

SOCIETY ATTENDS BENEFITS

Helps Home for Homeless Boys and American Girls' Aid.

Two benefit entertainments attracted society last night.

At the Ritz-Carlton a musical and dancing program was held in aid of the New York Home for Homeless Boys, Mrs. Philip A. S. Franklin acting as Chairman of arrangements. A boys' orchestra from the home played. H. Clinton Eva, Mrs. Tarleton Winchester, Mrs. Russell Lansdale, and Miss Grace Crossman were also on the program.

For the American Girl's Aid, a benefit performance by the Snarks and the Amateur Comedy Club drew a large assembly to the Hotel Plaza. "Some Boston Beans," "Food," and "Suppressed Desires" were the comedies offered. Articles made in France by the refugees and soldiers were on sale, and dancing followed the performance.

MISS BOURNE BETROTHED.

Frederick Gilbert Bourne of Indian Neck Hall, Oakdale, L. I., announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Marion C. Bourne, to Alexander Benson of Philadelphia.

Miss Bourne is prominent in the younger set of society, and is an enthusiastic motorist. She is a sister of George G. Bourne of 70 East Seventy-seventh Street, who married Miss Helen C. Whitney of Boston, and of Miss Marjorie Bourne and Howard Bourne. Her father is President of the Singer Manufacturing Company and ex-Commodore of the New York Yacht Club.

Mr. Benson is the son of Mrs. E. N. Benson of Philadelphia, and is in the diplomatic service. He was formerly Second Secretary of the American Embassy in Rome.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Boody-Valentine Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Boody of Brooklyn have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjory H. Boody, to Stephen Valentine, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Valentine, also of Brooklyn. Miss Boody is a granddaughter of ex-Mayor David A. Boody. Mr. Valentine is now in training at the Naval Aviation School at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Miss Peggy O'Connell Engaged.

The engagement of Miss Peggy O'Connell of Manhasset, L. I., to William J. Henderson has been announced. Miss O'Connell is Deputy Town Clerk of North Hempstead, being one of the first women ever appointed to that position in this State. Her brother, Thomas O'Connell, is Chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Nassau County.

Snyder-Wahle.

The marriage of Judson Fuller Snyder, U. S. N. R., and Miss Amelia Clara Wahle, a daughter of Charles F. G. Wahle, a lawyer of 220 Broadway, was celebrated at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Transfiguration by the Rev. W. W. Davis. A reception for the relatives and a few friends followed at the McAlpin. Miss Wahle was attended by Miss Alice Chute of New Rochelle and Mr. Snyder had Wells Conklin as his best man. Mr. Snyder has just been graduated from the Radio School at Columbia University.

H. R. Wenck Marries Miss Taylor.

The marriage of Harry Rutter Wenck of the Medical Department, attached to the Light Tank Corps, stationed at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, and son of W. G. Wenck of Northumberland, Penn., and Miss Alice Elisabeth Taylor, a daughter of Mrs. Taylor of 614 West 136th Street, took place at 9 o'clock yesterday morning at the Church of the Annunciation, 131st Street and Convent Avenue, the Rev. Father McCahill officiating. Miss Taylor had Miss Mary McCoy as her attendant, and Mr. Wenck's best man was Orville H. Browne. After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Wenck left for Atlantic City to spend their honeymoon.

Miss Barr to Wed Lieut. Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Barr of Brooklyn announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Mary Godfrey Barr, to Lieutenant Richard Dodson Robinson, 47th Infantry, N. A., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Robinson of Baltimore, Md. Lieutenant Robinson, who was graduated from Brown University, attended the first Summer camp at Plattsburg, and is now with the army in France.

REVENUE RECEIPTS EXCEED ESTIMATES

Treasury Statement Encourages Opponents of Legislation to Raise More Money.

WILL TAKE VIEW TO WILSON

Cabinet Member Tells House Leaders Wilson Is Still Undecided, and Is Not Backing Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Opponents of the proposed revenue legislation gained two points today. A statement was made to the Senate from the Treasury Department showing that the revenues which will be collected under the present law will be greatly in excess of former estimates, and a Cabinet member transmitted the positive denial to the House of President Wilson's supposed support of the measure.

This message represented the President as not having yet made up his mind, and as rather impressed in fact with the plea of Congressmen to get back home. It was said that he would not make a decision until he had had ample opportunity to discuss all phases of the bill both with Secretary McAdoo, who has been too ill to lay his complete plans before the President, and with Congressional leaders.

The information came as a reply to an inquiry by a leader of the House as to a published report that the President would soon insist publicly that Congress should proceed with the bill. As a result of this assurance and of the favorable Treasury statement Capitol leaders are planning to get their views before the President. A series of calls will be made by influential members of the House and Senate in which all phases of the "untimeliness" of the proposed law will be laid before the President.

He was represented by the Cabinet member today as being convinced that more taxes should be raised and uncertain on the sole point of whether the bill should be pressed now or next Fall. It is likely that Democrats responsible for the campaign next Fall which will decide the political complexion of Congress may ask Secretary McAdoo to look again into what he considers necessary for legislation.

A bit of ammunition to work with was furnished the Congressional leaders this afternoon when the Treasury Department sent to the Senate in response to a resolution by Senator Pomerene of Ohio a statement that the present revenue law will, under present estimates, raise $4,095,609,000, as against $3,000,000,000 estimated when the bill was drafted. It may be that when the final income tax and excess profits tax figures are in an even more favorable balance may be shown.

The figures, however, are said by the Treasury Department to be quite accurate, so far as it has prepared and totaled bills which it will send the various taxpayers for collection. The details are income and excess profits, $3,648,899,000; customs, $180,000,000; miscellaneous, $270,000,000, of which $40,000,000 is from increased postal rates; sale of public lands, $1,800,000.

A situation which has given Congressional leaders some worry is that the oversubscription of the last Liberty Loan appears not to have been as large as had been expected. Some estimates of as high as $5,000,000,000 had been made, and as the Treasury Department had decided to take all that was offered, it was hoped that a substantial amount of revenue for which plans could not be laid would be realized. While the loan figures are incomplete, it seems certain that these hopes are not well founded.

Senator Simmons and Chairman Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee are still awaiting word as to when Secretary McAdoo will be ready to see them. He is reported as stronger, but as yet not ready to talk business.

PLEDGES AID TO NATION IN HEALTH MATTERS

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Following conferences today between Dr. R. S. Copeland, the new Health Commissioner of New York and Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the Public Health Service, Acting Surgeon General Colonel James W. Furbush of the Army, and Surgeon General W. C. Braisted of the Navy, it was announced that the Health Department of New York would co-operate fully with the national health services.

The Federal health authorities, by the exchange of views at the conferences, were assured that there would be no lowering of the standards of health conservation in New York. No details of policy were entered into.

The policy of disorganizing, retrenchment, and the substitution of talent of lesser efficiency in the New York health service, it was distinctly said, would not be permitted to continue.

Surgeon General Blue expressed the highest satisfaction tonight at the outcome of the visit of Dr. Copeland to Washington. He said that he felt confident that there would be the most complete co-operation between the city and the Federal authorities, and that the result would be to the advantage of the people of New York and to the national services interested.

The Health Department made public yesterday letters received by Commissioner Copeland from Secretary of War Baker and Surgeon General Braisted of the Navy. In his letter Secretary Baker expressed his appreciation of the offer of co-operation, extended to the War Department by Dr. Copeland. Surgeon General Braisted's letter was similar in tone.

At the request of Mayor Hylan, who had received numerous complaints from persons living near the garbage plant at Lake Island, Staten Island, an inspection of the plant was made yesterday by health officials. Since the garbage plant was constructed at Lake Island many complaints had been made regarding the fumes.

The Executive Committee of the Bronx County Medical Society last night at a meeting at Ebling's Casino adopted a resolution commending the action of ex-Health Commissioner Lewis Amster in resigning his post. The resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That the Bronx County Medical Society hereby expresses its hearty approval of the action of Dr. J. Lewis Amster in resigning from the position of Commissioner of Health of the City of New York. We are convinced, from the circumstances and manner of his resignation, that he was actuated by a sincere desire to act in the best interests of the community and the City of New York and the medical profession.

The resolution was introduced by Dr. J. A. Scheller and seconded by Dr. H. I. Radin.

TO DEBATE SIXTUS LETTERS

Commons Discussion to be of "Highest Importance," It Is Said.

LONDON, May 15.—The Manchester Guardian says that the peace offer made to France last year by Austria, as revealed recently in the letters written by Emperor Charles to Prince Sixtus, will form the subject of a debate of the highest importance in the House of Commons tomorrow.

Since the publication of Emperor Charles's letters, the question has been raised whether the Austrian offer should not have received greater attention, and especially whether President Wilson should not have been consulted.

LIBERTY LOAN TOTAL IS DELAYED BY BANKS

Federal Reserve Institutions Unable to Complete Tabulation of Subscriptions on Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—It has been simply impossible for the Federal Reserve Banks to complete the tabulation and classification of subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan on time. Today was the last allowed them in which to close up their work and enable the Treasury Department to arrive at the grand total of subscriptions. No announcement could be made at the Treasury Department tonight as to when the banks would be able to finish their task, but it is expected that the totals will be reached by the end of the week.

Today's Treasury statement showed that in the first half of the day there had been paid into the Treasury for bonds of the Third Loan $1,213,854,402, which, with payments made in April, makes the complete total so far received from the Third Loan $1,818,654,084. There is a large volume of payments to be made before the total of the loan has been determined.

The Treasury Department has mailed to holders of registered bonds of the Second Liberty Loan the checks covering the first semi-annual interest, payable today. The books of the Second Liberty Loan closed on April 15, in order that the preparation of the interest payment might be unhampered by transfers and exchanges, and on Monday there were 323,673 registered bonds of this loan outstanding, representing an aggregate face value of $409,733,500. The bonds are held by 306,908 individual owners, in the following denominations:

$50	110,390	$5,000	8,693
100	244,035	10,000	8,931
500	68,537	50,000	776
1,000	80,477	100,000	934

While the registered part of the Second Liberty Loan now stands at $409,733,500, only $353,124,250 represents original issues, the difference representing coupon bonds exchanged for registered bonds. On original deliveries on subscriptions for coupon bonds of this loan the following coupon bonds were delivered to subscribers:

100	4,444,452	5,000	47,808
500	654,421	10,000	46,001

During the closed period 306,908 interest checks, aggregating $8,194,670 were prepared. Prior to the war the Treasury prepared approximately 150,000 checks annually for the payment of interest on registered bonds of all loans, the issue of these 150,000 checks being distributed through the year.

BRITISH BOND SALES DROP.

£619,000,000 Invested in War Funds from October to April.

LONDON, May 15, (via Ottawa.)—Savings certificates and the 4 and 5 per cent. war bonds which the Bank of England is issuing produced £619,000,000 from Oct. 1 to April 1, Chancellor Bonar Law said today in the House of Commons.

There had been a recent falling off in subscriptions, he added, but he was considering steps for stimulation of the campaign, and he was not in the least despondent over the prospects of obtaining the money required in this way.

The Chancellor indicated there would be no change in the new duties.

SEEK TO AID N. Y. INFIRMARY

Doctors Emphasize Need for Education of Women Physicians.

About 100 women physicians of New York gathered last night at the home of Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, 14 Washington Square North, and listened to prominent physicians appeal for a fund of $200,000 to enable the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, at 321 East Fifteenth Street, to continue its work among the poor and needy of the east side.

The Infirmary was established in 1853 by Doctors Elizabeth and Emily Blackwell, two women pioneers in the field of medicine. For the last sixty-five years the institution has ministered to the sick and needy of the east side and has introduced many of the new ideas in hospital work that have been followed in institutions all over the country.

Dr. Flexner described the need for physicians in the army and in civil-life at present. He said that soon there would be 20,000 medical men in service, all withdrawn from caring for the civilian population. It would be a simple calculation, he said, to learn how many physicians would be withdrawn in the event of the establishment of an army of 5,000,000, and in such circumstances, he declared, the people of the city should not allow the New York Infirmary for Women and Children to close its doors. Women in medicine must be willing to take the place of the men who have gone into service, said Dr. Flexner, and the community could not afford to deprive itself of an institution which had trained so many young women physicians.

LEWIS WILL STICK.

Friends Say He Will Ask for Votes as a Prohibition "Neutral."

Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, candidate for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination against Governor Whitman, will stay in the fight right up to the finish of the primaries. Mr. Lewis, who was in the city yesterday, would not discuss his candidacy, but friends made it clear there was no truth in the reports that the Attorney General had decided to oppose the Governor for the nomination for other than political reasons and would probably withdraw before primary day.

Mr. Lewis had a talk with William Barnes, leader of the Old Guard Republicans and anti-Whitman faction, and with Frederick C. Tanner, ex-Chairman of the State committee, who has been mentioned as the probable leader of the Lewis forces. Mr. Lewis also talked over the telephone with Jacob A. Livingston, Republican leader of Brooklyn, who is strongly opposed to Whitman. Mr. Lewis said he had not seen Col. Roosevelt and had no appointment to see him soon.

According to the Attorney General's friends, it has practically been settled that their candidate will make the basis of his campaign an attack upon the Whitman prohibition and third term issues. Mr. Lewis will go before the people as a prohibition "neutral," advocate a referendum on the ratification of the national prohibition amendment, and declare for local option. They believe that he would get strong support on a platform that the people be given an opportunity to express their opinions regarding prohibition.

NEWSPRINT STOCKS LOWER.

Shipments Exceeded Production in Four Weeks in April.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Newsprint paper production during the four weeks ended April 28 amounted to 102,905 net tons, shipments were 105,520 tons, and stocks at the end of the period 24,884 tons, or 2,120 tons less than at the beginning of the period.

Newsprint mill stocks are about equal to one week's output. Fifty-nine mills were operated during the period.

Marshall McCormack.

BERRYVILLE, Va., May 15.—Marshall McCormack, general counsel for the Norfolk & Western Railroad, died at his home here today. He was born in Clarke County, Va., on June 29, 1849, and was educated at the University of Virginia and the Virginia Military Academy. In 1871 he was admitted to the Virginia bar. He was a member of the Virginia Senate from 1883 to 1887 and originated the Anderson-McCormack election law. Mr. McCormack was a member of the American, Virginia, and Roanoke Bar Associations.

HEARST PAPERS SUE OUT AN INJUNCTION

ORDINANCE IS DENOUNCED

Ex-Ambassador Gerard Makes Application to the Court—Hearing Set for Next Week.

The following announcement was made last night by The New York American:

"Justice Greenbaum, sitting in Part I., Special Term, Supreme Court, yesterday signed an injunction restraining the Mayor, the Aldermen, and the Chief of Police of Mt. Vernon from enforcing an extraordinary ordinance passed by the City Council on Tuesday evening.

"The Aldermen assumed to themselves the right to exclude any publication whatever from sale in the City of Mount Vernon. In the resolution they named The New York American and The New York Evening Journal and made it a crime for any one to sell those papers in the City of Mount Vernon. The action was taken suddenly and without any notice to these two newspapers and without public hearing.

"Ambassador Gerard of the law firm of Scott, Gerard & Bowers immediately made application to Judge Greenbaum for an order restraining the Mount Vernon officials from taking any action whatsoever against the two newspapers named under this unusual and unheard-of and unprecedented ordinance.

"Judge Greenbaum, after reading the ordinance and the papers in respect thereto, immediately signed an order restraining the enforcement of the ordinance. This order is returnable next week, when the Mayor and Aldermen must try to convince the court that they have the power, without public hearing and on their own motion, to prevent the sale of any newspaper or publication that they may choose to name or wish to exclude for any reason, public or private."

SUMMIT, N. J., May 15.—Mayor Ruford Franklin went to each of the seven newsdealers of Summit today and induced them to sign an agreement pledging the newsdealers to refrain from selling the New York American and The New York Evening Journal. All of the newsdealers signed the agreement, which reads:

"We, the undersigned newsdealers of Summit, agree not to sell or have for sale The New York American or The New York Evening Journal during the continuance of the war."

Mayor Franklin is a lawyer with offices in New York, but has paid little attention to practice since he was appointed Chairman of Local Exemption Board No. 3 of Union County.

Asks Hylan to Drop Hearst.

The removal of William R. Hearst as a member of the Mayor's Committee on Taxation and the Investigation of Mortgage Loans was demanded yesterday, in a letter written to Mayor Hylan by William F. Rae, President of the Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers. Mr. Rae said in the letter that the views of Mr. Hearst upon mortgages, as expressed in financial articles in his paper, The New York American, made him an undesirable member of the committee. One paragraph of the letter of the real estate brokers said: "Do you think that the editor and owner of a great newspaper advocating the calling of mortgages on the homes of the people can properly serve the purposes of your commission?"

ASSAIL GERMAN PAPERS.

About a thousand persons were present at the Waldorf last night at the mass meeting called by the American Defense Society and the American Patriotic Legion to discuss the suppression of German language newspapers and the abolition of the teaching of German in the schools of America. The Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, the chief speaker, asserted that we were at war with Germany and all Germans and that America should not permit German language papers to flourish in this country any more than the German Government would allow English papers in Prussia. Dr. Brady said that it was not the Kaiser alone with whom America was at war, but every German of every walk in life.

Henry C. Quinby, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Defense Society, who presided, said that fourteen German language papers had ceased publication. Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field told of her efforts against German language papers, while Robert G. Patterson, an American and member of the Red Cross, who was gassed in France, and Thomas Skeyhill, a wounded Anzac, also urged the suppression of German language papers.

Ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard, who was expected to be one of the speakers, sent word at the last moment he could not attend. He expressed his approval of the movement.

House Applause for Clark's Son.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Unusual tribute was paid by the House to Lieut. Col. Bennet M. Clark, former parliamentarian of the House, now in France, and son of the Speaker. Every member rose and applauded, and tears welled in Speaker Clark's eyes when Representative Garrett of Tennessee, announcing Clark's safe arrival at a European port, said that he had endeared himself to all members of the House, and that the House had every confidence that in his chivalry and ability in the field his service would "ring true to the Commonwealth of Missouri and to the blood that flows in his veins."

Appoint Buyer for Local Red Cross.

Hugh Lynch, who is assistant to Secretary S. C. Mead of the Merchants' Association of New York, will on June 1 become associated with the local Red Cross Bureau of Purchases, 222 Fourth Avenue, as office manager and buyer of miscellaneous supplies. He will receive no remuneration from the Red Cross, his services being donated by the association for an indefinite period. He will succeed J. D. Campbell, who has joined the navy.

Locomotive Engineers to Join A. F. L.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 15.—Delegates to the triennial convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in session here, today unanimously adopted resolutions affiliating the engineers' organization with the American Federation of Labor. Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation, was officially notified of the action taken by the convention.

Americans on Canadian List.

OTTAWA, May 15.—The names of the following Americans appear in today's Canadian casualty list: Wounded—C. W. Donald, Portland, Ore.; P. Freeman, Boston, Mass.; W. Marshall, Jersey City, N. J.; C. G. Frisbie, Portland, Ore.

Private in Marines Dead.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Today's Marine Corps casualty list contained only one name, that of Private Herman Losley Wilson of Frankilnville, Ill., dead of disease in France.

BENNETT WILL SECRET UNTIL AFTER FUNERAL

Body of Newspaper Owner Will Be Taken to Paris for Interment.

PARIS, May 15.—The body of James Gordon Bennett, proprietor of The New York Herald, who died at Beaulieu yesterday, will be brought to Paris early next week in accordance with Mr. Bennett's desire, often expressed, that Paris be his last resting place. Mr. Bennett's legal representative in Paris is informed that it is not expected that the will will be made public until after the funeral services.

In an article in Le Journal, Maurice de Waleffe writes:

"James Gordon Bennett was more than famous. It may be said of him that he was immortal, having created the type of the transatlantic millionaire, serving as a model for all our novelists."

This is but one of a dozen kindly and appreciative references in the Paris morning newspapers to Mr. Bennett. The "Newspaper Napoleon" and the "Maecenas of Sports and Arts" are some of the characterizations of him by the writers of the tributes. All of them lay emphasis upon his labors to the end of securing the entry of America into the war.

Uncertainty as to what disposition would be made of the property of James Gordon Bennett continued yesterday. It is not yet known whether his will will be filed in New York or Paris, nor who is to inherit his newspapers and other property. Robert W. Candler, his attorney, had no information to give yesterday, and nothing was known by the executives of The New York Herald as to the settlement of the estate.

Henry Lloyd Herbert, Chairman of the Polo Association since 1890, yesterday paid this tribute to Mr. Bennett as a sportsman:

"It is my desire as Chairman of the Polo Association, and as a friend, to add a personal tribute to the late James Gordon Bennett, with whose friendship I have been favored more than forty years. I feel sure that the people of the nation are a stronger and more healthful race through the efforts, influence, and aid which Mr. Bennett has always shown toward legitimate sports.

"It was he who introduced polo into this country, and that is only one of the many examples of what he had done for the development of health and strength of the men and women of this country.

"Out of 1,440 active polo players there are now 985 strong, able-bodied men in the service of their country, 6 of whom are Major Generals, 6 Brigadier Generals, 39 Colonels, 90 Lieutenant Colonels, 289 Majors, 238 Captains, 21 sergeants and Corporals, and 321 in the service, rank unknown."

DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND

LONDON, May 15.—Henry George Percy, seventh Duke of Northumberland, died at Alnwick Castle, Northumberland, last night. His heir is his eldest living son, Earl Percy, formerly an aid to the Governor General of Canada. A younger son, Lord Eustace Percy, is a member of the staff of the British Embassy at Washington.

The Duke of Northumberland was born on May 29, 1846, the eldest son of the sixth Duke of Northumberland and Louisa, Duchess of Northumberland. The Duke was educated at Oxford University, and after leaving the university entered politics as Conservative member of the House of Commons for Northumberland from 1868 to 1885. In 1887 he became a member of the House of Lords, and succeeded his father as Duke of Northumberland in 1899.

The Duke of Northumberland held many positions of honor. From 1874 to 1875 he was Treasurer of the Household of Queen Victoria, and during the coronation of King George in 1911 he was appointed by the King to serve as Lord High Steward of England. He was Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland and Chancellor of Durham, and President of the Archaeological Institute from 1884 to 1892. Since 1900 the Duke has been a Trustee of the British Museum.

The Duke of Northumberland married Lady Edith Campbell in 1868, who died in 1913. He was a member of the Athenaeum, Carlton, St. Stephen's, Travellers', Northumberland, and Northern Counties' Clubs.

Richard Walsh.

Richard Walsh, one of the founders of the Amphion Musical Society, died in his eighty-ninth year on Tuesday at his home, 255 Penn Street, Brooklyn, from heart disease. Mr. Walsh was born in Manchester, England, and in his early days was a tenor singer. He was the choir leader and tenor singer in the old Central Baptist Church and also sang in other Brooklyn churches. The Amphion Musical Society, of which he was the first President, erected the Amphion Academy, which later became the Amphion Theatre, and was for many years the leading playhouse in the Eastern District. Mr. Walsh was a charter member of the Congress Club.

Count de Biscuccia-Villafranca.

Count Silvio N. de Biscuccia-Villafranca, member of an old Venetian family, died yesterday in this city at the age of sixty-six. He made his home at 200 Madison Avenue and is survived by his wife and two sons.

Count and Countess de Biscuccia-Villafranca and their children arrived here three years ago. Their sons went to Cuba to take charge of a sugar factory in which their father was interested. The family made their home in recent years mainly in London and Paris.

Stanislas Szwajkart, Polish Editor.

CHICAGO, May 15.—Stanislas Szwajkart, editor of the Polish Daily News, and one of the foremost Poles in the United States, dropped dead while walking in Milwaukee Avenue today. He was knighted by the Pope.

Obituary Notes.

WILLIAM T. WEIR, a contractor in Port Chester, N. Y., died in the United Hospital in that place yesterday in his sixty-sixth year.

YANKEES SUCCUMB TO BROWNS IN A LONG BATTLE PUNCTUATED WITH MANY THRILLS

BANISHED YANKEES GLORY IN REVENGE

CELEBRATE AS BROWNS WIN

The Yankee players who were placed on the bargain counter last Winter by Manager Miller Huggins came back to the Polo Grounds yesterday with the St. Louis Browns to haunt the man who auctioned them off. Urban Shocker, Les Nunamaker, and Joe Gedeon, who were part and parcel of the famous trade for Del Pratt, bobbed up dangerously in all nooks and corners of the matinée which oozed slowly through twelve innings, and at some time, well along in the gathering night, was won by St. Louis by a score of 5 to 4.

And don't think that the players showered on the Browns in that Pratt deal weren't tickled half to death. When the last man was out in the twelfth, Shocker jumped around like a schoolboy and threw his cap in the air. He rushed up to Nunamaker and shook his hand. Fritz Maisel also joined in the celebration with Gedeon and the rest, and it set Huggins to wondering whether or not he was a David Harum.

Large chunks of excitement were sprinkled throughout the game, the most emotional moment coming in the last of the ninth, when the Yanks tied up the score at 4 to 4. It was getting late and folks were getting uneasy. It was the biggest week-day crowd that ever turned out to see the St. Louis Browns, and when the score was tied there was a rush back to the grandstand seats again. All the telephone booths were jammed with men waiting in line, to tell the missus to keep the beef stew on the fire. Yesterday's game holds the season's record for breaking up dinner engagements along Broadway.

Yankee Chatter Annoys Evans.

The game was full of snarls and arguments, and Umpire Bill Evans had to raise his voice in authority to the players of both clubs. There was a lot of verbal gas escaping from the Yankee bench in the ninth, and Evans detected the trainer of the Yankees, Doc Woods, spilling chatter right and left. The umpire ordered the Doc right out of the park, which was something entirely new in baseball. It is the first time in many a day that a poor innocent trainer ever got chased out of the orchard like a common ball player. Doc Woods is new with the Yanks this year, but he had to go. He picked up his bag containing the hammers, monkey wrenches, and saws with which he doctors up the injured Yank players, and hiked for the clubhouse.

The Yanks started after Shocker in the first inning with a rush and nearly had him standing on his head. Gilhooley banged a hot liner at Urban, and he could only knock it down, Gil reaching first safely. Peck sent Gilhooley to third with a single, and Baker slammed a two-base drive to left which scored both runners. Baker tried to stretch his slap into a triple, but he was nipped by the ancient and honorable James Austin at third. Pipp also got a hit in that inning, a single, and died for the third out trying to squeeze a double out of it.

Slim Love, Huggins's first choice against the Browns, was wild in the first and second. With two gone in the first he walked Sisler, and Sis stole second. He walked Joe Gedeon and Joe and Sissler pulled a double steal. He also walked Tim Hendryx, also a former Yank, and jammed the bases. Earl Smith then fanned and saved Slim a lot of embarrassment.

Shocker Glories in Revenge.

Love, aided by good support, kept the Browns from causing any trouble until the fourth. After Earl Smith had flied to Marsans in this round, Nunamaker walked and so did Gerber. Shocker then picked out this occasion to get even with Huggins for firing him by smashing a single to right centre which scored Nunamaker. Johnny Tobin hoisted a fly to Ping Bodie in left and Gerber raced for the plate. Umpire Evans first called him out, but when Truck Hannah dropped the ball he reversed his verdict and Gerber was safe and the score was tied.

Sisler opened the next inning with a double, and Ray Caldwell supplanted Love on the pitching hill. With the bases loaded and two gone Caldwell faced a trying ordeal with Gerber at the bat. He finally struck him out, and the old Polo Grounds echoed with cheers.

The Browns went to the front in the seventh. With one out Gedeon doubled to left and went to third on Demmitt's single. Smith rolled a bouncer to Peck, who chucked the ball home to get Gedeon, but Umpire Bill Evans decided that Hannah had overlooked the all important function of tagging the runner with the ball. Nunamaker then made Huggins wince by cracking a three-bagger to right centre, which scored Demmitt.

The Browns were pretty confident of the game then by a score of 4 to 2 until the last half of the ninth, when the Yanks showed that there was still a lot of fight left in them. After Marsans had died at first, Hannah walked and went to second on Shocker's balk. Caldwell skied to Demmitt and Gilhooley got a pass. Peck singled to left, scoring Hannah, and when Smith threw the ball wild returning it to the infield Gilhooley also scored with the tying run.

The Yanks had a good chance to win in the tenth, but Shocker mowed them down. St. Louis won in the twelfth, when Demmitt singled, advanced on Smith's sacrifice, and scored on Nunamaker's single to centre.

MACKMEN TAKE LONG GAME.

Coveleskie Wavers in 13th and Indians Are Beaten, 3 to 2.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—Coveleskie weakened in the thirteenth inning today, after Cleveland had scored a run in the first half of the inning, and Philadelphia won, 3 to 2. With one out, Captain Oldring hit a single, then Coveleskie passed both Jamieson and Kopp. With the bases filled, Walker hit sharply to Halt, who made a great one-hand stop, and touched out Jamieson on the base line, but stumbled and could not complete a double play. Oldring scored the tying run, and Burns's third hit, a single to left, scored Kopp with the winning run.

OLIVER TEBEAU A SUICIDE.

Former Baseball Manager, Despondent Over Illness, Shoots Himself.

ST. LOUIS, May 15.—Oliver P. Tebeau, who in the early days of the National League was manager and first baseman of the Cleveland Club, shot and killed himself here today, following a period of illness.

Tebeau managed the Cleveland Club for several years, and when its franchise was moved to St. Louis came here and for a year piloted the local club. He was succeeded by John J. McGraw, now of the New York Nationals.

REDS ADD GIANTS TO THEIR STRING

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 15.—The Giants were the unwilling victims of the Reds' sixth consecutive victory today, losing the opening game of the series to Matty's men, 3 to 2. Rube Benton allowed only five hits, while the Giants nicked Schneider and Eller for ten blows. But the Reds were more successful in bunching their safeties, and an error by Heinie Zimmerman figured in the scoring of one of Cincinnati's runs.

Schneider, who started the game for the Reds, was injured in the third inning, after the Giants had reached him for two runs. Eller, who finished the game, was very effective.

McGraw's men were the first to score. In the third inning Kauff singled to centre and stole second. Burns crashed one past Groh, the ball bounding off the wall of the grandstand in left field, scoring Kauff. Groh and Blackburne pursued the pellet, leaving third base uncovered, and Burns, quick to note this, rounded second and dashed for the far corner.

Schneider ran over to third and took a throw from Groh, and as Burns slid into the bag Schneider attempted to put the ball on him. He was unsuccessful, and in addition received a painful bruise on his right arm, which necessitated his retirement from the pastime. With Eller in the box, Burns made a daring steal of home. Eller allowed only six scattered hits during the remainder of the game. The Giants had him in one or two bad holes, but he emerged from them with very little trouble.

Benton started the eighth by walking Groh. Lee Magee's sacrifice put little Heinie on second, whence he scored on Roush's double to left centre. Roush attempted to stretch the hit into a triple, but was cut down at third on Fletcher's fine relay of Burns's throw to Zimmerman. However, the damage was already done.

OPERATE ON LARRY DOYLE.

It was learned yesterday that Larry Doyle, captain and second baseman of the Giants, who has not been with the team for a number of days, was admitted to the New York Post-Graduate Hospital Tuesday, and was operated upon that night for intestinal trouble. His condition yesterday was reported as favorable.

Doyle has not been with the Giants since the recent series at Boston. When he did not play in the game of May 6 it was said that he was suffering from a mild attack of malaria, and that he would probably return to the lineup within a few days. He came back to New York with the club on Wednesday, May 7, and when the team started out on the first Western invasion on May 10 Doyle remained here. It had been supposed until yesterday's announcement of the operation that the veteran player was rapidly recovering from his supposedly minor affliction. No complications are anticipated by the attendant physicans.

ROBINS FALL UPON COOPER.

Assail Pirate Pitcher Who Shut Out Giants, and Win, 5 to 1.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., May 15.—The fact that Wilbur Cooper shut out the New York Giants last Saturday had no terrors for the Dodgers today, and after he had held them for four innings without a hit, they suddenly let loose, and in the next five innings smashed out seven singles and two triples, all of which tallied five runs, more than enough to win. The Pirates could only garner one little tally off Rube Marquard.

That was by his old team mate, George Cutshaw, who singled to centre in the second inning, stole second, and scored on King's hot shot to right field. The Pirates got a hit in each of the first five innings, but after the fifth the Rube was invincible and sent the Buccaneers back to the bench as fast as they came up.

Tommy Farrell, whose mighty drive in the tenth inning of last Saturday's game with Brown gave Columbia a 3 to 2 victory, pulled his teammates to the front again on South Field yesterday afternoon by scoring a 3 to 0 shutout over Stevens. Farrell showed the best control he has exhibited this season, allowing three hits and permitting only one of the engineers to steam around the bases as far as second.

ARMY NINE ON A RAMPAGE.

Oliphant Leads Attack That Beats Springfield Y. M. C. A. College.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 15.—Contrary to expectations Elmer Oliphant, star athlete and Captain of the army baseball nine, reappeared in togs today and took his place in left field. The other upper classmen who have been absent for the last two games, due to the intensive war work incident to the premature graduation next month, also got back into the game.

As a result Oliphant and his teammates walloped Springfield Y. M. C. A. College 11, to 1. Oliphant's record at the bat was four safe drives in five times up. He scored three runs and batted in two more. One of his drives was for the circuit with two men on bases. Jones pitched airtight ball for the Army.

FORDHAM PILES UP RUNS.

Vanquishes St. John's College Nine in Ragged Game 17 to 6.

The Fordham nine easily vanquished the nine of St. John's College, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon on St. John's Field by a score of 17 to 6. Both teams hit the ball hard, the Maroon collegians getting seventeen hits and the Brooklyn players eleven. Two triples and five doubles were included in the collection. Loose fielding by St. John's helped Fordham materially. The game was called in the seventh inning by agreement.

The score by innings:

St. John's	0 0 1 0 4 1 0	6	11	6

COLGATE IN A LANDSLIDE.

Nine from Hamilton is Swamped by West Virginia.

Special to The New York Times.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., May 15.—West Virginia swamped Colgate here this afternoon, the final score being 16 to 3.

Rodgers had a field day at the bat, getting three doubles and a single in five times up. Gregg also hit consistently. Reed, More, and McBride, for Colgate, played well in the field, as well as getting nine of the ten blows the team amassed.

The score by innings:

PREAKNESS SHARED BY EAST AND WEST

PIMLICO, Md., May 15.—More than 30,000 persons saw three-year-olds representing Eastern and Western sportsmen divide the honors in the running of the Preakness Stakes here today, for which $30,000 was given in added money by the Maryland Jockey Club. The imported colt, War Cloud, redeemed his defeat in the Kentucky Derby by placing the first division to the credit of A. K. Macomber, while in the second half Jack Hare, Jr., carried the colors of W. E. Applegate to victory. Both horses won with comparative ease, but the Western colt had a greater margain at the finish than did War Cloud.

Because of his victories as a two-year-old, War Cloud had to concede weight to the rest of the field of ten, picking up 110 pounds to 107 carried by Lanius. The latter failed to show the brilliant form expected of him and at the finish was soundly beaten for second place by Sunny Slope, a rank outsider, owned by William Martin. There were four moneys in each of the races and Johren one of the Whitney entry, accounted for the minor position, four lengths behind Lanius.

War Cloud was handled with extreme confidence by Johnny Loftus, and the clever jockey took his time in allowing his mount to find his feet. While the Macomber crack was being rated along in third place, Wilfred Viau's George Starr was setting the pace, with Harry Payne Whitney's Flags in close attendance, half a dozen lengths in front of War Cloud. After being held in restraint for the first half mile War Cloud was allowed to move up to his field and at three-quarters he was leading by half a length.

Sunny Slope, meantime, had followed the rush of War Cloud and was in second place, with Flags third. From that point to the finish Loftus, on War Cloud, just kept his eye on Callahan, who had the mount on the outsider, and the pair drew clear away from the rest of the field. Sunny Slope struggled along gamely, but there was no overtaking the Macomber champion, and War Cloud crossed the line with three-quarters of a length to spare. Lanius came with a rush in the final eighth and disposed of Johren, which just nosed out Johren for fourth money. The time of the race was 1:53 3-5.

Jack Hare, Jr.'s splendid form was the cause of the field in the second division being reduced to half a dozen, and the Western son of Marathon was made an odds on favorite, with S. Ross's The Porter next in demand. Jack O'Hare, Jr., was allowed to go to the front by his rider, Peak, and never was in danger of being caught. He rated along in front of The Porter, always with a safe advantage of from two to three lengths. Kummer was hustling The Porter along and he held second place easily all the way. It took very little urging to land him a winner by two lengths, while The Porter was six lengths in front of A. Neal's Kate Bright, which outgamed J. E. Widener's Trompe La Mort for third money.

RACING BEGINS HERE TODAY.

The local racing season of 1918 will begin this afternoon at the Jamaica track and an excellent card of six races has been arranged by the Metropolitan Jockey Club for the enjoyment of New York racegoers. Even though there will be a conflict with Maryland racing until after the Pimlico meeting ends tomorrow the local association has not suffered in the matter of entries and every event is well filled, while a field of ten good sprinters is named for the Paumonok Handicap, the feature of the program.

A shipment of 200 thoroughbreds arrived from Pimlico on Monday, which brought the total of horses on the Long Island track up to more than 2,000. A cold Winter and fine Spring favored the racers and most of them are wound up for the coming campaign, which will continue in New York State until the end of September. The rain of Tuesday was all that was needed to put the track in first-class condition and with fine weather today the going will be fast.

Several of the heavily weighted horses have declined the allotments in the Paumonok, which is a sprint of six furlongs. This leaves R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Campfire, the champion two-year-old of 1916, at the head of the list with 123 pounds. Though Campfire failed as a distance performer he won the Toboggan Handicap at six furlongs as a three-year-old, and there is no reason why he should not be in the front flight today. James Butler's old campaigner High Noon and A. K. Macomber's Hank O'Day are weighted at 120 pounds, and R. F. Carman's Startling, fresh from Pimlico, is in with 110—the same weight allotted to Old Koenig. The light weights are mostly three-year-olds, making their first start against older horses.

The time schedule of previous years will be adhered to, the first race being set for 2:30. Trains will be run from the Pennsylvania and Flatbush stations, beginning at 12:30 and at intervals until 1:55.

FIRST RACE.—For two-year-olds, selling, five furlongs. War Zone, (imp.,) 116 pounds; Harry M. THOROUGHBREDS FOR U. S.

Jockey Club Gives Four to Government for Remount Purposes.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Active steps toward the improvement of the cavalry remount have been taken by the Federal authorities, who have asked The Jockey Club of New York for four thoroughbred stallions. In response to the request, which was made by the Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Animal Husbandry, the turf leaders have placed six horses at the disposal of the Government from which a selection will be made.

All of the stallions offered have raced with success, possess size, bone, and conformation, and have splendid dispositions. All are stake winners, and with the exception of Textile, which is a chestnut, are bays or browns, the ideal color for troop horses. The horses, their date of birth, and breeding follow:

Four of the six will be selected by H. H. Reese, who has had charge of the Front Royal, Virginia, experimental station, where thoroughbred and standard-bred sires have been located for some years. They will be distributed throughout the West at Fort Sill and other remount stations, where they will be mated with mares of quality, which have been purchased by officers of the remount division of the United States Army within the last year. These purchases aggregate 1,475 to date, and one-third of them will be sent to Front Royal.

The experience of foreign Governments and the experiments at Front Royal, where sires of blood such as Henry of Navarre and Octagon, which were donated to the Government by Major August Belmont, have proved beyond a doubt the merits of the thoroughbred as a top-cross. In addition there was the growing necessity for renewing the sadly depleted supply of remounts for the American troops abroad to serve as a spur at this time.

Cochran Defeats Mayer Twice.

Welker Cochran won both games in the 18.2 balkline match with Joseph Mayer, which began at Maurice Daly's Seventh Avenue Academy yesterday. In the afternoon Cochran ran out his string of 300 while Mayer was getting 84. The former's average was exactly 30, and his best run was 79. In the evening game Mayer did a bit better, clustering together 127 points while Cochran was getting 300. Cochran's best run in the evening was 165, and his average was 33 3-9.

ONE-ARMED PLAYER GAINS SEMI-FINALS

H. R. Hathaway Triumphs Over J. S. O'Boyle in Harlem Tennis Tourney.

By another remarkable demonstration of tennis skill, Harrison R. Hathaway, the one-armed player who has been the sensation of the Harlem open tennis tournament, advanced to the semi-final round of the singles event yesterday when he vanquished no less formidable a rival than the former Georgetown player, J. S. O'Boyle. The score of the match was 6—0, 3—6, 6—3. Hathaway's victory over Sigmund Spaeth in an earlier round stamped him as a player of merit, but it was hardly anticipated that he would be able to earn a decision over such an accomplished racquet wielder as O'Boyle.

The great resourcefulness of Hathaway's play was shown throughout the contest. With a pronounced tendency toward the net position, he forced the play at the barrier from the outset, and O'Boyle was completely routed in the first clash, failing to get a single game in the opening set. It was at once apparent that Hathaway possessed a clever overhead game, and his smashing was a telling factor in the match. He volleyed sharply and the placements which he was continually shooting into his opponent's territory forced O'Boyle to play defensively for the greater part of the time.

O'Boyle, with one set against him, struggled bravely against the sturdy play of his rival in the second set, and succeeded in gaining the laurels, but he could not maintain the pace through the next set, and Hathaway forged ahead and won because of wealth of brilliant tennis.

The doubles tournament started yesterday, but it was rather an unimpressive beginning for this part of the tournament, as only three matches were played and two of those went by the default route. The contest that was actually played out was a second round encounter which Ingo Hartman and Elliott Binzen experienced little difficulty in winning from Iler and Schmidt at 6—1, 6—1.

The summaries:

SINGLES.—Fourth Round—Harrison R. Hathaway defeated J. S. O'Boyle, 6—0, 3—6, 6—3.
DOUBLES.—First Round—Iler and Schmidt won from Mersereau and partner by default; Ingo Hartman and Elliott Binzen won from S. Spaeth and partner by default.
Second Round—Hartman and Binzen defeated Iler and Schmidt, 6—1, 6—1.

SAILORS HAVE FIELD DAY.

N. Y. A. C. Conducts Athletic Contests at Pelham Bay Station.

Sailors of Uncle Sam in training at the Pelham Bay Naval Training Station had an abundance of fun, plenty of entertainment and considerable exercise yesterday in a series of track and field competitions held at the station by the New York Athletic Club. The field day was another step in the program of the Mercury Foot organization to furnish relaxation for the nation's fighters in training. Preceding the games there was a review and drill directed by Captain Franklin, which was witnessed by Admiral Grasset of the French Navy.

Sailor-athletes of the Third Regiment showed superiority, and if there had been a point score, would have won it easily. They finished first in four of the nine events. R. L. Kruser was the most successful competitor, winning two prizes, first in the equipment race, and third in the 100-yard handicap event. In addition, he was a member of the winning team in the medicine ball relay.

The two sprinting events attracted the biggest entries, eighty starting in the novice century, while about forty tried for prizes in the handicap dash. Both events were well contested and resulted in close finishes.

In the half-mile handicap two athletes of prominence in metropolitan circles were among the first three to finish. They were Joe Giorgio, the former Paulist A. C. distance runner, the winner, who carried the Second Regiment the former Millrose A. A. harrier, who emblem to victory, and Charlie Pores, finished third. Pores is a member of the First Regiment. He started from scratch, while Giorgio had an allowance of eight yards.

The smaller a man's capital, the fewer risks he can afford to run.

THE COTTON MARKET

Prices Decline from 47 to 60 Points Net on Favorable Weather Report.

The local cotton market continues to be primarily a weather market. Yesterday's Government weather report was unexpectedly favorable, giving the most optimistic view of new crop prospects that has yet emanated from official sources. This was all, and more than all that was needed to inspire local traders to sell, and prices went down accordingly. At the bottom of the swing prices were low enough to tempt considerable bargain-hunting by trade and Liverpool representatives, but this was only supplementary to short covering which checked the decline at a steady closing, with prices off from 47 to 60 points net.

The opening was off from 3 to 6 points, and the market declined an average of nearly 40 points further, under selling from all around the ring, before the rally on covering and evening-up which preceded the appearance of the weather summary. Practically all interests, local, Wall Street, Western, Southern, and Liverpool, promptly threw fresh selling orders into the ring in a general scramble which forced October down to 24 cents flat, only a few points from the low level of the current movement. It was at this point, however, that the new crop months, and October particularly, became the object of bargain-taking by domestic trade representatives, and this with the last-hour realizing steadied the market 10 or 20 points up from the bottom.

The trade is now looking for the May 25 condition and acreage report, confident of favorable prospects in both respects. Southern spot markets yesterday were unchanged to 50 points lower, but are still far above parity with local quotations.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,526 packages. Feeling barely steady. High grades of fresh creamery are not over plenty, but the secondary qualities are beginning to accumulate a little, and there is some anxiety to sell. The range of values, however, is about the same as previously reported. Creamery, higher scoring than extras, a lb., 47@47½c; extras, (92 score,) 46¼@46½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43½@46c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38¼@42½c; thirds, 35@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 49@49½c; extras, 48@48½c; firsts, 44½@47½c; seconds, 41@44c; State Dairy, tubs, finest, 46@46½c; good to prime, 43@45½c; common to fair, 34@38c; renovated, extras, 39@40c; firsts, 33@38½c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@35½; ladies, current make, firsts, 33@34c; seconds, 31½@32c; lower grades, 30@31c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 31½@32c; No. 2, 30@30½c; lower grades, 27@29½c.

EGGS.—32,768 cases. Arrivals are showing considerable increase as compared with last week, trade is quiet and the market is in unsettled and generally weak condition. There is a small proportion of strictly fine Northern goods showing good body, and most receivers report some call for them at sustained prices; buyers are very critical. Average eggs are offering at some decline, and the average of sales in the market is considerably lower. A good deal of Southern stock is offering in range of 33½@34½c, and good useful qualities of Western at 35@35½c, with only very prime qualities reaching the higher quotation. Nearby white eggs are plentiful. The few selected lots of large chalk white hennery eggs coming are still working out at sustained prices, but only a small proportion of the supply reaches our top figure, the greater part of the sales ranging from 38@41c. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 38@38½c; storage packed firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed, firsts, 35@36½c; seconds and poorer, 33@34½c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1 storage packed, 33@33½c; No. 1 regular packed, 32½@33c; No. 2 and poorer, 31@32c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 30@31½c; under grades, 25@29c; State Pennsylvania and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 40@42c; ordinary to fine, 38@40c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 36½@38c; State Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 38@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 36@37½c; duck eggs, 38@45c.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

The market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday closed very strong, active, and broad. In the final hour of trading the feature was the advance of Baldwin Locomotive. Under its spirited advance the other equipment shares moved upward. Steel shares, which were rather irregular in movement, closed strong. The activity in these two groups practically monopolized the trading in the late afternoon.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Reports on the condition of the new wheat crop continue most encouraging. The heavy rains which recently occurred throughout a large part of the Winter wheat belt are believed to have supplied sufficient moisture to carry the crop pretty close to maturity. The plant is unusually vigorous and promises an abundant yield.

RYE.

The local rye market was easy, with prices 5c lower at $2.11, cost and freight New York. Minneapolis was down 5c at $2.08, or just $1 below the high point of the season.

CORN.

The corn market was again feverish and, after showing early weakness, prices rallied and closed steady at ½c decline to ½c net advance. In the local cash market kiln-dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.60; No. 4 yellow, $1.50 cost, insurance, and freight New York.

CHICAGO PRICES.

July	1.44	1.41⅛	1.43⅛	1.45⅛	1.52⅛

OATS.

The technical position of the oats market was again the principal dominating factor and prices closed firm with net gains of ⅝c to 1⅛c on covering. The market was apparently in an oversold position. This applied not only to May, which has caused a good deal of concern of late, but also to July. The local cash market was dull and irregular; natural quoted at 83½c to 85c; clipped white at 84½c to 88c, all elevator.

CHICAGO PRICES.

June	72⅛	71	72⅛	71½	..
July	66⅛	65⅛	66⅝	66	65

PROVISIONS.

The provision market showed a further decline under liquidation prompted by a decline in the hog market and on the recent statement by the Food Administration that conditions in regard to supplies do not justify a higher level of values. Shorts covered on the decline, however, and prices experienced quite a good rally, especially for lard, which closed with moderate net gains. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 21,000, estimated for Thursday, 27,000; Kansas City received 18,000 and Omaha 10,000 hogs.

COFFEE.

The coffee market opened at a 3-point decline, and later showed further weakness under a little outside liquidation, and, in the absence of demand, final prices showed net losses of 4 to 6 points, with only a moderate day's business. The local spot market was again reported neglected and nominally unchanged. Range of prices:

September	8.45	8.39	8.42@8.44	8.47

SUGAR.

Consumers of refined sugar are not purchasing supplies in the volume that was expected with the advent of the small fruit crop, and while refiners' allotments to brokers are only moderate at the present time, they have been sufficient for immediate requirements. The International Sugar Committee reported purchases of 10,500 bags Cubas at 4.985c, cost and freight, and 4,800 tons Porto Ricos, at 6.005c, cost, insurance, and freight, both May shipment.

War Activities and Public Utility Companies

The successful prosecution of the war depends to a considerable extent on the quality of the services rendered by public utility corporations. The war has emphasized the necessity of developing public utilities, as they not only supply gas, electricity and transportation, indispensable in times of peace, but in addition enable plants now operating for the Government to run at maximum efficiency.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Baldwin Leads New Advance in Active List—Liberty Bonds Recover.

In some respects yesterday's stock market outdid all the previous sessions since the inauguration of the highly speculative trading, with advances running from 1 to nearly 10 points and a better distribution of activity as between the rails and industrials. Opening with bullish enthusiasm still running high, the early part of the day was featured by further gains in some of the lower priced rails, which it is supposed will benefit relatively more by rate increases the Administration is understood to favor. As soon, however, as the professional operators were satisfied that the demonstration in this department had gone about as far as it should on the rate increase proposal, they returned to the industrials figuring in Government business, and the other side of the market moved forward rapidly until late afternoon, when selling checked the advance without bringing about material reactions.

One issue which did not get into its stride until yesterday and then refused to be halted was Baldwin Locomotive, which climbed with unusual rapidity under the skillful guidance of a newly formed pool that was reported to have been formed on the expectation of an early announcement of the allotment of large war business. Baldwin came out on the ticker at 97 after the close of the market and closed at the top price, with a net advance of 9½ points. Almost as much in demand, though moving upward more gradually, were Westinghouse, People's Gas, and Midvale Steel. Nearly all of the leading speculative stocks scored substantial gains, Steel getting back more than 2 points from its low of the day and closing with a net gain of 1⅞, with Colorado Fuel and Iron up 4; Republic up 2, and Gulf States Steel, selling ex-dividend, up 5. An exception was supplied by Distillers, which fluctuated uncertainly, and closed slightly lower.

There was a better tone in the bond market, with the Liberty issues showing a stronger tendency, which carried the new 4¼s back across 98. Dealers are convinced by the number and nature of inquiries that, with the pressure under which bonds were held during the campaign to sell the last Government loan removed, a resumption of investment buying will be seen. The railroad issues have come into greater favor since the dissemination of the report that Mr. McAdoo favors an increase in rates which will more than cover all additional costs of operation.

The continuation of great activity in the stock market resulting in sales of almost a million and a quarter shares brought about a higher price for call loans, most of the borrowing being done yesterday at 6 per cent. The second weekly bulletin of crop conditions to appear since the statement of condition on May 1 was as favorable as the first. Good weather in all of the important crop districts has done much to improve the outlook for a very large increase in this year's wheat yield. The Iron Age estimates that the new gun and projectile plant to be built by the Steel Corporation will mean an expenditure of more than $60,000,000 for construction, and additional expenditures must be made on a similar scale for the Government works to be built by the Midvale Company.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Traders Make Frequent Demands for American Securities.

LONDON, May 15.—The stock market was firm today. Gilt edge securities were in steady demand. Home rails were wanted and the supply was short.

Dealings in American stocks were more frequent. There was a good inquiry for Japanese issues. Another £260,000 of bonds was canceled. Brazilians were stronger in sympathy with the rise in exchange. Portuguese securities improved on the favorable economic outlook in Portugal. Tin mining shares were buoyant. Shipping stocks were stronger.

Money was in better demand. Discounts were slack.

Trading Dull on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 15.—Trading was dull on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 58 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 13¼ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 88 francs 70 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Call Loans Renewed at 6%—All Industrial Time Loans Bring 6%.

Although the opening rate for call money yesterday was 5 per cent., most transactions were put through at 6 per cent., which was also the renewal rate. The closing quotation was 5 per cent. The market showed a harder tendency by reason of the demands made upon the banks by the Government in connection with war loan deposits. The rate for time loans secured by industrial collateral was 6 per cent., while for loans up to ninety days secured by mixed collateral, 5¾ to 6 per cent. was quoted.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Baldwin Makes Unusual Rise.

More than half the outstanding common stock of the Baldwin Locomotive Company was turned over in yesterday's market. Under a rush of buying orders so heavy as this an extraordinary advance might be expected, but, at that, the day's net gain of 9½ points brought a surprise to the traders hovering over the ticker in commission houses. A big pool was active in Baldwin, and it was learned that some of the members were told on Friday afternoon that a big move could be expected for the reason that the company would shortly receive orders from Government sources for fully $124,000,000 of locomotives and war munitions. The upward swing appeared to be accelerated also by dispatches from Philadelphia predicting that the shares would be put on a dividend basis shortly. The Directors meet before the end of the month.

A Puzzling Market in Steel.

The course of yesterday's market in Steel puzzled many tape readers. After the advance from 110 to 111⅞ in the morning hours there were plenty of offerings, which were absorbed with a fair degree of ease, and whenever the supply of stock appeared to contract the quotation made numerous quick spurts forward. Traders who devote their talents to the pursuit of price tendencies said they could not persuade themselves whether short sellers were chiefly responsible for the steady output of Steel or whether the pressure reflected distribution by speculators who had bought some days ago. The strong close indicated that buyers in the last hour were more than ready to take up the offerings of that period.

Republic Steel Dividend.

Declaration of the regular quarterly dividend on Republic Iron and Steel common stock yesterday put a quietus on rumors heard of late that an extra distribution would probably be considered by the Directors. The announcement appeared in the Street late in the day but did not prevent the stock closing close to the top for a 2-point gain.

Doubters Still Remain.

The evidence of million-share days and the upward movement of stocks and many bonds has by no means persuaded all Wall Street brokers that a bull market is under way. Among the doubters are those who fear that additional taxation plans may be discussed at Washington before long in a way to discourage buying of industrial and mining stocks.

Liberty Bonds Advance.

Trading in Liberty Loan bonds on the Stock Exchange yesterday was lighter in volume than on Tuesday, but the market was strong and the closing quotations for the 4s and the 4¼s were the highest of the day. The 4¼ per cent. bonds of the Third Loan sold up to 98.12, an advance of .60 compared with the low record established Tuesday and a net gain of .32 for the day. The "second fours" changed hands at 95.28, a net gain of .30, while the so-called "conversion fours" sold at 95.48, a net gain of .36. The 3½s were quoted at 99, but closed at 98.96. In some quarters it was suggested that the Secretary of the Treasury was supporting the market by the use of the sinking fund, but confirmation of the report was of course unobtainable, and, in fact, some bankers did not credit it. It is generally understood that in order to make the operations of the sinking fund effective it is requisite that secrecy be observed.

Liberty Bonds at Auction.

For the first time yesterday the auction sales of securities included a block of Liberty Loan bonds. A sale of $84,300 worth of Second 4s was made at 94.92.

New York City's Banking Power.

The City of New York has 128 commercial banking institutions with total resources of approximately $7,130,000,000, and aggregate deposits of about $5,865,000,000. Of the 128 institutions, 31 are national banks, with resources of slightly more than $3,702,000,000; 32 trust companies, with resources of $2,704,000,000, and 45 State banks, having resources of about $653,000,000.

Holding Cotton for Profit.

Local cotton men were inclined to be amused yesterday at a report that South Carolina farmers had pledged themselves, at a meeting, to hold their cotton for a price of 35 cents a pound. "Nobody prevented those fellows from selling their cotton when they could have obtained 35 cents for it," said one local dealer, "but they wanted to hog all they could. Holding back cotton to squeeze the maximum profit out of it, when a famine seemed likely, was something the consumer had a right to get sore about, but now that a good carry-over is assured, such a declaration is merely laughable. The sooner those fellows wake up and take the good price and good profit that is still open to them the better for them. We shan't worry if they don't, however, for they can hurt no one but themselves."

No Longer Blaming Speculators.

One gratifying feature of the decided drop in cotton prices on the local market in the last two days, has been the comparative absence of the cry that "bear operators," and particularly one celebrated plunger, were responsible for the falling market, which was rather persistent during the big declines of mid-April. Apparently even the stubbornest bulls are now willing to admit that 36-cent cotton was higher than market conditions permanently justified, and that there was something more behind the decline of $50 a bale than "So-and-so pulling 50,000 bales out of his hat," as one indignant dealer described the big selling wave a month ago.

Dividends and Surplus.

A Director of one of the prosperous shipping companies yesterday was discussing the question of dividend disbursements, apropos of some handsome dividend declarations recently made in the shipping industry. "Many of the big shipping men," he remarked, "were brought up in the atmosphere of the time when the shipping industry in this country was still—as for that matter it is now to a considerable extent—a very personal thing, when each company or line was practically the private property of one man or at most a little, very exclusive partnership. They would as soon discuss their business affairs with the public as their family affairs—in fact they placed them in the same category. In the same way men brought up in that school really seem to hate to pay dividends. Their ideal is stability and solidity—fine ideal, but they carry it so far as almost to make a fetich of the surplus account. My idea is, however, that such methods don't apply to a corporation, in the shipping business or anywhere else, whose stock is widely held. To pile up the surplus until it is bigger than the outstanding capitalization is an injustice to the stockholders."

Express Officials in Doubt.

The jubilation with which the prospect of a plump increase in railroad rates, even though the Government is the sole immediate beneficiary, was received in Wall Street yesterday inspired some officials of express companies to melancholy reflections. It is practically settled now that they are to be merged under Government auspices, but one of them remarked yesterday that if the Government neither guaranteed their earnings, as in the case of the railroads, nor raised their rates, they were wondering how much, at the present rate at which costs are rising, there would be left to merge.

BIG GUN WORKS ADD TO STEEL DEMANDS

Will Bring Upon Market Orders for Heavy Tonnage of Structural Material.

$50,000,000 FOR BUILDING

Ordnance Not Expected to be Turned Out by the Steel Corporation for Eighteen Months.

Steel trade reports this week indicate that the construction of the great Government gun works near Pittsburgh will bring upon the market in due course orders for a heavy tonnage of structural material which was not included in the calculations of manufacturers until a few days ago. In addition to this plant many thousands of tons more will be needed for the gun works to be built by the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company for the Government, news of which appeared yesterday. It is believed in steel-making circles that these projects were the ones referred to by J. Leonard Replogle, Director of Steel Supply, before the meeting of steel men last month, when he said that certain Government plans in contemplation were still in a confidential stage.

Guns will not be turned out of the works to be built by the Steel Corporation for eighteen months, according to The Iron Age, but in the meantime between $60,000,000 and $70,000,000 will be expended in construction. As the days pass the size of the Government's war program as affecting steel products grows rapidly.

"Ship plate and shell steel programs have been expanded in the last week," The Iron Age states. "In addition to 4,000,000 tons of shell steel at first scheduled for this year, 1,250,000 tons are now figured on to carry the Government and its allies up to April 1. Ship plate requirements for 1918 are now put at 1,450,000 tons, and those for 1919 at 1,850,000 tons. With plate mills that will be completed in 1918, capacity of all kinds of plates by the end of the year will exceed 7,500,000 tons.

"Steel capacity in all lines exists in plenty, but it is the spectre of short fuel supply that is behind all the predictions of long-continued monopoly of steel output by the Government. Ingot production in April was at the yearly rate of 43,000,000 tons. A year at that rate would mean a very considerable surplus above war needs, direct and indirect.

"Material for the 100,000 cars the Government has bought has not been placed and more delays are ahead. It was planned to have steel wheels for 55,000 cars, but to save steel cast-iron wheels will be used for many of these. Bar iron makers have asked that archbar trucks be specified for a part of the cars, giving them some tonnage that would otherwise be steel.

"Bids have been asked for 300,000 axles for the new cars. All told 400,000 will be needed. No price has been fixed as yet for axles, but the trade belives the Railroad Administration does not expect to pay more than 4.25 cents per pound or about $15 per ton below the basis of late sales. Signs point to an award on makers' cost figures with an estimated margin of profit, as with the car contracts, if the bids are not deemed low enough."

The Iron Trade Review says that producers have adjusted themselves to the view that at least six full months of mill operations lie ahead on Government business, and adds:

"Despite all that is being said, however, as to the insufficiency of the iron and steel supply for Government requirements, the authoritative opinion of the industry is that not only will there be enough for war purposes, but in time some will be left over for commercial use. The needs of the allied Governments are surprisingly large in shell bars. Seven hundred and fifty thousand tons each, it is stated, will be needed at an early date for England, France, and Italy. The British continue to call for an unexpectedly large tonnage of plates, shell steel, rails, &c."

MORE TIME TO FILE REPORT.

Brokers Have Until June 1 to Turn In Registry Returns.

Stock brokers and members of all Stock and Produce Exchanges have received an extension of time for filing their registry returns to the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department at the Custom House, from May 15 to June 1. This extension is granted at the request of many brokers. Francis M. Riley, Special Agent of Internal Revenue, in announcing the extension, said:

"The returns, including the returns on the borrowed and loaned shares and all transactions on the various Stock and Produce Exchanges, are required to be filed in this office on or before the 15th of the month following the month of the transactions. These returns are now due, but owing to the urgent appeals of many brokers for extension of time for filing the returns, their petition was forwarded to the department in Washington with the result that their request was granted by the commissioner of Internal Revenue, who has extended the time for filing the returns to June 1, 1918, and that date is fixed as the limit for making these returns. No further indulgence will be granted after June 1, 1918."

Yesterday was the final day for the interest deduction of 3 per cent. on advanced payments of income and excess profits taxes, and many individual and corporation taxpayers settled with the Government for the amounts due under the 1917 tax assessment.

PLANS FOR PETROLEUM CO.

Metropolitan Stockholders to be Asked to Give Small Sum.

The two stockholders' committees of the Metropolitan Petroleum Corporation are expected to merge their interests shortly, and thereafter the single unit is to co-operate with the Directors in working out the company's affairs. It was learned yesterday that the committees control more than a majority of the outstanding shares, and the owners of the balance will be asked to deposit their holdings with the stock already at the direction of the committees.

The stockholders who elect to co-operate with the committee members in negotiations with the Island Oil and Transport interests over certain oil lands in Mexico will be asked to contribute not more than 10 cents a share of stock to meet expenses. Committee members yesterday said that this was to be looked upon more in the nature of united contribution for the purpose of getting the company on its feet than as an assessment.

Boston Brokerage Firm Assigns.

BOSTON, May 15.—The brokerage firm of Codman, Fletcher & Co., members of the Boston and New York Stock Exchanges, made an assignment today for the benefit of creditors. A. B. Brickley, who was named as assignee, said the liabilities would probably amount to $500,000 and the assets to $300,000. The proceeds of the Exchange memberships, he stated, were expected to cover all the obligations with other brokers.

HIGHEST BIDDER GETS PIER 69 LEASE TODAY

Controversy Over Property on North River Will Be Settled at Auction.

BID OF $75,000 EXPECTED

Sale Will Be Held in Accordance with Justice Greenbaum's Ruling—City's Policy Reversed.

The lease of Pier 69, North River, will be put up at public auction at 10 o'clock this morning and sold to the highest bidder. The sale is scheduled to take place at the Dock Department offices, Pier A, North River, and Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert will be the auctioneer. The Commissioner has chosen this manner in which to settle the controversy over the leasing of the pier, which has been before the Sinking Fund Commission and in the courts since April 10.

The sale will be in accordance with the ruling of Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum that no bid lower than $35,000 must be received. Several offers in excess of this amount have already been made to the Dock Commissioner, and it is probable that the lease will not be sold for less than $75,000. In fact, the James Auditore Company, stevedores of Brooklyn, stated yesterday that it was willing to pay this amount for the dock privilege. The company has already offered $40,000 for the lease, but the Bristol City Line, the present lessee, has offered $41,000.

Pier 69 is the one which Dock Commissioner Hulbert recommended that the Sinking fund Commission lease to the Hudson Dock and Terminal Corporation for $25,000, when the question came before the Sinking Fund Commission on April 10. The commission voted to award the lease to the Hudson company, although the Bristol City Line, holding company for the Occident Dock Company, had offered $30,000. When the lease went to the former concern the Bristol company brought injunction proceedings, and Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum appointed a referee to hear the facts in the case. The city took an appeal from the decision, and while the case is pending in the Appellate Division Justice Greenbaum granted a modification of his order to allow the pier to be sold at public auction, providing that no offer below $35,000, the amount the Hudson Dock concern finally offered, be received.

The pier is at the foot of West Twenty-ninth Street. It is about 500 feet long and 60 feet wide with a one-story shed over it. For many years it was leased by the Bristol City Line, now engaged in handling British war supplies, at $15,000 a year. The renting of a city pier by public auction is a reversal of long-established city policy. The lease to be sold today will be for a period of five years, but the Dock Commissioner reserves the right to reject any bid by noon tomorrow if he considers such action to be for the best interest of the city.

There is a condition in the lease also by which the Dock Commissioner holds the power to break the contract. The lessee will be required to agree that if at any time the Dock Commissioner decides to go ahead with the work of rebuilding a section of the waterfront, including Pier 69, he may terminate the lease on written notice to the lessee. The contract specifies that the rent "shall cease from the date specified in said notice," and it also contains the condition that "no claim for damages or compensation in favor of the lessee by reason of the termination of such interest" shall at any time be made.

It is expected at the auction that both the Bristol City Line and the Hudson Port and Terminal Corporation will materially increase the offers they have already made to the Dock Commissioner for the lease of the pier.

The New York Harbor Line Board will meet in the Dock Department offices after the auction to hear arguments on the proposed plan for the construction of the Coney Island Ship Canal from Gravesend Bay to Sheepshead Bay and the establishment of Kimball Basin in Jamaica Bay. An interesting meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission is expected to take place immediately afterward, when the question of rescinding the granting of the lease of 200 feet of the pier at Fifth Street comes up. On the recommendation of Commissioner Hulbert the commission at its last meeting voted to lease the property to the Pawtucket and New York Transportation Company for $8,400 a year. Later Controller Craig objected to the granting of the lease and requested the Sinking Fund Commission to rescind its action. Commissioner Hulbert bitterly attacked the Controller for his action and at today's meeting of the commission it is expected that he will insist that the lease be given to the Pawtucket concern.

The question of approving a lease to the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, the French Line, of Pier 84, West Forty-fourth Street and the North River, for a term of three years at an annual rental of $52,000 is also expected to be taken up at the meeting.

RAILROAD EARNINGS SHOW A BIG DECLINE

$71,705,000 for First Quarter, Against $179,431,000 in Same Period Last Year.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Railroads in the first three months this year earned only $71,705,000, as compared with $179,431,000 in the same period last year, making a loss to the Government under the system of common operation of about $109,000,000. This report today by the Interstate Commerce Commission covers all but five of the 196 railroads in the country.

The net income in March was $63,083,000, or $7,000,000 less than in March, 1917. This difference, much less than in the preceding months, indicates that conditions are becoming better for Government operation and returns from later months may go far toward making up the loss.

Operating revenues in March were $365,000,000 and operating expenses $282,000,000, making net revenue a little over $82,000,000. From this was deducted taxes of $15,000,000 and rents for equipment and joint facilities, leaving the net income, the item on which Government compensation is based, $63,000,000.

Eastern railroads earned $16,870,000 as compared with $28,000,000 in March last year; Western roads $30,000,000 as compared with $31,000,000 in March last year, and Southern roads reported $16,000,000, about $1,000,000 more than in March last year.

For the three months period, the falling off in net income was caused mainly by the record of Eastern roads, which reported a deficit of $15,924,000, as compared with earnings of $51,962,000 last year. Western carriers earned $56,000,000 as compared with $84,000,000 last year, and Southern roads $31,000,000 as compared with $43,000,000.

THOUSANDS GET CASH FOR LOAN COUPONS

MANY BUY THRIFT STAMPS

Payments Expected to Continue for Some Days—Total for District Placed at $23,000,000.

Several thousand persons called yesterday at the offices of the Bond Division of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 120 Broadway, to cash the initial coupons on their 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan, floated last November. All day there was a long line formed along the cages of the coupon department, and several officers were on hand to keep order and to direct inquiries to the proper windows.

Right alongside of the cages where cash was paid out on presentation of coupons there was a window where thrift and war savings stamps were sold. A large number of men and women, noticing the "W. S. S." sign, did not stop to get cash, but passed their $1 or $2 coupons to the clerk behind the stamp window and got their stamps. Although complete figures were unavailable, it was said that up to about 3 o'clock $1,200 in coupons had been turned in for thrift and war savings stamps.

While bond holders in large numbers sent their coupons to their banks, and others presented them at banks near their homes or places of business, many took the trouble of going to 120 Broadway to cash the small pieces of paper, which to all intents and purposes are equivalent to United States currency.

Officials of the Bond Issue Division said last night that they had not completed tabulating the cash payments made yesterday, but announced that the checks paid over to banks and trust companies which had sent in coupons a few days in advance amounted to more than $6,000,000. The payments of coupons will continue for some days, although holders of large blocks of bonds are usually prompt in collecting their interest.

The total amount of interest due on the 4 per cent. bonds is $76,173,323, and it is estimated that the total for bonds held in the New York district is approximately $23,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Bank has not yet given out any figures showing the amount of money paid in by the banks last Thursday when the initial payments on the Third Liberty Loan were due. Neither has the bank made public the final figures for subscriptions filed in this district. It was explained yesterday that the data were not being given out for publication because of "an embargo" placed by one of the Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury.

The delivery of bonds of the Third Liberty Loan have been far more prompt than deliveries in the case of any of the previous loans. It was learned yesterday that practically every bank in this district had obtained bonds for which full payment was made last Thursday. Bonds of all denominations are being received daily from Washington, and the distribution is being hastened in every way possible. Although all the deliveries have not been fully completed, every bank has an ample supply on hand, and subscribers who have paid for bonds in full should have no difficulty in getting their certificates. All of the bonds have attached to them only four coupons, and at the end of the two years, the Government will exchange these bonds for new certificates containing coupons for the remaining eight years, the term of the loan being ten years.

Hughitt, Past 80, is Re-elected.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 15.—Marvin Hughitt was re-elected Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad on Tuesday, according to announcement made today. Several weeks ago he resigned after Director General McAdoo had stated that railroad chairmanships were largely ornamental, and declined to permit their salaries to be charged against earnings. Mr. Hughitt returns to the Northwestern at the request of the Directors, and provision for his remuneration is to be made under an arrangement whereby the railroad company will receive certain funds from its contract with the Government for corporate expenses. Mr. Hughitt is past 80 years of age.

City Trust Companies Make Report on Their Resources.

The aggregate resources of the thirty-two trust companies in the City of New York amounted to $2,704,464,400 on March 14, the date of the last call of condition made by the State Superintendent of Banks, according to a compilation made by the Clearing House. On the same date the resources of the forty-five State banks under his jurisdiction totaled $652,537,800.

The previous call for condition reports was as of Nov. 14, 1917, and during the four months that elapsed between calls, the resources of the trust companies decreased by $81,740,200 and those of the State banks by $30,176,200. On March 14 the aggregate deposits of the trust companies totaled $2,158,657,600, a decrease of $142,084,100 compared with the figures for Nov. 14; while the deposits of the State banks amounted to $570,955,800, a decrease of $32,224,900.

Following are the comparative figures for the thirty-two trust companies and the forty-five State banks, the number of the latter class of institutions having been reduced by one since November by reason of an amalgamation:

Drug Prices Continue Firm.

Higher primary markets for numerous crude materials and the scarcity of local stocks have restricted trade in drugs and chemicals, Drug and Chemical Markets will say today. Government buying has kept the market fairly well cleaned of stocks. The export movement continues to be restricted under the new ruling of the War Trade Board, and in some quarters shippers are complaining bitterly of the difficulties in obtaining licenses. Narcotics closed easy, with prices tending downward, due in part to larger arrivals of the crude materials. Price fluctuations have been narrow and mostly upward. The only development of importance was the sharp decline of $1 a pound in thymol.

Gray Goods Sales Fair.

A fair business was put through in the local gray goods market yesterday, with first hands the principal sellers. In fact second-hand transactions of importance were missing during the day. The "stars" of the day's selling were 38½-inch 60-48s, which sold at 15¼ cents for delivery in May, June and July. Eighteen cents was paid for 38½-inch 64-60s for this month's delivery, and spot Northern goods of 39-inch 68-72 construction brought 19½ cents. Further business for nearby deliveries was put through in sateens and twills, but the business done in sheetings and other coarse yarn goods could easily have been larger. These were mill prices on printcloths at the close:

Sleeveless Coats of Velvet.

There seems to be a growing demand for sleeveless coats made of velvet. According to reports from several local manufacturers these garments come in for frequent mention in the reorders that are now being placed by merchants in all parts of the country. Black is usually preferred. Many of these coats are little more than vests. Some of them do not even come together in front, but are held to the figure with a belt, also of black velvet. On a few of the popular models, black patent leather belts are being shown and promise to gain wide favor.

Bathing Suits Well Sought.

Business in bathing suits is becoming very active, according to a number of local manufacturers. Buyers are said to be numerous just now, and they seem to be eager for supplies. Vivid colors and startling combinations of colors are said to be as actively sought as they ever have been in the past, contrary to many predictions made earlier in the year. Lavender seems to be particularly liked and appears in a majority of the latest suits shown, either as the body color or as trimming. Gray and lavender is one of the favored combinations. Wool jersey is the leading fabric, and is frequently trimmed with embroidery in heavy wool yarns of several colors.

Expect Lace Exports to Increase.

Men who have their fingers on the pulse of the lace and embroidery trade are predicting a rapid expansion of the American export business in this merchandise as a result of the war. While the totals are still small, steady gains in this business have been noted in the last several years, and with the growing use of lace and embroideries in various foreign markets still larger increases are looked for. Especially is this trade expected to increase with Australia, Canada, and the South American countries. St. Gall is said to be virtually eliminated as an export factor for the time being in countries outside of Europe, and for two reasons. The first is that manufacturers there are apparently having their hands full in supplying the European demand, and the second is the scarcity of tonnage to carry the goods that can be spared for other markets.

Good Piano Season.

Piano sales during the last four weeks seem to have been very good. Several manufacturers report having bettered last year's record of business for the same period, while others claim not to have fallen behind any. Cash business was fair, though the bulk of the orders were placed on a part payment basis. Most of the business during the period mentioned seems to have been in the medium priced lines which give good quality without the various elaborations obtained in the most expensive grades. The demand for the very cheap instruments is said to be small.

Do Not Want White Gold.

A resolution recommending the discontinuance of the use of white gold in place of platinum in the manufacture of jewelry embodying precious stones was passed yesterday at a meeting of jewelry manufacturers and retailers at the Hotel Biltmore. The meeting, which grew out of the commandeering of platinum, iridium, and palladium by the Government for war uses, was called by the Jewelers Vigilance Committee, and was attended by representative retail jewelers from Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Boston, and this city. A second resolution passed recommended the inclusion in the karat designation stamped on articles such as watch chains, cigarette cases, &c., of the letter "w" or the words "white" or "white gold" in cases where they are made of this metal instead of platinum. The purpose is to protect the public from the selling, by unscrupulous dealers, of articles of white gold as platinum. While this metal resembles platinum more or less in appearance, it does not resemble platinum so far as "workability," value, and wearing qualities are concerned.

Cotton or Silk Gingham?

Dress manufacturers in this city are unable to decide as yet whether cotton or silk gingham is to be the best seller in dresses during the coming Summer. In some quarters it is said that silks in gingham effects have been very actively sought, and the opinion is expressed that they are displacing the cotton ginghams of last year. Others in the trade, however, believe that cotton gingham dresses are going to be as good as they ever were, chiefly because of the fact that they can be laundered without in any way injuring the dress. "However," as one manufacturer put it yesterday, "only time will tell."

Oxfords and Pumps Are Liked.

It seems to be pretty definitely determined that oxfords and pumps are to be the correct thing in women's shoes this Spring and Summer. Business in those lines is said to have been consistently good since the season opened, and so far makes a very favorable comparison with the record of sales for the same period a year back. There is a tendency, it is reported, toward the darker shades of tan, and this has manifested itself particularly in oxfords, which began the season in black patent leather. It is said that gray is also considered smart.

Has Paid the Second Installment.

Ferdinand Ehrlich of Ferdinand Ehrlich, Inc., dealers in general merchandise, is now 72 years old. In 1910 he was in business as the senior partner of Ferdinand Ehrlich & Sons when that firm failed. An arrangement with the creditors was made at that time, but in spite of this Mr. Ehrlich has taken upon himself the responsibility of paying the indebtedness dollar for dollar. About a year ago this time an installment of 12½ per cent. of the obligation was paid, and a few days ago creditors received personal checks from Mr. Ehrlich for a similar amount. Additional payments will be made until the whole obligation is wiped out, and in the event of Mr. Ehrlich's death before this is accomplished his sons are pledged to finish what he leaves undone. Letters written by creditors in acknowledgment of the second payment are couched in language of appreciation that is rarely seen in the course of everyday business.

Accuse Three More Companies.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Federal Trade Commission today issued complaints against the Ironite Company of Chicago, the Master Builders' Company of Cleveland, and the United Products Company of Chicago, alleging unfair competition.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A meeting of the United Waist League of America will be held in the Green Room of the Hotel McAlpin on Monday evening next for the election of officers and Directors for the coming year, and for the approval of the by-laws of the organization. Committee reports will be made, and, among other things, plans for economy in the industry will be discussed. It is expected that the meeting will be attended by every waist manufacturer of importance in this city.

The National Cigar Leaf Tobacco Association will hold its twentieth annual convention here on Monday and Tuesday next in the Assembly Hall of the Merchants' Association. Several matters of importance to this branch of the tobacco industry will be discussed. An elaborate entertainment program has also been arranged.

Buyers of Sweaters, Sport Caps and Hockey Caps

Are Hereby Offered a Great Chance to Buy a Special Lot of 6000 Dozen at About 60 per cent. of Their Actual Value.

The price at which we will sell is not only below the Regular Market, but about 40 per cent. lower than our own Regular Prices, which enables us to give our Customers a Wonderful Opportunity to stimulate sales with Merchandise for which there is Great Demand.

There never has been a greater year for Sweaters than this. Four mills—one at Cleveland, Ohio; one at Philadelphia, Pa.; one at Brooklyn, N. Y.; one at West New York, N. J.—produce for us the 350 styles of Sweaters that we create. They are kept going all of the time and we have kept Our Customers fully and promptly supplied.

But now comes along a Government order of very large proportions for Puttees and Sweaters, which requires immediate clearance of decks at the Cleveland mill, for the filling of an order for the U. S. A. is a paramount duty.

6000 dozen pieces of merchandise make a Big Pile which must be moved immediately. Hence, we make our extraordinary offer at a greatly reduced price in the face of a rising market.

We might store these goods and sell them as demanded at Regular Market Prices. But it has been custom with us for years to give our Customers the benefit of all unusual conditions that arise in our business; hence, we pass along this great opportunity to them.

The Sweaters are of Wool, Zephyr and Fiber Silk, in Coat and "Slip-on" styles—for Women, Misses and Children.

The Sport Caps and Hockey Caps are of Wool and Fiber Silk for Women, Misses, Boys and Children.

Fortunately for our Customers, the assortment divides itself on about the 50-50 basis as regards goods suitable for summer wear and fall and winter wear, thus permitting them to stage special sales in June and September.

In order that all buyers may be given equal opportunity, no reservations will be made. Every order will be booked in the order received. There will be no preferences shown.

16-18-20 West 32nd St.

No samples can be submitted.

WAR NEED TO LEAVE WOOL FOR CIVILIANS

Government Takes Account of Domestic Requirements in Planning to Outfit Army.

MANUFACTURERS IN SESSION

Hear Each Will Receive a Blank on Which to Notify Federal Authorities of His Wants.

It was made plain at the annual meeting of the Woolen Goods Exchange in the Metropolitan Tower yesterday that the Government does not intend to overlook the requirements of the civilian population for woolen clothing, in its anxiety to adequately care for the new armies to be brought into the field for service against Germany.

Nathaniel Stevens of M. T. Stevens & Sons Company, North Andover, Mass., President of the exchange, presided at the meeting, which was attended by the leading woolen manufacturers and mill representatives of the United States.

With the Government holding close supervision over the country's stocks of raw wool, the prevalent opinion at the meeting was that it would not be safe to make large commitments on Spring goods until the policy of the Government was more fully outlined and the amount of wool available for civilian uses was determined. Some of the manufacturers said that the only thing to be done now was to work up such wools as happened to be available for civilian uses and not adaptable to military fabrics.

The fact that the Government proposed, to the best of its ability, to safeguard civilian needs in making allotments of raw wool, was announced by Frederic S. Clark of North Billerica, Mass., Chairman of the War Service Committee of the Wool Manufacturing Industry. Mr. Clark said the War Industries Board would, as soon as practicable, send circular letters of information to all manufacturers with blanks on which they could indicate their needs for wool for commercial purposes.

"We must all make up our minds to the fact that to a greater and greater degree, the resources of the American wool manufacturers are going to be absorbed by the needs of the brave men who are fighting our battles overseas," said President Stevens in his annual address. "To serve them and to serve the country must be more and more our final consideration.

"Unless they win, our business, and everybody else's business in America, will be of no particular account. The American soldiers who are fighting in the fields of France are fighting for America as definitely as if the foe were on our own coasts. We owe it to our army and navy to support them with just as much vigor and whole-heartedness as if an enemy fleet were in Massachusetts Bay and enemy troops on Long Island. This is the spirit in which all of us should conduct all our dealings with our Government."

BUSINESS RECORDS

In Town.

ROSS & SISTI.—Marion J. Ross and Marco A. Sisti, who composed the firm of Ross & Sisti, iron works at 315 East Twelfth Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $6,380 and no assets. Part of the liabilities are for indorsing notes of the Richard Iron and Steel Corporation, held by Patrick J. Murray, $6,006, and Mary Murray, $105. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against them on July 8, 1912, which was dismissed in November, 1912.

SARA KATZ of 911 Tiffany Street, Bronx, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $11,380 and no assets. Among the creditors are Lizzie Van Riker, $8,000, and Isaac E. Fairchild, $2,500.

LOUIS PESACOV of 1,479 Fulton Avenue, Bronx, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,995 and assets of $100, consisting of one share of stock of the White Metal Bed Corporation.

MAYWOOD SPRINGS, INC., mineral waters, at 436 East Ninety-second Street.—Judge Knox has dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed on Nov. 15 against the Maywood Springs, Inc., maker of mineral waters, at 436 East Ninety-second Street, and Hackensack, N. J., on a settlement with creditors at 10 cents on the dollar. Liabilities were $14,700.

FEDERAL DYESTUFF COMPANY.—Judge Hand in the United States District Court yesterday appointed Charles W. Holloway as additional receiver for the Federal Dyestuff and Chemical Corporation, whose plant is at Kingsport, Tenn., on the application of the Noteholders' Committee. He has already qualified in Tennessee. The Judge also approved a contract of the committee, who are to advance money for the payrolls, and for the purchasing of materials, and other incidentals to carry out the contract with the United States Government for the purchase of 9,000,000 pounds of picric acid.

S. C. BAUER & SON.—Simon Bauer, doing business as S. C. Bauer & Son, a manufacturer of bakers' utensils, 444 Hart Street, Brooklyn, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $3,400 and assets of $734.

OLIN R. VANDERWATER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Olin R. Vanderwater, a butcher and grocer of Bayshore, L. I., by the following creditors: Wilson & Co., $809; J. J. Harrington & Co., $800, and A. E. MacAdam, $200.

LAZAR GARSHOFSKY, 117 Seigel Street, Brooklyn, has made an assignment to Allen H. Chamow, 1,092 President Street, Brooklyn.

LEGAL NOTICES.

To the Creditors of the J. M. Washburne Company: Notice is hereby given that the receivers of the J. M. Washburne Company have filed with me their final account herein showing that they have in their hands a balance of $2,703.59 and certain claims which they have been unable to collect. I hereby appoint Friday, May 24th, 1918, at 10:30 A. M., at Room 442, U. S. Court House and Post Office Building, New York, for the filing of objections to said accounts and hearing thereon, for the sale, subject to the approval of the Court of the said outstanding claims, and for the determination of the allowances to be made to the receivers and their counsel, and for such other matters as may be brought before me.

At that time the creditors and all others interested are directed to show cause if any why the receivers should not be discharged and their bonds be cancelled.

Dated May 8th, 1918.
WM. PARKIN, Master.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

A West End Avenue apartment house passed into new ownership yesterday in a transaction which also involved a small element of trade.

The Schuyler Square Realty Company, Harry Schiff, President, sold to D. Rush Stoddard, who is in the shipbuilding business, the twelve-story apartment house known as the San Domingo, at 947 West End Avenue, on a plot 75 by 100, facing Straus Square. The house, which stands on the site of the old Bloomingdale Church, is entirely rented and has been held at $550,000.

In part payment, Mr. Stoddard gave the five-story apartment house at 110 East 116th Street, on a lot 25 by 100. Nassoit & Lanning were the brokers in the transaction, Charles H. Bellows representing Mr. Stoddard as attorney.

Front Street Deal.

Henry R. Taylor has sold to a client of William A. White & Sons the two five-story buildings at 62 and 64 Front Street, on a plot 45.7 by 85.9. An interesting detail in connection with the deal is that it is the third sale in a period of twenty-six years, and each sale has been made through the same brokers. Mr. Taylor acquired the property in 1906.

A $260,000 Manhattan-Bronx Trade.

Joseph Schwartz, President of the S. B. Building Corporation, sold to Adolph and Minnie Wolff the five-story apartment house, with four stores, on a plot 57.6 by 100, at the southeast corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and 192d Street.

The buyers gave in exchange 1,520 St. Nicholas Avenue, a five-story apartment house, on a plot 40 by 100; 402 East Seventy-third Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 25 by 100, and the five-story flat, on a plot 40 by 100, at the northeast corner of Davidson Avenue and North Street. The deal, which was negotiated by M. I. Strunsky & Co. and H. F. Byrnes, involved about $260,000.

East Side Tenement in Sale.

Mrs. Marie E. Schleiermacher has sold the four-story tenement with stores at 421 Sixth Street, on a lot 20.10 by 90.10. Joseph P. Day, in conjunction with George F. Mahnken, negotiated the sale.

Investors Buy Dwellings.

The Clayton Realty Company purchased from the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company 307 West Seventy-seventh Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 18.6 by 102.2, located between West End Avenue and Riverside Drive. John R. and Oscar L. Foley negotiated the sale.

Walter V. Reynolds sold 254 West 181st Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 17.6 by 99.11, and 143 West 130th Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 16.8 by 100. Both buyers are investors.

Buying Bronx Property.

Fred L. Scribner purchased for occupancy from Alfred Kuhlke 475 East 157th Street, a three-story dwelling.

The Fanyer Building Corporation, composed of John C. and P. J. Dwyer, sold to Frederick Brown, operator, 2,436 to 2,440 Webb Avenue, two five-story apartment houses, occupying a plot 100 by 100. Richard A. Scobia negotiated the sale.

Weissman & Kendall purchased from George W. Short the two-story dwelling with stable, occupying the entire block front on the south side of 192d Street, between Creston Avenue and the Concourse. The plot was held at $80,000. It was acquired by the seller last month for $69,000 in foreclosure proceedings.

Samuel Cowen sold the two-family brick dwelling at 638 Faile Street, on a lot 20 by 100, to M. Lubit.

Brooklyn.

David Walker has sold to a client of the Jerome Property Corporation, for occupancy, 384 Third Street, a three-story dwelling on a lot 22 by 190, running through to Fourth Street. This is the first sale of the property since May, 1868.

A $722,000 Factory for Long Island City.

Plans have been filed by S. Karpen & Brothers, manufacturers of furniture, for a $722,000 factory to be erected in Long Island City in the block bounded by Jackson Avenue, Hulst Street, Sunnyside Yard of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Harold Avenue.

The building will be a six-story concrete structure with a frontage of 489 feet and a depth of 465 feet. About 800 operatives will be employed. It will contain 300,000 feet of floor space.

Queens Borough Sales.

A. L. Palmer sold to M. Berman, who immediately conveyed it to J. W. Levingson, a plot 100 by 225 feet, on the southeast corner of University Place and Thrall Place, Woodhaven.

The Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company sold to H. Prince a plot 110 by 466 feet on the west side of Remington Avenue, 594 feet south of Arverne Boulevard, Arverne.

C. Muller sold to the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Holy Trinity of Hollis a plot 40 by 100 feet, adjacent to its present property on the west side of Palatina Avenue, 182 feet north of Hempstead and Jamaica Plank Road, Hollis.

Long Island.

James L. Dowsey, Manhattan, has purchased the estate of the late James M. Clark of Great Neck, L. I. The property comprises fifty acres, and has a frontage of 1,600 feet on the North Hempstead Turnpike.

Westchester County.

Olcott & Egger sold the Nightingale cottage at Larchmont to Mrs. Mary B. Vermilye of New York City, who will occupy.

New Jersey.

The Western Tool Company has purchased from Mrs. T. G. Sellew of Montclair, for a reported price of $25,000, the three-story brick factory on North Third Street, Newark. Robert B. Stoutenburgh was the broker.

The Standard Wire Company purchased from Mrs. Elizabeth J. Reid the three-story brick factory building, formerly the plant of the Federal Wire Cloth Company, on plot 111 by 202, on the west side of Passaic Avenue, at Harrison. The sale also included all riparian rights in the Passaic River in front of the plot.

Title has been passed whereby the Evening Journal Association, publishers of the Jersey Journal, transferred to the Manufacturers Liability Insurance Company of New Jersey its former publication building, a four-story structure on a plot 75 by 100 at the southwest corner of Montgomery and Greene Streets, Jersey City.

Commercial Leases.

Joseph P. Day has leased for the Farmers Loan & Trust Company for a term of years, 117-119 Mercer Street to the Mutual Gas Light Company. This property was sold recently at auction by Mr. Day.

The Charles F. Noyes Company leased to Maurice Mendel, retailer of gowns and dresses, his fifth New York store to be at 24 East Thirty-fourth Street. The lease is for a term of years and includes the store and first loft. The property is owned by William Waldorf Astor.

The Rowantree-Schley Company leased in conjunction with Spear & Co. the store, basement, first and second lofts at 155-157 Wooster Street, containing 20,000 square feet, to M. Bermas & Brother, dealers in woolen clippings, now at 121-123 Sullivan Street.

George R. Read & Co., sub-leased for the Fuhr Wall Paper Company, to Michael M. Oganesoff, the store and basement at 2,178 Broadway, for an automobile salesroom.

Realty Note.

William A. White & Sons have placed a building and permanent loan of $200,000 at 6 per cent. interest for five years for the Freel Investing Company, Philip A. Curran, President, to cover the new Strand Theater at Fulton Street and Ashland Place, Brooklyn.

This enterprise will represent an investment of about $800,000. The theatre has been leased to the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation, owners of the Strand Theatre in Manhattan.

The students and teachers of the main building, Mott Avenue and Washington Heights annexes are planning an elaborate program for the day.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Low pressure prevails over the western half of the country, with the greatest depression over the Dakotas, Western Nebraska, and Eastern Colorado, although there was no resulting precipitation except in the northern upper lake region, North Dakota, Western Montana, and Northwestern Wyoming, where there were light showers.

The weather was fair elsewhere except in the lower Atlantic and North Pacific States, where there were rains. It is generally warmer over interior districts east of the Rocky Mountains, with quite high temperatures in the southern upper lake region, the great central valleys, and the plains States west of the mountains.

Fair weather will prevail Thursday and Friday in the Washington forecast district, with temperatures above the seasonal average in the interior, and also on Friday along the Atlantic Coast.

Winds for Thursday and Friday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate variable, becoming east and southeast, fair weather; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate southeast, partly cloudy; South Atlantic Coast, moderate winds, mostly east, unsettled.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Southern New England—Fair Thursday and Friday; warmer Friday in the interior.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Thursday, Friday, fair and warmer.

Western New York—Fair and warmer Thursday and Friday.

Northern New England—Fair Thursday and Friday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

DEMOCRATS CALL ON WOMEN TO ENROLL

APPEAL FOR THE PRESIDENT

Six Women Sign State Committee Address Calling for Support of Administration.

The Democratic State Committee yesterday promulgated an address to the women voters of the State urging them to enroll as members of the Democratic Party. The enrollment of women, to enable them to qualify as voters in the State primaries this Fall, begins in up-State communities with less than 5,000 population today. Such enrollment will continue until June 15 and women voters may indicate their party preference by signing a certificate in the presence of a witness and forwarding this to the custodian of election records. In cities and villages of 5,000 or more inhabitants the enrollment will be held a week from Saturday, the enrollment places being open from 8 in the morning until 10 at night.

In its appeal to the women voters the committee urges as a ground for asking their support the progressive legislation which has been enacted by the Democratic Congress and the Legislature in this State under Democratic control, and the fact that in its conduct of the war the Democratic administration at Washington will be greatly hampered through Republican victories this Fall.

The address says:

"The Democratic Party under the inspiring leadership of Woodrow Wilson has in six years enacted more progressive and humanitarian laws than the Republican Party has enacted in sixty years. The Democratic Party enacted the child labor laws. It created the factory investigation commission and enacted the factory code to protect working women and children. It passed the income tax amendment and forced the ratification thereof in New York, the State where above all others the money power had been most firmly interenched.

"The Democratic Party, in order to bring about the widest popular participation in the choice of public officials, enacted the direct primary law and direct election of United States Senators. It enacted the Federal Reserve act, which forever destroyed the power of the money kings to manipulate the country's banking system and produce panics at will. It enacted the workmen's compensation law, the greatest measure ever put upon the statute book for the protection of the toiler in hazardous employments and those dependent on his toil.

"A Democratic Legislature created the Conservation Commission to develop the State's natural resources for the benefit of the whole people. A Republican Legislature drove that commission from office at the behest of the water power interests. A Republican Legislature gave to the Water Power Trust the vast water power of the St. Lawrence River. A Democratic Legislature recovered and restored that power to the people by the repeal of the notorious Long Sault grant. The Republican Party signalized its return to power three years ago by submitting a State Constitution so reactionary that it was rejected by a popular majority of more than half a million votes.

"GGovernor Whitman has wasted the people's substance in pursuit of his political ambitions. He has governed the State with his eye on the White House and his mind on the machinery of politics. He has treated the State's agricultural interests like a political pawn, and, by his political intrigues, has all but destroyed the efficiency of the Agricultural Department. He has increased the cost of the government so enormously that his total appropriations are 68 per cent. greater than those of his predecessor. He has so multiplied the placeholders that the cost of the State payroll today equals the total cost of the State government under Governor Odell.

"President Wilson and the Democratic Party are responsible for the conduct of the war. The women of our land have a right to demand that their husbands, their brothers, and their sons who are fighting gallantly at the front shall be returned to their homes at the earliest possible moment consistent with victory. They have a right to demand the election of a Governor who will no more profiteer in power than in money—a Governor who will give, as they have given, all that he has, even to the sacrifice of all political ambition, in wholehearted support of the Commander in Chief to win the war.

"The American people have but the one desire—to win the war and win it quickly. They have but the one thought—sustain the President and speed the triumph of our arms. They are opposed to whatever might retard, divide, or distract our efforts in that direction. Civilization today hangs in the balance. The hopes of humanity, the ongoing of the world, all that we hold nearest and dearest and best, are at stake. A result politically adverse next November would be interpreted at home and abroad as a vote of repudiation of the great leader in the battle for human rights and world democracy."

The address was drafted and signed by a subcommittee of the Executive Committee of the Democratic State Committee, composed of six women and two men. The members were Mrs. L. Mulcaire, Brooklyn; Miss Beulah Bailey, Troy; Miss I. Stebbins, Mrs. Westmiller, and Miss Sara McPike, New York; Mrs. F. E. Kennedy and W. W. Farley, Binghamton, and Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York.

LENDS HOUSE TO RED CROSS

Jacob H. Schiff Provides Rest Home for Nurses—Mrs. Vanderbilt to Help

Jacob H. Schiff has given a house on his estate, Rumson Road, near Seabroght, N. J., to the War Department and the Red Cross as a rest home for nurses worn by work at the front. The house is ready for immediate occupancy, and soon will be taken over by the Red Cross.

The house is a large dwelling, formerly the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Solomon Loeb, and includes about 200 acres. Mr. Schiff has a Summer home on the same grounds nearby. The house is ideally situated, surrounded by woods and fields, and will accommodate about twenty-five nurses.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt has given her home, 677 Fifth Avenue, to the Red Cross for the period of the drive for $100,000,000 next week. Musical entertainments will be given there each afternoon and evening. Among those who will aid are Frances Alda, Clarence Whitehall, Mabel Garrison, Reinald Werrenrath, Elsie Baker, Herbert Witherspoon, Marica van Dresser, Lambert Murphy, Carolina Lazzari, Leon Rothier, Povla Frijsh, Margaret Dunlap, Henry Weldon Hughes, May Peterson, Florence Hinkle, Marie Tiffany, Vera Curtis, Olive Kline, Paul Althouse, Josephine Jacoby, Andreas de Segurola, Eva Didur, Christine Langham, Paul Kefer, George Barrere, Carlos Salzedo and the Trio de Lutece.

CANADA TO TAKE TWO BIG RAILROADS

MAY OWN ALL ROADS SOON

OTTAWA, Ont., May 15.—Negotiations for Government acquisition of the Grand Trunk Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway were announced in the House of Commons today by Premier Borden. The Grand Trunk Pacific, he declared, was a national enterprise "to which the credit of the Canadian people has been committed and in my judgment it is expedient to maintain it and not permit it to go into liquidation." The taking over of the Grand Trunk Pacific practically involved the taking over of the Grand Trunk as well, he said.

Confidential negotiations had been opened with the Grand Trunk Railway, the Prime Minister stated.

"We have," he said, "made what we regard as a reasonable offer. They have replied to us by making a counter-offer which was of such a nature that we did not consider we could ask Parliament to accept it."

The Government had then proposed, he explained, that if no agreement could be reached the question should be submitted to arbitration without fixing any limit, as was done in the case of the Canadian Northern Railway.

During the Summer, Sir Robert added, a sub-committee of the Cabinet would be in London, and he had some "reasonable hope" that when Parliament was again summoned the Government might be in a position to place before it proposals which would involve the constitution into one system of State-owned railways in Canada of the chief railways in the country except the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"It may be possible," Sir Robert added, "indeed, I think it is probable, that at some later date, but not in the immediate future, all the land transportation facilities in Canada, in the shape of railways, may, so far as operation at least is concerned, be amalgamated into one system, carried on under one management."

The announcement came in the course of a general statement on the railway situation. In regard to the Canadian Northern Railway, Sir Robert said it was not intended that Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann should be on the Board of Directors. Sir Robert emphasized that while a road owned by the Canadian people must be subject to the direction and control of the people, yet it was absolutely essential that political influence should be eliminated from its administration.

It was intended to operate the road through a reconstituted Board of Directors, consisting of the best men it was possible to obtain. Interference would not be tolerated, and every means available to the Government would be used to operate the road properly.

Sir Robert gave a statement showing the financial standing of the system. Total liabilities were given as $438,264,377, as against assets of $520,437,885.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the Prime Minister had been very vague as to the organization under which the Canadian Northern Railway was to be run. Why wait until the arbitration proceedings were over before reorganizing the road? Sir Wilfrid asked. Sir Wilfrid declared further that the management of the Grand Trunk should not be in London. If the Government was thinking of taking the Grand Trunk Railway over, he added, he would warn it that the road was loaded with bad securities.

BRITISH IMPORTS CUT IN HALF SINCE 1913

LONDON, May 15.—Introducing the Board of Trade estimates in the House of Commons today Sir Albert H. Stanley said that the volume of imports in 1917 was only two-thirds the volume in 1913. This year it was estimated that the imports would not represent more than half those of 1913. No one before the war would have prophesied that the country could carry on as it was doing, suffering very little apparent discomforts, on half the imports before the war.

This was a valuable lesson, said the President of the Board of Trade, and the people of Great Britain should not allow themselves again to drift into dependence on foreign sources.

Taking the pre-war prices and adjusting the price level, the imports would be 40 per cent. and the exports 30 per cent. below the pre-war figures, he continued. The aggregate output of the various industries so far was very little less than before the war. More overtime was worked, and the work people worked harder; there was an improvement in the methods of manufacture, and at least a million and a half more women were engaged in work today than before the war.

NED WAYBURN IN CONTEMPT

Theatrical Man Also Fined $2,960, Amount of Unpaid Alimony.

Ned Wayburn, theatrical producer, was declared in contempt of court yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Platzek for failure to pay $40 a week alimony to his former wife, Mrs. Helene D. Wayburn, under a decree of divorce in 1916, and was fined $2,960, the amount of the unpaid alimony. An order for Wayburn's commitment to Ludlow Street Jail was signed, and unless he arranges to pay the fine the order will be carried out. His attorney offered yesterday to pay the sum in installments.

Mrs. Wayburn said that although her former husband has had an income of more than $500 a week he has sent her and her son an average of $3 a week, while he has been supporting the co-respondent, whom he married, in luxury in an apartment at 431 Riverside Drive and a cottage at Bayside, L. I. Wayburn told the court his former wife is seeking vengeance instead of alimony, and stated that he is struggling under an indebtedness of $40,000 sustained by the failure of theatrical enterprises.

FIXES BLAME FOR ODORS.

State Health Board Threatens to Revoke Licenses of Accused Companies

After an investigation regarding the source of obnoxious odors complained of by residents of Riverside Drive, and particularly the West End Association, the State Board of Health in a report yesterday stated that it had decided that the Corn Products Company and the General Chemical Company, whose factories are along the Jersey shore of the Hudson River, and who have been accused by the complainants, are mainly responsible for the odors. The companies were served yesterday with a notice to appear on June 4, at 10 A. M., before the State Board of Health, at 17 West Forty-third Street, and show cause why their licenses to transact business in New York State should not be revoked. The companies will be allowed to continue in business here if they agree to abate the nuisance.

While investigating the source of the obnoxious odors Inspectors for the State Health Department also found that offensive odors originated in one of the city's garbage dumps at the foot of West Ninety-sixth Street. State Health Commissioner Hermann M. Biggs has written the Street Cleaning Commissioner and other city officials asking that conditions be remedied.

In a letter to Health Commissioner Copeland, State Health Commissioner Biggs stated that it was not necessary for the city to spend any part of the $25,000 appropriated by the city to investigate the origin of the odors complained of by west side residents, as the investigators for the State Health Department had obtained sufficient evidence to place the blame where it belongs. Engineers of the State Board of Health have reported that it will not cost more than $25,000 for each of the companies found responsible for producing the objectionable odors to make changes in their chimneys so that the conditions will be obviated. In the proceedings James A. Warren of 61 Broadway acted as attorney for the State Board of Health.

Brooklyn Bank Drops German Name

The Board of Trustees of the Germania Savings Bank, Brooklyn, announced yesterday that the name of the institution has been changed to Fulton Savings Bank of King's County. This action of the Trustees is the outcome of a meeting held Tuesday night, when it was decided to strip the bank of every suspicion of German influence. Nearly all the officers of the bank are of German extraction.

At the age of 15, W. L. Douglas could make a Brogan shoe complete. He was ambitious, however, to learn the trade of boot making and two years later went to South Braintree, Mass., to work with that famous old time bootmaker, Mr. Ancil Thayer, under whom he thoroughly mastered the trade of making Men's Fine Calf Boots. The first year he was paid $1.50 a week and his board. The second year he received $3.00 weekly.

PRESIDENT NOW OPPOSED TO ANY WAR INQUIRY

FIGHT IMPENDS IN SENATE

SENATORS SHOW SURPRISE

Had Expected Acceptance of Modification — Too Much of a Dragnet, President Holds.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The gage was thrown down to the Senate today by President Wilson when, in conference at the White House with Senator Thompson of Kansas, he declared he would expect every supporter of the Administration in the conduct of the war to vote against the Chamberlain resolution, as amended by the Committee on Audit and Control, giving the Committee on Military Affairs authority to investigate the aircraft program, Ordnance, and the Quartermaster General's Department.

President Wilson urged Senator Thompson to impress upon Democratic Senators the necessity of standing with the Executive against investigation of war activities. When Senator Thompson returned to the Capitol he announced: "It's a fight."

That the challenge would be taken up was evident from remarks made on the floor of the Senate and in the lobby. The fight will come on a motion to adopt the amended Chamberlain resolution. This may come tomorrow or be put off until Saturday, or even later. It all depends upon the mustering of forces.

One thing assured is that it will not be a partisan line-up. The bulk of Administration Democrats undoubtedly will stand with the President, but others are avowedly in favor of putting the resolution through. On the Republican side there are at least three Senators on whom opponents of the resolution can count.

Passage of Resolution Predicted.

Although no poll of the Senate was obtainable, Senators believed today that the Chamberlain resolution, despite the President's opposition, would be passed by a margin of two or three votes. Senator Chamberlain made no effort to predict the outcome of the vote.

"I have made no poll and have asked no Senator to vote for the resolution," he said. "I know there is a distinct sentiment for a thorough investigation of the aircraft program and other features of war activity. If Senators vote according to their inclination, the resolution will be adopted. No Senator wants to set up a rhooping committee to harass the President. But most of the Senators believe in exposing inefficiency and mistakes, so as to improve the war machine."

In the Senate lobby surprise was expressed that the President had set himself against an aircraft inquiry. The President, it was recalled, had told Senator Thompson earlier in the week that he would not object to such an investigation. Senators wondered what had caused the President to change his mind. The President told Mr. Thompson, according to the Senator, that he felt that the Chamberlain resolution, even as modified, proposed too much of a dragnet inquiry, which might embarrass the Government in the conduct of the war and interfere with the aircraft inquiry to be made by the Department of Justice in association with Charles E. Hughes.

Senators Lodge, Weeks, Brandegee, Gallinger, and other Republican leaders refused to accept the President's interpretation that a vote for the Chamberlain resolution could be construed as disloyalty to the Administration in the conduct of the war. They were supported in this attitude by Senators Chamberlain, McKellar, and other Democratic members. In the vote on the resolution its advocates will stand upon the privilege of the Senate to conduct investigations as a branch of the Government.

Hughes as a Factor.

In brief debate on the Chamberlain resolution today, Senator Martin, Democratic floor leader, said the necessity for an aircraft inquiry by the Senate had passed with the appointment of Charles E. Hughes as special investigator for the Attorney General. This was disputed by advocates of the Chamberlain resolution, who insisted that Mr. Hughes's investigation would touch only upon criminality, while that of the Senate would be directed toward inefficiency, efforts to block the aircraft program, and expenditure of the $640,000,000 appropriated by Congress for aircraft.

Senator McKellar offered the majority report of the Audit Committee, favoring the Chamberlain resolution, and urged that it be adopted. Senator Thompson,

Last of the German Superguns Destroyed by French Battery

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 16.- Parisians will soon have the pleasure of seeing a cinema photographic reproduction of the firing of the French heavy guns which on May 3 put the last German supercannon out of action. An official army photographer attached to the force in charge of the counterbattery work told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today that he had obtained an excellent film of eight shots from Mirielle—the heroine of the Provençal poet Mistral's masterpiece—and Mary Magdalene, as the two great French guns were named by the battery. It is impossible to say which of the shots was successful, but hardly had the echo of the eighth died away when the message came from a signaling plane that two shells had struck the target.

GENEVA, May 16.—Two of the long-distance guns which have been bombarding Paris have been taken to the Krupp plant for repairs, the Constance Zeitung states. Such huge guns, the newspaper adds, cannot be fired indefinitely without timely repairs.

ITALIANS ENTER AUSTRIAN LINES

BRITISH RAID ALSO WINS

Great Drive for Milan and Brescia Said to be in Preparation by the Foe.

ROME, May 16.—Italian troops carried out an offensive operation yesterday in which the Austrian trenches on Monte Asolone, between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, were entered at two points. The Italians inflicted heavy casualties and took prisoners. In addition to this aggressive movement the War Office reports a successful patrol action by the British at Canove, in which prisoners also were taken. Enemy raiding parties were repulsed. The text of the statement reads:

Our infantry and assault detachments entered the enemy trenches on Monte Asolone at two places. A portion of the garrison was killed. The survivors fled, leaving a few prisoners in our hands. British patrols raided the enemy positions at Canove, capturing an officer and a few men.

Various attempts by the enemy to approach our advance line in the Rosole Valley, at Fortini, in the Posina Valley, and on Col di Chele, failed.

In the Lagarian and Arsa Valleys and on the Asiago Plateau there was increased artillery activity on both sides.

VIENNA, May 16, (via London.)—Bitter fighting between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, on the Italian front, is reported in the official statement issued by the War Office today. The statement reads:

Between the Brenta and the Piave several Italian reconnoitring thrusts were repulsed. As a result of these attacks hand to hand fighting developed at Monte Asolone and Monte Pertica.

LONDON, May 16, (via Ottawa.)—An Austrian blow against Italy may be expected at an early date, in the opinion of well-informed observers here. The enemy project, it is believed generally, comprises a great invasion with Milan and Brescia as the chief objectives in a scheme to smash the Italian Army.

Since the retreat last October the Italian strategic plan has been recast and the main defensive positions are now held solidly, but it is believed the Austrians intend to strike against the remaining 150 miles of the original front west of the Brenta. Along the mountain wall stretching from the Stelvio Pass to Monte Grappa, between the Brenta and the Piave, the enemy has the advantage of the positions.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Italy, in an informal way, has made known to the United States that the presence of American troops on the Italian front is greatly to be desired. A few thousand men under the American flag, Italian officials feel, would hearten the Italian civilian population and the troops.

Italy has an abundance of man power, but desires the inspiration that would

U-BOATS ON DEFENSIVE

Dozen Sinkings in Month Officially Reported, Two Others Known.

MUTINIES NOW FREQUENT

BATTLESHIPS IN CONVOYS

Use of Great Fighters in This Service Given as Cause of Jellicoe's Resignation.

Twelve German submarines were sunk or captured in British waters by the American and British destroyers during the month of April, which was a record. This means that twelve U-boats were officially reported and recognized as sunk and that evidence, either a cap bearing the name of the submarine, a portion of the craft, or a live or dead German was produced when each case was recorded.

In addition to this number, at least two other U-boats were destroyed during that period. One was sunk on April 8 in the North Sea while making an attack on a convoy to Holland. The periscope was sighted at 11 A. M., and before she could let go a torpedo at the nearest steamship six destroyers rushed over and dropped depth charges in every direction. The explosion was so violent that the vessels heeled over nearly forty-five degrees.

When the convoy came up there was a large lake of black oil bubbling up from below and the destroyers still kept watch to see if any debris belonging to the U-boat rose to the surface that might be useful as evidence to gain official recognition from the Admiralty.

This successful attack was witnessed by the writer of this account.

Another U-boat, making the total fourteen, was sunk on Friday, April 26, during the forenoon while attempting to attack a convoy of transports filled with American troops on the way to France. The undersea craft rose between two of the convoy and fired a torpedo, which missed the transport to starboard by a few feet. Almost immediately afterward four fast American destroyers were on the scene and had dropped seven depth charges. After the fifth bomb an explosion was heard at some depth below the surface and a quantity of thick oil floated to the surface. The commanders of the destroyers said they were satisfied that the German submarine had been sunk.

With the improvement in the hydrophones for listening to the approach of the U-boats and new devices, such as sound waves that are sent out by the destroyers under water which record the position of any object they come in contact with, and the success of the depth charges, the submarine menace has been conquered. The commanders of the U-boats are worrying now and are acting on the defensive. Several cases of mutiny among the crews and the wrecking of submarines along desolate coasts have been reported in England during the last eight weeks.

The convoys are escorted by cruisers, destroyers, patrol boats, and dirigibles, called "blimps," which are better than the seaplanes, as they can swoop down over the water and hover in one spot for any length of time without any difficulty. Battleships, as well as battle-cruisers and destroyers, are used to escort the big convoys across the North Sea to Norway and Denmark. There are from fifty to seventy-five steamships in each convoy and they all manage to get across safely. The U-boats try very hard to get the vessels in the Dutch convoys, as they can see them from Zeebrugge, and are directed by scout airplanes.

If the submarine cannot get there in time the airplanes try to drop bombs on the steamships even when they have reached neutral waters along the coast of Holland. So far they have succeeded in sinking only one small Dutch vessel.

Admiral Jellicoe was against sending the battleships to sea for the purpose of protecting convoys, as he thought the risk of their being torpedoed was too great. He was overruled at the Admiralty after the capture of a convoy in the North Sea by the Germans, and that, it is understood, was the cause of his resignation.

The sinking of vessels in the Mediterranean is still considerable on account of the lack of destroyers. The American and British destroyers are all needed for convoy work and for protecting the shipping in the Irish Sea and waters around the British Coast, and the Mediterranean is left to the French and Italian destroyers, with a few Japanese destroyers.

According to official figures in London, the output of the shipyards in England and America next month will exceed the estimated loss of tonnage by 10,000 and increase monthly hereafter.

The American warships of all sizes have been brigaded with the British Navy since the United States entered the war last Spring and the combined efforts in attacking the submarine menace may now be pronounced successful.

Burbank Finds Super-Wheat After 11 Years' Experiments

SANTA ROSA, Cal., May 16.—A "super-wheat," containing 14 per cent. gluten, has been evolved by Luther Burbank, the California horticulturist, after experiments extending over eleven years, it was announced here today.

The wheat may be grown from Hudson Bay to Patagonia. The new wheat is said to be of the Winter variety, hardy and producing a white flour.

The new wheat will average a yield of forty bushels to an acre, Mr. Burbank said.

"The new wheat will earn for California a world-wide reputation as a superior wheat producing State," he continued. "California wheat, due to a lack of sufficient gluten, has made an inferior flour grain up to the present time."

Mr. Burbank said eighty varieties of rye at present are under a crossing process on his farm near here in connection with experiments to create a new rye and barley which would eliminate difficulties similar to those found in wheat.

ITALIANS TORPEDO BIG DREADNOUGHT

SQUADRON CO-OPERATES

Several Austrian Machines Are Downed in Night Attack on Great Naval Base.

ROME, May 16.—An Austrian battleship of the Viribus Unitis type, (20,000-ton vessels,) was torpedoed by Italian naval forces in Pola Harbor early Tuesday morning, it was officially announced today. The Italian force worked its way into the Austrian naval base by dodging the patrol boats and searchlights of the defenders.

While the naval operation was progressing, an Italian seaplane force engaged Austrian battleplanes above Pola. Two of the Austrians were brought down and several others were compelled to decend, out of control. The Italian machines all returned safely.

The text of the official announcement reads:

Italian naval units, avoiding patrol boats and searchlights, succeeded in entering Pola Harbor early on Tuesday and in torpedoing an Austrian battleship of the Viribus Unitis type.

Simultaneously, Italian seaplane squadrons attacked Austrian battleplanes over Pola, brought down two and forced several others down out of control. The Italian machines all returned safely to their bases.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Italian Embassy late this afternoon received from Rome an official communication confirming the press report of the destruction of an Austrian dreadnought of the Viribus Unitis type at the Austrian naval base at Pola on Wednesday morning. The exploit was carried out by Italian officers, who penetrated the harbor in a small torpedo boat. The message to the embassy read:

In the early hours of May 14, Captains Mario da Vignola of Modina, Antonio Milani of Lodi, Francesco Anselmi of Syracuse, and Giuseppe Corrias of Cagliari, in a small torpedo boat with admirable individual spirit of sacrifice and extraordinary military and naval skill, eluding the sentinels and searchlights constantly searching the water, succeeded in penetrating the well-protected and fortified military port of Pola and successfully torpedoed a large Austrian dreadnought of the Viribus Unitis type.

On the night of the 12th thirteen of our torpedo boats attacked an enemy transport which was being convoyed into the port of Durazzo by an escort of Austrian torpedo boats. Although our boats had been discovered by the enemy searchlights and were immediately fired upon from all directions, they succeeded in sinking the transport and badly damaged one of the enemy torpedo boats, after which our units returned safely to their base.

The sinking of an Austro-Hungarian dreadnought of the Viribus Unitis class, in the harbor of Pola by Italian naval detachments, recalls a similar exploit in the harbor of Trieste on the night of Dec. 10, when the Italians sank the Wien and seriously crippled the Monarch, two pre-dreadnoughts of 5,000 tons each. The exploit at Trieste, however, was performed by light torpedo craft cutting the chain barrier at the harbor mouth and torpedoing the battleships as they lay at their docks.

The vessel sunk at Pola was nearly four times as large as either the Wien or the Monarch, and the harbor much more difficult to penetrate than that of the open port of Trieste protected by a chain barrier kept afloat on buoys between the mole and the shore.

The harbor of Pola has an indentation of three miles with an entrance from the sea opposite the island of Scoglio Grande of two miles in length, and at places less than half a mile wide. Forts Cristo and Musil guard the entrance which, on account of a mole jutting out from the latter, is only a thousand yards wide at its mouth.

There were four dreadnoughts belonging to the Viribus Unitis class—the Viribus Unitis, Tegetthof, Prinz Eugen, and Szent Istvan. The first was laid down in 1910 and completed in 1912; the last laid down in 1912 and completed in the first year of the war. The first three were built at Pola; that last at Fiume.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, May 16.—The long postponement of the enemy's coming assaults seems to be definite proof that his losses in the first six weeks of his offensive were so heavy that he had to abandon the costly tactical blows which followed his general advance in order to reorganize his fighting machine and prepare for new battles on a wide front.

The task of filling up the gaps by large drafts from his depots, where he has begun to draw upon boys of the 1919 class, and of training those new formations for field warfare has taken up time, and it seems to me evident now that he will not attempt to strike again until his fresh and refitted divisions are ready for a new offensive on something like the scale of March 21.

That might be preceded, perhaps, by a few local assaults in order to gain the ground he needs for his general jump-off, or he might act according to his latest methods.

A day now may bring this beginning of a new series of battles, but the time he has already taken has been entirely in the Allies' favor, and they need be in no hurry for him to begin.

The Allies have forced from the enemy the very thing which he wanted most to deny the Allies—time. By yielding that under force majeure he has had to abandon his greatest chance of victory, and, as many of us believe, his only chance.

The British gaps are now filled up. The exhaustion of the British troops after the long fighting has now passed. The French armies are mingled with the British, who no longer will have to bear the brunt of the enemy's full strength in numbers that were hideously unequal.

That the German high command should give time for this is good enough evidence that they could take no further risks in the first gamblers' throw, and had to cut their losses for a time, or at least be satisfied with smaller gains than they had hoped.

Scenes Behind the Lines.

Yesterday the German guns did some violent counterbattery work with gas shells and others, trying to silence the allied guns which are still harassing the German side of things in a very deadly way. All this is the routine of war between battles.

What is better to see is behind the lines. It is enchanting now, and puts such a spell upon one's senses at these glinting woods of France, where every leaf is a jewel; these gardens of old châteaux, where the grass is sprinkled with living gold; these French villages where whitewashed walls and tiled roofs are warm in the sun and painted in picture book colors remind one of the old songs which had not war, but love, for their theme. Now they are all interwoven with pictures of this war, but pleasant pictures.

So jolly is it behind the battlefields that war itself seems for a while nothing more than a pageant of fine men under the sky. It is a moving and marvelous pageant of blue and brown where the French and English pass along the roads with the fire of dust behind them and about them the white dust again which powders them like millers and bleaches the black beards of the pollus and makes a chalky mask on the bronze faces of the marching British, down which the sweat runs in little channels.

Men in the French lorries sit with their heads out of the side flares, winking at the Tommies on the way, casting amorous eyes upon buxom lasses in the cottage doors and smoking endless cigarettes with a look of complete indifference to anything that may happen at the journey's end.

They are rough types, some of them men of middle-age, hard-bitten by these years of war, with spade beards, like Elizabethan Englishmen or Henri

Germans Produce an All-Steel "Flying Tank" For Short-Range Attacks on Allied Infantry

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 15.—German aviators are training in the use of the "flying tank." This newest weapon of the air is an all-steel plane. Not only is it armored, but its wings are made of steel. It has a speed of fifty miles an hour, and carries several six-centimeter guns.

The Germans are understood to be now making very elaborate tests with it. This new tool of war represents a German effort to outstrip the Allies in the use of airplanes flying low against infantry. The Allies have had marked success with this kind of aerial warfare, especially in the recent Somme battles, and Fritz evidently is to try to go them one better.

I also learn that a Berlin engineer has patented a new type of airplane gun mounted on a revolving turret directly over the aviator and in the centre, between the wings. The turret, being mounted on ball bearings, is capable of revolving 360 degrees. It is not known whether this is a part of the equipment of the flying tank.

Giant airplanes of a new type have been sent to German aviation schools for training in long-range bombing. The Germans have been trying since the latter part of 1915 to perfect very large bombing machines, but so far have met with little success.

Reports have reached here that the Germans propose to establish bases for these planes at Zeebrugge, Cuxhaven, Heligoland, Ostend, and other places. It is reported that their objectives are London, Paris, and the debarkation and concentration points of the American troops.

These machines are designed to carry two 37-millimeter guns, and travel 135 miles an hour.

Reports are also made of factories in Berlin building a new two-seated airplane of great carrying capacity for bombing work, and much slower than the machine just described. It is equipped with four motors, two of high power, for general use, and two of lower power for emergency use. These machines are designed to remain in the air fifteen hours at a speed of fifty kilometers. Experiments with them did not produce good results.

PERSHING STARTS HIS COMMUNIQUES

Army Headquarters Bulletins, Begun Wednesday Night, Likely to be Made Permanent.

WELCOMED IN CAPITAL

Army Officers Think First Announcement Shows We Have an Air Squadron in Action.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 16, (Associated Press.)—The second American official communiqué, timed 9 o'clock tonight, says:

In Lorraine patrolling was active and there was again an increase in the artillery fire.

Otherwise the day was quiet at all points occupied by our troops.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Publication here today of the first American "official communiqué" prepared at the Expeditionary Headquarters in France, and issued there last evening, inaugurated what is expected to be a daily report to the American people on what their soldiers abroad are doing.

In giving out the text of the statement, Secretary Baker could not say definitely that one would be forthcoming daily hereafter. That rests with General Pershing, but Mr. Baker indicated his hope that the expeditionary commander would find it possible to follow that course.

AMERICAL OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE.

Headquarters American Expeditionary Forces, May 15, 1918.

[Section A.]

North of Toul and in Lorraine there was a marked increase of artillery activity on both sides.

Today two of our aviators brought down three German machines.

There is nothing else of importance to report.

[Section B.]

In Lorraine, May 12, three snipers, scouts of intelligence service, went out in camouflage sniping suits to find German snipers and encountered eighteen of the enemy at strong point near dugout. They shot four, of whom one appeared to be an officer, secured valuable papers, and retired under heavy fire. One failed to reach our lines and the Major commanding the sector sent three officers and four men to find him.

This patrol also penetrated enemy's line and reached the strong point attacked by first patrol. Here the enemy was now reinforced and our patrol was driven back by hot fire and grenade fire. On reaching our lines one man of this patrol also was found missing. Two officers who went out to find him killed an enemy scout and brought back body for identification purposes. The man missing from the second patrol has not been found, but the third intelligence scout of first party has returned.

On May 12, three officers of our aviation forces were cited in orders by the commanding General of a French army corps and decorated with the Croix de Guerre: Major Ralph Royce of Hancock, Mich., for making first American reconnoissance over enemy lines and for always setting one example to his squadron; First Lieut. Herbert R. Garside of New York City, pilot, and Second Lieut. Paul D. Meyers of Milwaukee, observer, for an infantry

1,500,000 TROOPS ABROAD BY JANUARY

America Has Promised That Number of Fighting Men, Says Clemenceau's Paper.

WASHINGTON HOPES FOR IT

But Is Loath to Make Definite Assertions Thus Early—Baker's Estimate Recalled.

PARIS, May 16.—Announcement was made today in Premier Clemenceau's newspaper, L'Homme Libre, that the United States had promised to have 1,500,000 fighting men in France by the end of 1918.

These troops, it added, must have their own organization and services, which would meant at least 2,000,000 specialists, workers, men in the Quartermaster's Department, and others.

The newspaper went on to say that certain misunderstandings which had existed had been cleared up, and that under no circumstances would allied workers or soldiers displace French workers in factories.

The presence of American workers on French soil would be in direct consequence of the presence of American fighters on the front.

Washington Hopeful but Cautious.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—With more than 500,000 men now in France, army officials are more than ever hopeful that a powerful American force will be co-operating with the Allies there by the end of the year. Unhappy experience with over sanguine estimates of what can be accomplished make them slow, however, to put their hopes into definite predictions, and it was not possible tonight to obtain specific confirmation of the report from Paris that a promise had been made to have 1,500,000 fighting men in France before Jan. 1.

The statement in Clemenceau's newspaper that such a promise had been made was not believed by army officers generally to mean that the American Government definitely pledged itself to deliver a specific number of men within a time limit. Many factors are involved in making such a calculation months in advance.

Secretary Baker would make no comment on the statement. Many weeks ago he told the Senate Military Committee that the Government then had hopes of getting 1,500,000 to the front during the year. Since then his estimate that 500,000 men would reach France early in the year has been fulfilled, and since then, also, the German drive has changed the course of events, and had brought about a speeding up of American preparations which has already shown results.

Whether the result indicated by Clemenceau's newspaper can be attained depends on the shipping situation. The men and the essential equipment for them can be made ready.

May Have 4,000,000 in Arms in 1919.

Under the authority sought by President Wilson to organize as large an army as it is found possible to train, equip, and transport, officials expect at least 3,000,000 men to be under arms in the next twelve months. Many believe that even a larger force can be handled,

But Sixtus Letter Was Restricted by Emperor Charles to France and Britain.

Alleged French Aim Not Credited—Asquith Approves Speech—Cecil Denies Peace Bar.

LONDON, May 16.—The British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Arthur J. Balfour, in giving explanations in the House of Commons today in connection with Emperor Charles's letter to Prince Sixtus of Bourbon, recently made public by the President of the French Republic, said that no effort at conversations had ever been made by the Central Powers in the interest of a fair and honorable peace, and he added:

"If any representative of any belligerent country desires seriously to lay before us any proposals we are ready to listen to them."

The letter in question had been examined by a committee of the French Chamber, said Mr. Balfour, and the conclusion had been reached that it did not provide an adequate or satisfactory basis for an honorable peace.

Mr. Balfour, in his explanations, was replying to questions submitted by Walter Runciman, former President of the Board of Trade, who asked whether, when Emperor Charles's letter was communicated to the French Government, and by the French Government to the British Prime Minister, it was communicated to any other of the Allies, and had the American Government any information as to what was passing; did the Prime Minister inform the Foreign Office at the time of the fact that the communication had been shown to him; why were the negotiations dropped—was it on purely territorial grounds, was it because a demand was made by France, not only for Alsace-Lorraine, but for the 1814 line, or even the 1790 line?

Speech of Mr. Balfour.

Mr. Balfour said that Mr. Runciman put questions to him which naturally excited a great deal of interest, both here and abroad.

"I must remind the House, however," he continued, "that there is a very natural tendency to treat this subject as if it were one in which the British Government alone were concerned and that the opposition or critics of the day had the right, in the public interest and their own, to extract the last drop of information which it was in the power of the Government to give. That might be the natural mood for the House to be in when discussing ordinary subjects of domestic controversy, but it is not the mood suited to the delicate question of international policy.

"In international affairs it is not a good thing necessarily to discourage informal attempts at conversations. But we have never at any time initiated conversations of that sort. We have never turned down conversations when other people wished them.

"If any representative of any belligerent country desires seriously to lay before us any proposals, we are ready to listen to them. Of course, we are not going to deal with them without the cognizance of our allies.

"The mere fact that such conversations are of an informal character makes that a very improper subject for discussion in the House. That is true as a general proposition and emphatically and especially true of the subject now under discussion.

"The letter to which public attention is directed was a private letter written by Emperor Charles to a relative (Prince Sixtus of Bourbon) and conveyed by him to President Poincaré and the French Premier under seal of the strictest secrecy, but with no permission to communicate it to anyone except the Sovereign and Premier of this country. The letter was communicated to the French and English Premiers under these pledges.

"While I cannot conceive of a more inconvenient method of dealing with a great transaction, the inconvenience in this case was not due to any wish on the part of the British Government or the British Premier. Directly you depart from the ordinary method of conducting international affairs you lend yourself in inevitable difficulties.

No Secrets from Wilson.

"I was in America at the time of these transactions, and, as they were over when I returned, I did not go into them as intimately as I might have done."

As to whether any person had been informed of these negotiations, Mr. Balfour said that the American Government was at the time no better informed of the facts regarding Emperor Charles's letter than he was himself, but if any one supposed that on that account he had ever shown any want of confidence in the Government or President of the United States, he was under a complete delusion. He had no secrets from President Wilson. Every thought he had on the war or the diplomacy connected with the war was as open to President Wilson as to any other human being. He did not think it possible for Great Britain and the United States to carry on the great work in which they were engaged or to deal with the complicated day to day problems without complete confidence, and so far as he was concerned complete confidence would always be given.

Referring to the Stockholm conference, the Foreign Secretary expressed the opinion that it would not have paved the way to the settlement of the war.

"The course taken by the British Government with regard to the Stockholm conference," he continued, "had no connection, near or remote, with Emperor Charles's letter to Prince Sixtus, or with the negotiations or conversations resulting therefrom. They were treated as wholly separate and absolutely unconnected subjects.

"We do not know, and will only know when the secrets of the archives of Europe are opened to the world, and perhaps not even then, exactly what were the motives which influenced Emperor Charles and the German Emperor in these various transactions. Perhaps we will never know what the motives were which actuated Count Czernin, Emperor Charles, and the German Emperor. I am inclined to think that it was part of a peace offensive, by which I mean peace proposals initiated by one party which did not desire peace, but which desired to divide its opponents.

Clemenceau Exposed Falsehood.

"The falsehood exposed by Premier Clemenceau was that the whole war was being conducted in order that France might obtain Alsace-Lorraine and Italy should have nothing. When we are dealing with people so cynical as the Central Powers, some kind of contemplated the possibility of what we Therefore, the counterattack delivered by M. Clemenceau appears to have been thoroughly effective, in the sense that it exposed, in the cleverest manner, the motives animating Central European diplomacy.

"No effort at conversations made by the Central Powers has ever been made in the interest of a fair and honorable peace, but in order to divide the Allies. There is no evidence now or at any time that the German Government circles contemplated the possibility of what we should regard as a reasonable peace—a peace which would secure the freedom of the world, the freedom of those who are in danger of German domination.

"This question has been examined, and no doubt, with fuller knowledge of the facts that I can state to the house, by a committee of the French Chamber. The British have not the machinery for the sort of investigation conducted by the French. The French had the machinery and used it freely, and the conclusion reached was that the Emperor Charles letter did not provide an adequate or satisfactory basis for an honorable peace.

"It might be said that other motives than judicial consideration of historical facts animated the verdict. If there existed any prejudices at all, these would surely have been in favor of a peace which would give the French Alsace-Lorraine, because the suggestion was that Charles should make a proposal, which could have been afterward imposed on Germany, by which the war should come to an end and France should claim Alsace-Lorraine."

The Secretary said that if the proposal had really contained the seeds of an honorable peace, the Committee of the French Chamber would surely have expressed regret that the opportunity had been thrown away by the French Government or the French Premier. No one, he added, was more desirous than the British Government that the war should be brought to an honorable termination, and if any method whereby that could be accomplished were shown to the Government, it would be accepted.

"But," Mr. Balfour went on, "we are fighting as one among many allies against the Central Powers, who never at any time, and now less than ever, have had the least intention of meeting our wishes—I am talking about our legitimate wishes, and I mean wishes on which the whole house and the whole country are entirely in agreement. These great aims of ours can only be obtained by absolute loyalty between the Allies."

Not for Bigger Alsace-Lorraine.

Referring to the suggestion made by Mr. Runciman that France had asked for a bigger Alsace-Lorraine than that of 1870, Mr. Balfour said there was no question of this bigger Alsace-Lorraine being the war aim of the Allies.

Mr. Balfour added that the conversations which Gabtan Doumergue, formerly French Premier and Foreign Minister, had with the Russian Emperor in 1916 regarding a bigger Alsace-Lorraine which France would demand, were not known to Great Britain until very much later. They had no international bearing, he said, did not pledge Great Britain, and the British Government never gave the least encouragement to any such notion.

Mr. Balfour said that an extended Alsace-Lorraine was not a subject which should ever be contemplated seriously, and he did not think it ever was a fixed part of the foreign policy of the French Government for any length of time. The Foreign Minister also said that the pourparlers over the Austrian Emperor's letter were not interfered with by the demand of France for an extension of territory beyond her boundaries of 1870.

Replying to a question by Robert Outhwaite as to whether Prince Sixtus of Bourbon had two visits to England in connection with the peace proposals and whether he was in communication on this subject with Premier Lloyd George, Mr. Balfour said that the subject was not one which could be dealt with by question and answer.

Asquith Glad Door Is Open.

Former Premier Asquith, who followed Mr. Balfour, said that while in his judgment there had not been and could not be any contraction, so there should not be any expansion of the clear aims and purposes for which Great Britain had entered and was prosecuting the war and desiring to bring it to a successful issue,

Mr. Asquith said that he desired to record the satisfaction which he felt at the instructive and opportune statement made by Mr. Balfour. It was a satisfaction to the world at large, he said, that the British Government has closed no door on any overtures and approaches toward an honorable peace.

"To whatever quarter," said Mr. Asquith, "be it with adequate authority and in real good faith, an appeal is made, if it is based on substantial considerations, it will not be made to deaf ears. The whole House is glad of the assurance that not only in matters of this kind, but in all matters, we have kept no secrets from President Wilson. We could not carry on a struggle of this kind without complete mutual confidence."

With regard to the supposed claim of France to the line of 1814, Mr. Asquith said he gathered that the allegation that President Poincaré put forward this demand was totally without foundation, so far as Mr. Balfour knew. He regarded with still more satisfaction Mr. Balfour's declaration that this had never been one of the war aims of the British Government, and, so far as he knew, it had not been, and was not, the settled policy of the French Government.

"Is that right?" he asked the Secretary, and Mr. Balfour replied: "I think so."

Mr. Asquith said that he was extremely glad and he thought the world would be glad to hear it.

Open to Fair Offer, Says Cecil.

After a brief general discussion, Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, gave an explanation of his "peace offensive" interview, which was given to the press on Friday, May 3, and in which he said that a "peace offensive" would be directed very largely against England and that the Central Powers would put out offers which they might think would be attractive to the British. He said that a peace offensive was an entirely different thing from a peace effort. A peace offensive would be designed to help the German armies in the field, and he believed that one would be forthcoming when he gave the interview.

"As to the suggestion that I intended to convey the idea that any offer that Germany might make would have to be rejected," he said, "I say there is not one syllable that I uttered which could be construed by any fair-minded man to mean that. I repeat that any offer that is made, come from what source it may, provided it has a reputable and trustworthy source deserves consideration by the Government."

Philip Snowden, Laborite, made an attack upon the demands of Italy, saying that they were "selfish and unreasonable." Replying, Lord Robert said that he was forced to repudiate that sentiment with all the strength he could muster.

"The attack is without foundation and undeserved," he said. "For what purpose it was made, except to assist the enemy, I cannot understand. We believe the aims of Italy to be as high and pure as those of any other belligerent, and we value her assistance to the greatest possible degree. We are determined to preserve our allegiance with her, as we are with all the other allies."

Referring to Russia, Lord Robert said: "We have no quarrel with Russia at all. On the contrary, with the Russian people we have always desired to be on the closest possible terms of friendship. We are anxious to do all we can to support and assist the Russian people to preserve Russia as a great country, not only now, but in the period after the war."

Lord Robert denied that Great Britain had any quarrel with the Bolsheviki over their domestic policy, saying:

"That is a matter for Russia, and Russia alone; we have no other desire than to see Russia great, powerful, and non-German."

WILSON IN ACCORD WITH BALFOUR SPEECH

May Supplement It with a Public Utterance—No Complaint as to Sixtus Letter.

WASHINGTON, May 16. — Either through a public address or a diplomatic note President Wilson, in the near future, may take occasion to comment upon and supplement the statement made today by Foreign Minister Balfour, in the British House of Commons, in connection with the Austrian peace feelers through Prince Sixtus of Bourbon.

It was authoritatively stated today that the American Government fully reciprocated Mr. Balfour's expressions of confidence and regard, and had no intention of permitting the machinations of the enemy to mar the perfect understanding which governed the relations between the United States and the Entente. There is declared to be no public sentiment in this country such as that which appears to exist in a small but active English pacifist circle, holding it to be the duty of the Government to consider any kind of a peace proposal that may be made, regardless of the source or of a mischievous purpose.

There is no disposition in Administration circles here to complain because the Washington Government was not advised of the Sixtus letters, for it is realized that the peculiar conditions under which the correspondence with the Austrian Emperor's brother-in-law—was conducted imposed obligations of confidence and secrecy that could not be disregarded by an honorable statesman. It is pointed out also that the United States Government has not entered into any such formal undertaking as bound the Entente allies not to consider peace proposals separately, though President Wilson has declared in his speeches that any peace which would be acceptable must embody fundamentals upon which America and the Entente allies were in complete accord.

Had the proposals of Prince Sixtus been found to demand serious consideration no doubt is felt here that before undertaking negotiations the French and British Governments would have insisted upon the removal of the seal of secrecy so as to consult not only America, but Italy, Belgium, Japan, and, in fact, all of the countries fighting Germany.

If today's parliamentary debate in London leads to a further expression of opinion by President Wilson on the subject of peace it is probable that he will not find it necessary to do more than refer to the aims which he has set out in his addresses to Congress.

The War Situation

There has been much speculation as to the German losses in the series of battles beginning on March 21, but the various estimates have been so at variance that little reliance can be placed on any of them. We may, however, draw certain conclusions from the casualty lists announced by the British, which cover at least a part of the fighting.

For the week ended May 5 the British have announced that their casualties are about 42,000. This does not mean that this list is complete to May 5. On the contrary, it is much more probable that this list was made up as of some date two or three days earlier, about May 2. If we assume, then, that this British list is for the week ended on the 2d, or even the 3d, the period covered included what was probably the most serious fighting of the entire German effort—the fighting about Mont Kemmel which followed immediately the capture of that place. In this fighting the German troops were completely defeated.

All the testimony which has been received is unanimous in telling of the great German losses in their effort to take the series of crests west of Mont Kemmel. Not only that, but it is always the case that the most serious losses are incurred in unsuccessful attacks. This has been experienced time and again since offensive operations in the west began. In the battle of the Somme there were cases where a successful attack by a brigade involved losses of comparatively few men. But in the same battle unsuccessful attacks cost divisions as high as 9,000 infantry out of 12,000 engaged.

After all, this is but logical. The artillery may not have done its work as thoroughly as it was expected to do; the strength of the enemy at a given point may be underestimated; either of these would leave the defense practically unshaken and permit a devastating fire from rifle and machine gun. Then, when the attack is rolled back the storming troops are caught as they retreat and subjected to the same fire until they are again in the safety of their trenches.

What was the situation in the last days of April? The German artillery had not yet had an opportunity to come up in force. The heavy artillery, indeed, was for the most part not in action. Destruction of the allied batteries, well posted on commanding heights, could not be effected by light artillery.

On the other hand, the Allies had their artillery of all calibres actively engaged. They fell back along their line of communications, so that they were drawing toward their bases, and not away from them. They therefore had an artillery superiority which was growing the further back they retreated.

Moreover, while the fire of field artillery is disconcerting and often very effective, it has not the shattering effect on the nerves that is produced by the fire of heavier guns. It is, therefore, particularly in view of the nature of the defense itself, improbable that the allied infantry and machine gun companies, were shaken by the German artillery fire.

We do not know, of course, what estimate the Germans placed on the strength before them. But whatever it was, we have reason to believe that the German idea was an underestimate. We know, moreover, that attack after attack was flung back; that in many cases the attack never even reached the trenches, but was broken up as it was formed; we know that after days of the heaviest fighting the Germans were forced to desist, although the position in which they were left was most uncomfortable.

Under the circumstances, it was unavoidable that the losses must have been much heavier than those of the defense, in this case probably two to one or even heavier. Therefore, in the fighting south and east of Mont Kemmel, the German losses must have been close to 100,000 men, and that in not more than a week's fighting.

In this area about Mount Kemmel and in the other parts of the Flanders salient there were about thirty divisions engaged, a total force of about 400,000 men. In this week, therefore, the German loss was at least equal to 25 per cent. of the troops engaged. While this ratio of losses would not hold good throughout in an equal space of time, taking the offensive operations as a whole since March 21, the total could not have been much less than 400,000, if, indeed, this figure was not exceeded. Naturally, Germany does not publish her casualty lists now, and if she did they could not be relied upon, but from those of the Allies who have been in the hardest fighting one may draw a fair comparison.

As to the operations of yesterday, there is still a marked quiet on the front in France, broken only by sporadic artillery fire, which at times grows to the intensity of drum fire. There is no indication yet that the German attack is about to be resumed. Yet a few hours may change the situation, since German tactics, as recently exemplified, are to throw a deluge of high explosive and gas shells for but a few hours and then to send over the infantry.

The only fighting has been about Hill 44, that little knoll in Flanders north of Kemmel which the French wrested from the Germans several days ago. It has, apparently, changed hands several times, the French being alternately down in the muddy plain and on top of the hill. Now, however, it appears to be firmly in French hands.

be afforded by the presence of American forces. In the face of a threatened Austro-German offensive on the Italian front, the dispatch of American troops to Italy, it is declared, would convince the Italian people that America stands firmly behind their country.

German propaganda is active in Italy, from Sicily to the Alps, telling the people they are left to their own resources; that they are fighting hopelessly, and that America has been bluffing. It is to combat this propaganda that the Italian Government has suggested the presentation to Italians of the proof of American determination in the form of American soldiers, under the American flag, on Italian soil.

ITALY EXPECTS EARLY BLOW.

ROME, May 16.—The meeting of Kaiser Charles with the German Emperor continues to be the subject of much comment in diplomatic and political circles here. A Senator, speaking on the matter, said:

"It is quite evident that the German Emperor insisted to Charles that the Austrian Army must make a move and come soon into action against Italy. An offensive on our front therefore is daily expected—on what point we are not yet able to ascertain; but wherever it may happen, our soldiers are ready calmly and courageously to meet any eventuality."

RUMANIANS FOR WEST FRONT.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—A diplomatic dispatch, received from Paris today, stated that Rumanians were to fight on the French front. The Rumanians of Transylvania and Bukowina, living in France, had held a meeting, it was said, to form a national committee to continue the struggle against the Magyars in accord with the oppressed nationalities of Austria-Hungary.

Philip Gibbs's Story of the Great Battle

IV. of France. In their steel casques they have a medieval look like their own ancesters of the sixteenth century, who crowded the taverns of Arras and tweaked the nose of any Burgundian or Austrian trooper if he looked crosseyed at a gentleman of France.

Allied Comrades Camp Together.

French soldiers and English soldiers are bivouaced in the woods and fields side by side, and yesterday I saw them bathing in one of the rivers which Henry V. crossed on his way to Agincourt when their forefathers and the British were not comrades in arms. That was a good picture with the sunlight streaming through the trees, so that the stream gleamed like a sword blade. While some of the men washed their feet, others lay full stretched in the grass, sleeping in every attitude of langorous ease with their steel hats among the flowers.

So I lay down also in a ditch full of flowers, and drowsed and forgot the war until the usual noises overhead made one open one's eyes again. There was a German airplane over our country, high enough to be invisible but not too high to silence the drone of its engine or to avoid observation from the "archiemen" searching for him with their glasses. Bang went a gun, and presently there was a fusilade in the sky, and the tattoo from machine guns in the grass, and then the throb of several engines as a covey of British planes came over to chase the intruder.

Host of Air Battles.

The enemy's air scouts were out and about yesterday because of the wonderful visibility, and they came peering over the allied lines and villages as if searching for some special secret. There must have been many fights in that cloudless sky, for the British were up there, too, and away over the enemy's lines, and all day long there were puffs of shrapnel overhead, so that the peasant girls, harrowing the fields, gazed up with their hands to their ears, and the French soldiers standing outside the camps, gave a glance upward. And every now and then a crash of noise came through the humming drowsiness of this May day, where a bomb had been dropped.

The Smiling Chinese.

In one field was a German airplane, newly brought down, a silver-looking thing with iron crosses painted on its framework and some of the British airmen gathered around it to study its details.

There are many types of many breeds of men along these roads, but the strangest of all are the Chinese laborers, who seem to be spectators of all this pageant that passes outside of its purpose, ignorant of its idea.

Nothing more uncanny has come into the western theatre of war than these orientals, whose bronzed faces are always screwed up into wrinkled smiles, as if eternally amused by us. Many of them are big men, lean and sinewy, with long black hair like snakes about their high cheekbones under fantastic headgear, which ranges from billycocks and bowlers, to red-banded caps like those of the British generals and little skull cap, with earflaps, belonging to their native fashion.

They smile as they work. They are woodmen, and smile between their axe blows. They mend roads and smile, and they smile as the cars go past and the guns and all the traffic of the columns. To them all this war of the western men seems a huge and frightful jest, with marvellous toys, such as flying machines, at which they stare up and grin. It is but a twist of their features, and what is passing in their minds behind those bronze, maskilke faces I cannot guess.

Such, then, in but a glimpse or two is a picture of this scene of war in these May days when the armies wait for another act in the great drama which is now being rehearsed behind the lines.

LYS AND AVRE AREAS ARE STORM CENTRES

Artillery Fire Particularly Severe Southwest of Hangard, Where French Hold the Line.

LONDON, May 16.—Heavy artillery fire at various points was virtually the only activity along the western front.

The centres of the heavy gunfire were the region north of Kemmel, the valleys of the Somme and the Ancre, and the area north and south of the River Avre, in the Hailles-Castel district.

Of the general activity along the Avre a dispatch to The Associated Press from the French Army Headquarters gives this view:

"Every day the number of trench raids from both sides increases along this battlefront, where the concentrated forces of the opposing armies must soon be engaged again.

"In the neighborhood of the Somme and southward from Hailles, where the railroad line from Amiens attracts the enemy's attention, and on the flank of the German line between Montdidier and Noyon, the artillery is incessantly most active.

"At Rollott, on the Abbéville road, south of Montdidier, where an enemy attack is expected momentarily, the Germans yesterday let down a severe bombardment, but their infantry, although showing indications of an intent to advance, was kept back by the French gunners and could not leave its position.

"The Germans are endeavoring to locate the position and estimate the strength of the allied batteries by tempting them to open fire, and thus disclose their emplacements and show where their barrage fire strikes.

"A German order captured in a recent raid gives directions to artillery observers. It says: 'The enemy's barrage should be verified minutely, and also the amount of time elapsing before it starts after our attack. A note should be made regarding spaces where shells do not strike, and estimates should be made as to how many guns participate and whether there are any big-calibred pieces. Roads under fire should be marked.'

"In this way the enemy hopes to gain information as to areas where infantry can pass with the smallest losses when a real attack opens."

Today's statement of the French War Office says:

An artillery duel took place in the Hailles-Castel sector.

French patrols, operating north of the Ailette, brought back prisoners.

The night was quiet on the remainder of the front.

The French War Office statement tonight is as follows:

There was no infantry action. The activity of both artilleries was marked north and south of the Avre.

On May 15 our pursuit machines were extremely active in the air. Eighteen German planes were brought down and four captive balloons were set on fire.

Heavy Firing on the Lys.

Field Marshal Haig's report from British Headquarters in France tonight says:

Beyond artillery activity on both sides, particularly on the battlefront north of the River Lys, there is nothing of special interest to report.

The day report of the British War Office reads:

Our troops raided the enemy's trenches last night in the neighborhood of Gavrelle (northeast of Arras) and captured a few prisoners.

Beyond artillery activity on both sides at different points, particularly in the valleys of the Somme and Ancre Rivers, east of Arras, and on the northern battlefront, there is nothing further to report.

Army officers here hope that while General Pershing may feel that it would be improper for him to issue formal statements as to operations where his forces are holding sectors in French corps or army fronts, he will be able to follow up today's practice and give detailed accounts of events in which only American troops are involved.

Designation in the communique of the flight for which Major Ralph Royce was decorated by the French army corps commander, as the "first American flight over the enemy's lines," was taken here as an announcement that a complete American air squadron was now in operation at the front. Heretofore American fliers mentioned for gallantry have been attached to French squadrons.

Officers saw in the official reports of the raiding and scouting operations evidence of the dash and initiative which they have expected the American troops to show in action. They are supremely confident that the average American will play the game at the front just as well as Americans have played all games.

SIX OF FOE TO YARD OF FRONT.

PARIS, May 16.—There are six Germans to the yard on the greater part of the Franco-Belgian front, from the North Sea to the Oise, according to the Gaulois, which bases the statement on the information it reports having reached the General Staff that 150 German divisions are situated in this area.

Ten of these divisions, it is stated, are in the region between Nieuport and Ypres, forty divisions are between Ypres and La Bassée Canal, and 100 divisions from La Bassée Canal to the Oise.

On this basis, it is estimated, says the newspaper, that the German strength from Ypres to the Oise is about six men to the yard, except on the northern part of the front above Ypres, where the estimate is a third of that number.

LESS GUNFIRE, SAYS BERLIN.

BERLIN, May 16, (via London.)—The official communication issued by the War Office today reads:

After the close of yesterday's infantry engagement north of Kemmel, during which we ejected the French from positions where they broke through our lines in that locality, the artillery duel there became weaker.

On other fronts, also, the artillery activity declined, although vigorous outbursts of surprise firing against our artillery and infantry positions on both sides of La Bassée Canal, as well as between the Somme and Avre, continued.

On the western bank of the Avre, the enemy yesterday morning at an early hour advanced with large forces out of Senecat Wood. He was repulsed with heavy losses.

The extensive use of airmen on the fighting front led to numerous aerial engagements. We shot down thirty-three enemy airplanes, fourteen of which were destroyed by the chaser squadron formerly commanded by Baron Richthofen.

RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR DEFIANT IN BERLIN

GENEVA, May 16.—Adolph Joffe, the Bolshevik Ambassador to Germany, continues to defy the German Emperor and the Government, according to a Berlin dispatch received here. In spite of every warning the Red Flag of Russia is still flying over the embassy, and diplomatic etiquette is still ignored by refusal to pay the usual visits of ceremony.

The newspapers are irritated over the fact that the Ambassador confines his attention to the minority Socialist Deputies and revolutionists. Several demand his expulsion as a dangerous and undesirable resident. M. Joffe is said to be more amused than affected by the German newspaper comment.

ANALYZES THE SITUATION

Foch's "Economy of Force" Theory Working Well—American Troops "Pouring" Into France.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 16.—The Daily Chronicle will publish tomorrow the following article by Major Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice on the military situation:

"Indications are steadily increasing that the third phase of the campaign of 1918 on the western front is about to open.

"Since their serious reverse in Flanders on April 29 the Germans have done nothing more than is to be expected from an active and energetic enemy desirous of keeping us on strain and under threat of attack. No one considered that the Germans would be content with what they had so far achieved, and it surprised no one that they were preparing for another heavy blow.

"Today about two-thirds of the whole German force in the west is concentrated between Ypres and the Oise. That is, roughly, only one-fifth of the whole western front, but a vitally important fifth, for it includes the roads to Paris and the Channel ports.

"Our position in Flanders has never been a pleasant one, from the day we first marched into it from the Aisne, and the general map of France will show why that is so. At Cape Gris Nez, between Calais and Boulogne, the French Channel coast makes a sharp bend, and runs from that bend due south to the mouth of the Somme. The allied front line from Nieuport to Amiens runs parallel to and, roughly, fifty miles from this stretch of coast. Within this strip of fifty miles the main roads and main railways run, roughly, north and south, leading from Rouen and Paris to Lille, Dunkirk, Calais, and Boulogne. That is to say, they are parallel to our front.

"Now, the ideal arrangement for the communications of an army is that they should run at regular and frequent intervals straight back from the front to the base which feeds it with men, munitions, and supplies, and all its thousand and other requirements. That is the enemy's position. The most unsatisfactory is when these main arteries of supply run parallel to the front. That is our position.

"In such a case a successful attack on any part of the line threatens the communication of the whole, and, if, in addition to this, the space is limited, then it becomes difficult to give ground voluntarily to avoid a blow or to establish a better front.

"It will be remembered that in the beginning of 1917 Hindenburg, finding part of his line compromised as a result of our successes on the Somme and the Ancre, fell back some thirty miles without uncovering any vital communications or losing anything except an area of ground which he had systematically devastated.

"We can nowhere give up one-third of that distance on the front north of Amiens without at least suffering grave inconvenience. This is doubtless what Sir Douglas Haig meant when he said, 'We are fighting with our backs to the wall.'

"Apart then, altogether, from striking at the army of the people whom they regard as the most obstinate supporters of the war among the Entente nations, there can be little doubt why the Germans have selected the northern part of the allied line for their great effort in 1918.

"On March 21 the enemy struck his blow between Arras and the Oise and great part of the troops which he then concentrated for battle are still on or behind that front. Many divisions have been withdrawn from the fighting line and refitted and refilled with drafts of men, and have probably received some training. There has been time to bring over more men and more guns from the Russian front. These are factors in the enemy's favor.

"Now for our side of the picture. Except in one respect we are certainly in a better posture to meet the attack than we were on March 21. We lost ground, and our position, already cramped, has become more cramped.

"On the other hand, we have a unified command, and while our losses have been heavy, there is the clearest evidence that the enemy's losses have been heavier.

"As we have seen, American troops have been pouring steadily into France. We know that an Italian contingent has arrived, and there has been time to readjust the positions of the allied forces on the whole front.

"As the Prime Minister has stated and has quoted me as saying, the Allies and the enemy were on March 21 approximately equal in numbers but the enemy, by keeping both ourselves and the French under the threat of attack was able to concentrate first against us alone.

"Now Foch, as I have explained in my last article, was before 1914 a great student of war. One of the doctrines which he preached was that of 'economy of force,' which may be explained as meaning that one of the secrets of victory is to keep the largest possible numbers of reserves until the decisive phase arises and to employ until then the absolute minimum of force necessary for safety. It is on this principle that we have up to the present had to bear the brunt of the hammering, and however hard this has been for our men, struggling constantly against superior numbers, and however grievous to those who have lost their dearest, it is, without question, for the common good, for it means economy of force.

"On April 9 the Germans started what was undoubtedly meant at first to be a subsidiary enterprise in Flanders. Tempted by success, they have had to call and to call heavily upon their fresh divisions, and they are by that much the weaker for the next blow. We may be sure that by now Foch has his reserves where he wants them, and we are by that the stronger.

"The enemy had prepared for March 21 by putting his troops through a thorough course of training. The cream of his instructed men have gone. He cannot replace his losses as easily as before without calling prematurely on his classes of boys.

"We shall have anxious times before us, because if the enemy attacks he will probably gain ground, and ground is precious to us.

"Small as our gains in Flanders may seem when, compared with what the enemy recently achieved, we have never attacked without making some progress.

"We must count on the enemy doing the same, but provided that we can replace our losses, provided that we send every man who can be spared to France, there is no reason why we should not check the enemy's next blow as in less favorable circumstances we defeated his last."

BIG CONQUEST AIMS IN GERMAN DOCUMENT

Annexations, Sea Predominance, and Augmented Colonies Demanded in Captured Paper.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, May 15, (Associated Press.)—Germany's conditions of peace are clearly stated in a document found in a German trench that was recently recaptured by allied troops. A resumé of the principal conditions, as given in an official translation, reads:

"After the enormous sacrifices we have made of our blood and property we exact as a necessary minimum to the preservation and development of Germany the following:

"Belgium, especially the Flanders coast with Antwerp, is to remain under German military, economic, and political dependence.

"Liberty of the seas shall be properly established for all nations, the Central Powers being allowed a commercial fleet totaling 17,800,000 tons, while that of the Allies should amount to 10,000,000 tons.

"Our colonies shall be returned with augmentation.

"We are to have more numerous and stronger naval stations.

"The Longwy and Briey mine fields, which furnished France its weapons for attack, shall become German.

"Readjustments of the frontiers, particularly in the Vosges, are to be fixed according to the military situation and the appreciation of the commandant. Our frontiers must be such that their defense is made easier.

"The former German Baltic provinces shall be incorporated, their rich soil furnishing new cereal fields for German peasant emigrants, thus protecting the empire against the dangers of famine.

"Courland, Lithuania, Livonia, and Esthonia are to be colonized.

"One million eight hundred thousand tons of Rumanian petrol will be at the disposition of Germany.

"Those nations which attacked peaceful Germany must pay all war charges in raw material, ships, ready money, and territorial concessions, leaving Germany with only five billions national debt."

BOLSHEVIKI FAIL TO RESIST GERMANY

Entente Satisfied They Will Use Army Only to Consolidate Own Power, It Is Said.

IS VIEW OF RUSSIANS HERE

Muscovite Diplomats in America, Europe, and Asia to Offer Advice to Associated Governments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Berlin Government is disseminating the statement by wireless that the German forces in occupied Russia are making no further advances. This fact was conveyed to the State Department today from two different sources.

A radiogram from Joffe, the representative of the Soviet Government in Berlin, informed his Government that the Germans were no longer advancing in Russia. This message was sent on May 13. The State Department earlier in the day received from Ira Nelson Morris, the American Minister at Stockholm, a dispatch saying that the newspapers in Sweden had published a Wolff Agency denial of the charge wirelessed to Berlin by the Bolshevist Government that German troops were advancing beyond Ukraine and into the Crimea in violation of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, this notwithstanding that they occupy the whole of Crimea, including Sebastopol.

There is a growing impression here that the Soviet Government is not going to be able to realize its promises for a reorganization of the Russian Army. The Berlin Government is vigorously insisting upon the disarmament of Russia and no tangible evidence has reached Washington that the Soviet Government is making any bona fide effort to establish Russia's fighting power.

Moscow Government Sounded.

It is understood that the Entente Governments have sounded out the Government at Moscow with the view of learning whether, with allied assistance, financial and military, the Bolshevist authorities would be inclined to resist with arms the continual American aggressions, and that they have been satisfied that there is no prospect of Russia, under the rule of the Maximalists, again taking up arms, except to consolidate their own power within Russia.

This has been the view of spokesmen for Russia here ever since the downfall of Kerensky. Their attitude, together with that of most of the Russian democracy's representatives in other belligerent countries, has influenced the powers at war with the Central Empires in withholding recognition from the Lenine-Trotzky régime. Russian diplomats in America, Europe, and Asia, here been exchanging views on developments, and it is understood that shortly they will have concrete recommendations to make to the associated Governments with respect to the rescue of their country from its present disorganized state and from the loss of European Russia to Germany.

In the early days of the Bolshevist rule it was believed by these diplomats that the Maximalists would be overthrown from within, and their comparatively long tenure, with small indications of any successful early movement against them, has created the impression that the loyal Russians in Russia must be assisted from the outside. Official reports received here give no promise of successful counter-revolutionary activities, and even the anarchists, who have been tolerated at the present seat of the Russian Government, have been unable to secure any formidable following, and constitute, in the opinion of officials here, no real menace to the Bolsheviki.

Japan does not consider the extension of German influence to Central Siberia a sufficient menace to cause her to intervene, except as the mandatory of the allied nations and of the United States, and it now seems certain that nothing short of a revision of its views by the United States would induce Japan to send an army into Siberia.

It is reliably reported that the representatives of the Provisional Government of Russia in the allied countries are not hostile to the idea of allied intervention in Siberia, but desire that the United States should participate in it in the event that it is decided on. The objection still entertained by the American Government, it was asserted today, is based on the belief that should foreign forces penetrate Russia the Bolshevist authorities would raise the cry of conquest, imposing upon the credulity of the ignorant Russian masses, and more effectually than at present deliver Russia up to the Germans and Austrians.

Message from Russian Labor.

The strongest labor party in Russia has issued a message which is considered as significant, says an official French dispatch received here today.

"The adversaries of the Bolshevist Government in Russia," says the dispatch, "are beginning to lift up their heads. They feel that the moment has come to separate from the men whom they accuse of having brought their country to ruin. Thus it is that the Central Committee of the Social Revolutionary Party has just sent to the National Council of the French Socialist Party and to the Parliamentary Socialist group a message which is most significant.

"The Social Revolutionary Party declares at the same time that the newly formed Communist group, formerly Bolshevist, must on all accounts be excluded from the Internationale for having called upon the most elementary principles of democracy to resuscitate forms of despotism and violence. They have betrayed the cause of international socialism by an infamous separate peace with the crowned despots of Central Europe, transferring Russia, disarmed, humiliated, and crushed, into an administrative supply house destined to sustain the German offensive in the west.

"The Social Revolutionary party expresses the hope that all the national sections of the Labor Internationale will determine their attitude as regards the Bolshevist usurpers, taking into consideration this declaration of our party, which itself has the right to speak for all Russian labor, having held an absolute majority in the Constitutional Convention, whose powers will be resuscitated in spite of the sanguinary repressions made by the usurpers of power.

"'We beg our French comrades to send this declaration to the Socialist parties of the allied countries.'"

A declaration on conditions in Russia by Captain Lukich, an officer who served in the Jugoslav Corps in Russia, and who left that country five weeks ago, was received here through diplomatic channels today.

"The internal political situation is vague," he said, "civil war is being waged with the utmost violence. But on the other hand the Russian people, including the Bolsheviki, highly resent and feel the humiliation imposed upon Russia and her people by the Germans and their arbitrary breach of the Brest-Litovsk treaty. As a first consequence of such feeling may be taken the feverish organization of the new Russian Army, Red Guard, which possesses good discipline. From a trustworthy source, it is asserted that most of the arms and munitions were saved by the Russian Army and indeed in such quantity as will enable the equipment of an army of a million and a half soldiers.

"Prisoners of the Czech and Jugoslav nationalities have formed and organized an army which is now engaged in fierce fighting with the invading German and Austrian Army. One part of them succeeded in passing through Siberia and were transferred thence to Japan, whence they will proceed to Saloniki and different Allied battlefronts."

REPORT KERENSKY COMING TO AMERICA

Expected Here Within Two Weeks, According to Gen. Oberoucheff's Information.

Rumors of the approaching arrival in America of Alexander F. Kerensky, former Premier of Russia under the Provisional Government, were circulated last night at a meeting of the New York Group of Russian Social Revolutionists at Cooper Union. General Constantin M. Oberoucheff, former commander of the military forces in the Kiev District under the Provisional Government, who spoke at the meeting, told a NEW YORK TIMES reporter that, although nothing definite was known, he had been informed, through sources which he preferred not to mention, that Kerensky would arrive in New York within two weeks. After the fall of the Provisional Government and his flight from Petrograd, Mr. Kerensky succeeded in making his way to Sweden, where, at last reports, he was residing.

Speaking on the internal conditions of Russia, General Oberoucheff said that if 25,000 American troops were sent to Russia a fighting Russian army could be raised with their aid and made a menace to Germany in the east.

General Oberoucheff, who came to this country from Stockholm seceveral weeks ago, said that from the information he had obtained there, the Bolshevist régime was nearing an end in Russia, and would soon fall to pieces by lack of its own cohesive powers.

RUSSIAN MAY DAY QUIET.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, May 15, (Wednesday.)—The first of May (May 14 in our calendar,) celebrations in Moscow were of a different character to those of last year. Then the red banners of the working classes seemed triumphant, but at the very time when they waved in the streets of Petrograd Milukoff was sending his note to the Allies which proved very sufficiently that the power was only nominally in the hands of the working classes. The Government then still belonged to the burgeoisie, who looked from their windows and said they were sick of red flags.

This year the opponents of the Soviet criticised the Red May Day, saying it had become a mere official ceremony. This is indeed true, because this year the working classes in Russia are themselves their Government, and, as Stekloff points out, the hope of every May Day in the past has been that some day it should be an official ceremony of the ruling class instead of a protest of subjected labor.

In spite of gloomy forebodings, the day passed in perfect order, not a shot being fired. The whole town was red with flags, the walls of the Kremlin being hung with red banners and the ancient towers garlanded in scarlet.

In spite of efforts of the Church to prevent the celebration in Holy Week, (hundreds of sermons were preached against it on Sunday,) in spite of the general consciousness of the tragic seriousness of the moment, the streets were full of people, and the demonstrations showed real faith, both in the present and the future. Between 15,000 and 20,000 troops of the new army, cavalry, infantry and artillery, took part in the parade and showed better discipline and better kept horses and guns than any troops since the Revolution.

Count Mirbach must have been delighted to see that a company of German and Austrian prisoners who swore to support the Soviet were marching past with revolutionary banners with German inscriptions.

WANT MONARCHY IN FINLAND.

Bourgeois Parties Also Advocate Joining the Central Powers.

HELSINGFORS, May 16.—An appeal signed by representatives of all the bourgeois parties, including the Young Finns, calling upon all citizens to support a monarchical form of government for Finland, is published by the Hufvudstadsbladet. The appeal recommends the reconstitution of the Lantdag, and also that Finland join the Central Powers. (The fact that a number of prominent members of the Young Finnish group were advocating a monarchy has previously been developed in Helsingfors dispatches.)

The present Lantdag comprises 51 members of the Old Finnish group, 25 Young Finns, 26 Agrarians, 21 Swedes, and about 20 Socialists. The majority of the Young Finns and the Socialists are advocates of a republican form of government. The attitude of the Agrarians is uncertain.

RUSSIANS BLEW UP ICEBOUND SUBMARINES

Destroyed Four American and Seven British Boats Before Leaving Hango.

LONDON, May 16.—Russian naval officials blew up their four American submarines before retreating from Hango, in Southwestern Finland, last April, the British Admiralty announced tonight. Seven British submarines also were destroyed. No British vessel fell into the hands of the enemy.

The effect of the destruction of the submarines upon the crews of merchant vessels was excellent, the statement says, and induced the destruction of many ships which would otherwise have fallen into the hands of the enemy.

"The guns at and near Hango," the Admiralty announcement says, "had already been dismantled, and upon the appearance of the German forces the Russians retreated from the vicinity after blowing up their four American submarines.

"Four British submarines of Class 3 were taken outside the harbor of Helsingfors on April 3 and blown up and sunk. Three C-boats were demolished between that day and April 8. Their crews were removed to Petrograd."

LONDON, May 16.—All British submarines in the Harbor of Helsingfors were destroyed when the German naval forces approached the city, because it was impossible to get them away, owing to the fact that they were frozen fast, according to an Admiralty statement this evening.

The submarines, which had been operating in the Baltic since the early part of the war, were blown up, together with their stocks of torpedoes, ammunition, and other materials. Their crews have arrived in England, having traveled by way of Mourmansk.

GERMANS CLOSE AZOV SEA.

LONDON, May 16.—Anti-German agitation in the Ukraine continues unchecked, says a Vienna dispatch to the Local-Anzeiger of Berlin and transmitted from The Hague by the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Ukrainian newspapers attack Germany bitterly and accuse her of using the Russian warships at Sebastopol for the purpose of seizing coal and Ukrainian merchantmen. It is reported that the Germans have mined the Strait of Yenikale, closing the passage into the Sea of Azov.

Serious trouble, it is added, has occurred at Nikolaiev, where the Germans have dismissed the City Council.

EVACUATING FINN BORDER.

Russians Said to be Deserting Railroad to Petrograd.

STOCKHOLM, May 16.—A Helsingfors dispatch says the Russians have begun the evacuation of territory along the border of Finland.

They still hold the frontier fortress of Ino, but otherwise are withdrawing as far as Kronstadt. The railway from Valkeassare to Petrograd is being deserted by the Russians, the dispatch reports.

RUMANIA TO DEMOBILIZE.

Ukraine Government Stops Exports to Bessarabia and Rumania.

AMSTERDAM, May 16.—An order for the demobilization of the Rumanian Army was published in the Official Gazette at Jassy, on May 14.

Alexander Marghiloman, the Rumanian Premier, while conversing with a Rumanian newspaper representative, said that Bessarabia, with the exception of a slight rectification of its northern frontier, would be joined to Rumania.

Advices from Kiev say that the Government has prohibited the export of raw and manufactured metals and rubber. All exports from the Ukraine to Rumania and Bessarabia are forbidden, "as Bessarabia has been annexed and its political and economic relations remain unsettled."

LABORITES SPURNED PACIFIST SCHEMING

FIRMLY REJECTED PLEAS

Visitors Convinced That Mass of French Workers Want No Conference with Teutons.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 16.—George L. Berry, a member of the American Labor Delegation, in a letter to the Daily Telegraph in reference to its Paris dispatch [giving an account of the efforts of French labor and Socialist elements favorable to a conference with German workers to prevent the Americans from coming in contact with the win-the-war labor party in Paris] says:

"It is true that the Executive Committee of the French Federation, as well as the Socialist parties, are controlled by those favorable to a conference with Socialist and labor leaders of the Central Powers. It is likewise true that a policy had been adopted prior to our arrival, whereby only representatives of labor and the Socialistic movement of France favorable to that view were to address the American delegation.

"It was instantly apparent to us that the purpose of the arrangement was to overwhelm the American delegation with the idea that all the leaders of the trade union movement of France, as well as the workers of that country, were for a meeting with the German workers, Socialists and trade unionists, and in some instances were for peace at any price. This fact was made known to us by members of the Executive Committee who were in harmony with the position of the American Federation of Labor, but who were denied the opportunity of presenting their position before the conference held in France.

"Instead of this arrangement having the effect desired upon the American mission, it worked to the opposite effect, and we endeavored to accentuate our position. Certainly our determination to maintain the position of the American Federation of Labor was increased.

"Out of the conferences came converts to our position. We were satisfied at the conclusion that the labor movement of France was in the main opposed to the program of certain pacifist leaders of the federation and of the Socialist Party. In addition, it might be said that we were convinced that the position of many of the French leaders, so-called pacifists, was really political and not representative of the wishes of the workers of France.

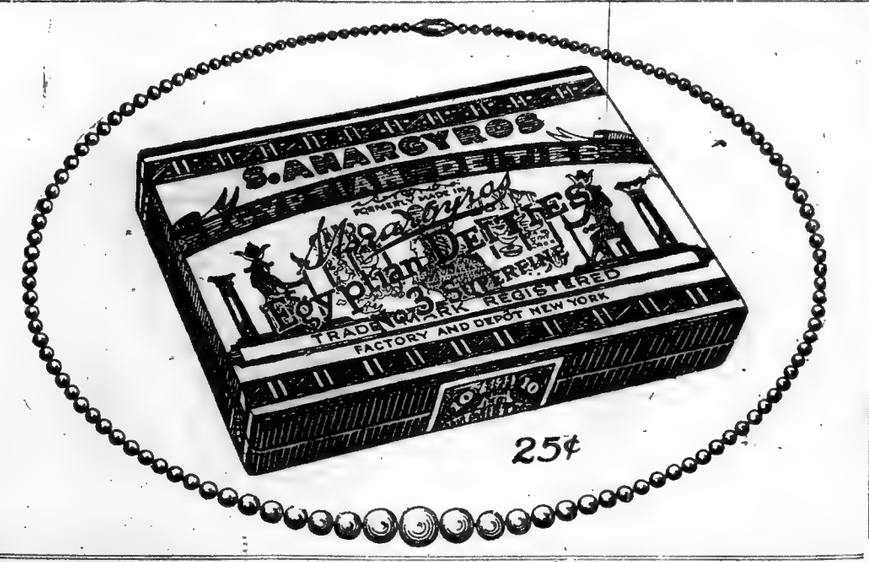
"So far as the American labor delegation is concerned, there was no misunderstanding as regards the purposes of the conference or of what was said there. We were not misled as to the attitude of the leaders of the conference or as to statements made at the conference. The facts are that the French leaders insisted upon meeting with Socialist and labor representatives of the Central Powers and the American labor delegation very frankly declined to be drawn into such a meeting directly or indirectly. We understood the position of the French representatives throughout and we are confident that they understood our position."

HAIG NOT TO BE DISPLACED.

Bonar Law Formally Denies Reports of a Coming Army Change.

LONDON, May 16.—Reports that were in circulation to the effect that a change was imminent in the higher command of the British Army in France were denied in the House of Commons today by Chancellor Bonar Law, spokesman for the War Cabinet.

Replying to a question, Mr. Bonar Law said that no change in the higher command had taken place, nor was any in contemplation.



KING GEORGE GREETS LABOR DELEGATES

HOPE FOR PERMANENT TIES

Monarch Expresses Wish for Co-operation in Peace — Henderson Upholds Wilson.

LONDON, May 16.—The American Labor delegation was received by King George at Buckingham Palace today. The visit lasted an hour.

The King, on receiving the delegation, said:

"It gives the Queen and me great pleasure to receive you here today and we trust that if the experiences of your stay in this country have been agreeable they may also prove interesting and helpful. You have had opportunities for judging the efforts were are putting forth at home in order adequately to meet all the demands from the various theatres of war. I hope these experiences will enable you to assure the people of the United States that we are doing and mean to continue to do our utmost in this direction.

"Your delegation includes lady representatives who, I trust, may be able to give a satisfactory report of the manner in which British women have come forward to replace men called from various industries to the fighting ranks, and how efficiently they are carrying out the work entrusted them.

"It has always been my dream that the two great English-speaking nations, with their individual national characteristics, should work together in close and harmonious relations towards those ideals of progress and civilization common to both peoples. Fate has decided that the war should fulfill this dream. The two nations have made common cause in the defense of freedom and justice. In the future days of peace may they continue to stand side by side to attain the same ideals and aspirations.

"We wish you safe and happy return home. Science is daily increasing the power of rapid transportation between our islands and the continent of America, thus facilitating the interchange of these visits, and so strengthening the ties of mutual understanding, confidence and good-fellowship which, please God, may ever henceforth unite us."

E. O. McCormick, of San Francisco, replied briefly in behalf of the Americans, thanking the King and expressing the pleasure which the visit had afforded the delegates and how they appreciated it.

Each member of the delegation was presented to King George and Queen Mary, as well as to the Princess Mary, and nearly an hour was spent in informal conversation.

British labor will trust President Wilson to secure a democratic peace and will aid American labor in backing him up, said Arthur Henderson, leader of the Labor Party, at a meeting of the Manchester-Salford Trade Council last night. Three members of the American labor delegation accompanied Mr. Henderson to the meeting.

"If there is anybody," Mr. Henderson said, "in whose hands we would trust our destinies when a proper peace is to be secured, it is the President of the United States. When the time comes I believe there will be no stronger force behind President Wilson than American labor, seconded by British labor, determined to keep representatives at the table until we have secured a clean, honorable, and democratic peace, based on the will of the people."

Found the King Democratic.

LONDON, May 16, (By Canadian Press, Limited.)—The American labor delegates were deeply impressed with their visit to Buckingham Palace today. James Wilson said that the King was "a true democratic gentleman. Throughout our visit to Europe we have not been to a less formal function."

John P. Frey said:

"Even the receptions at the White House are not so simple. We Americans did not realize that the King was so human."

George L. Berry said:

"King George chatted with us a long time and none of us felt ill at ease a single moment."

The women delegates were similarly delighted with the simple welcome of the Queen and Princess Mary.

HEAR OF CLEMENCEAU AIMS.

Socialists Learn of War Plans and Also Visit Premier.

PARIS, May 16.—René Renoult, President of the Army Committee of the Chamber of Deputies, today laid before a meeting of the Socialist Radical Party, the largest in the Chamber, Premier Clémenceau's declarations after the Interallied Conference at Abbéville early this month, regarding the utilization of American aid, which is being importantly developed.

M. Renoult also showed the utility of small tanks as a reinforcement for infantry.

Henry Franklin-Bouillon, Chairman of the Interallied Parliamentary Conference, made a speech in which he dealt with the Austrian negotiations of 1917. He said that they never were susceptible of obtaining a peace acceptable either from the viewpoint of France's fidelity to her allies or the war aims as defined by President Wilson, to which the Entente Powers remained attached.

When M. Clemenceau took the Premiership last Fall the Socialists were not friendly to him, because they insisted that he lacked understanding of the labor world's ideals, and the Socialist organs expressed decided hostility—a hostility that had had its origin long prior to the war. On the first test in the Chamber, however, after M. Clemenceau had delivered his statement outlining an aggressive war policy, all but certain of the unified Socialists joined in acclaiming him, and on the vote of confidence only sixty-five votes were cast in the negative.

Despite this, close co-operation between the Socialists and the Clemenceau Government has been lacking.

TUSCAN "WOLVES" HONOR D'ANNUNZIO

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 16.—"Oh, Wolves of Tuscany, my whole soul thrills at your splendid deeds!" said the poet-soldier D'Annunzio today at the distribution of medals for valor to a brigade of Tuscany, the soldiers whereof have been nicknamed "Wolves" after distinguishing themselves on the Carso by conquering what were considered inaccessible heights. What gave the ceremony an unusual character was the presentation to the poet by the brigade of a bronze circlet ornamented with gold laurel leaves, in the centre whereof was the silver halberd crest of Trieste. This circlet was given to D'Annunzio in memory of an incident which happened during the conquest of one of the mountains on the Carso. During the attack an Austrian shell fell between him and Major Randaccio, commanding the Tuscans, without exploding. The latter ordered the bronze circlet surrounding the shell to be removed and presented to the poet in memory of his escape. The soldiers of the Tuscan brigade clubbed together to have the circlet ornamented with gold laurel leaves.

In the next fight Randaccio fell heroically.

FLEET RECALLED TO KIEL.

Huge Concentration of Vessels Includes Most of Those in Baltic.

LONDON, May 16.—The entire German Baltic fleet, except a few light cruisers, was recalled last week to Kiel, where important naval forces are now being concentrated, says a dispatch from Hamburg, received in Geneva and transmitted by the correspondent of The Daily Express.

RED CROSS WEEK
MAY 20-27 1918

We have agreed to donate 10 per cent of all our sales on May 20th to the 2nd War Fund of the American Red Cross.

Whether you belong to the Surgical Group, or any of the Units, co-related, here is a memo. for you.

What to wear is optional, but the consensus of opinion has it that it will probably be a "White Parade," that will symbolize the purity of the purpose of this greatest Mother the World has Ever Known—the Red Cross.

Second Floor.

Women's inexpensive white dresses, $5.75 up to $15.
Third Floor.

White gabardine, or pique skirts, pearl buttons, $3.95. Models for large women a specialty.
Third Floor.

Third Floor.

Misses' white dresses, $7.95 and $10.50.
Third Floor.

Children's white dresses, $2.95 up.
Third Floor.

White hats, mannish sailors, $1.95 and $3.95.
Third Floor.

White hats (men's wear), moderately priced.
Fourth Floor.

Overseas cap, all wool navy blue serge, $2.50.
Fourth Floor.

Main Floor.

Women's white shoes, $3.50; Women's white pumps, $4.00.
Second Floor.

White gloves, variously priced.
Main Floor.

Canteen and clerical aprons, $1.60 and $1.95.
Second Floor.

Nurses' veils, square, 55c.
Second Floor.

NEED OF EXPERTS ON AIRCRAFT BOARD

No One Familiar with Science of Aviation Has Thus Far Been Named a Member.

NEARLY A BILLION GONE

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS.

SECOND ARTICLE.

The charge cannot justly be made that lack of financial support has handicapped the chances for success of our aircraft program. From a statement recently made by the Signal Corps we learn that thus far expenditures and contract obligations total the impressive amount of $907,339,000, and an additional appropriation of $1,000,000,000 is pending before Congress and will doubtless be granted. We should have quite an aircraft fleet after expending $1,900,000,000. Prior to the war we thus expended only a few miserable millions. We used the word billion then only in discussing such inconceivable things as the distances of fixed stars.

Thus far we can discern no appreciable war result from the use of this $907,339,000. There is a decided and growing national curiosity concerning what has been or will be done with this tidy amount. Nothing yet disclosed gives any clear idea on this point.

There is only one way in which the common mind can even faintly grasp such an amount, and that is by instituting comparisons between this $907,339,000 and small things with which we are more or less familiar. For example, a $10,000 house set on a lot with 100-foot frontage makes of its owner an enviable man. It would require a row of such houses more than 1,000 miles long to foot up to $900,000,000, and there would be 90,000 of them in this long and pleasing row. We certainly should hope to get an airplane compete for the cost of two of these $10,000 houses, and this would net us 45,000 airplanes. How many may we expect?

The average American citizen is fairly content with a $3,000 house or cottage. There could be built 200,000 of such houses with an expenditure of $900,000,000, and thay would comfortably shelter a population of more than 1,000,000 persons.

The greatest world's fair ever held was that of the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893. All of the magnificent buildings, grounds, and adornments cost less than $30,000,000. You could therefore indulge in thirty of such international displays for what has thus far been appropriated for our aviation program.

The most famous and disastrous fire in history is also claimed by Chicago. In 1871 it swept away more than three square miles, including all of the business district of the Western metropolis, destroyed 17,450 buildings and more than 200 lives, yet the total loss was only $100,000,000, much less than one-quarter of what we have set aside already for our aircraft program.

All of the great fires of the last fifty years, including those of Chicago, Boston, Baltimore, San Francisco, and numerous other ones, combined with all of the great international expositions held within the last half century, would not total $900,000,000.

We are justly proud of our magnificent Capitol building in Washington and of the splendid cluster of departmental buildings which make of it the "City of Magnificent Distances." Yet the cost of the superb Capitol building and of the twenty or more palaces which house the lives of thousands of officials and clerks of the greatest nation in the world was only $90,000,000. Thus we could duplicate them ten times with the fund which has already been expended and appropriated on an aircraft program which has not yet resulted in one fighting plane deemed fit to cross the battle line in France.

Not Situated for Money.

I could submit many other interesting comparisons, but these may serve to show that the Aircraft Production Board and the Signal Corps have not been stinted in their money allowance.

We learn from this preliminary financial report that the $900,000,000 fund includes $563,000,000 for "engines, airplanes, parts, &c." The contract price of a Liberty motor is understood to be about $6,000, when the manufacturer is working under a fixed price arrangement. This is also the approximate price of the 300 horse power Hispano-Suiza motor, now being manufactured in quantity for the Government. The cost of airplanes complete, including such motors, ranges from $10,000 to $20,000, with $15,000 as a fair average.

It follows that this $563,000,000 should supply us with a fleet of not less than 37,500 powerful and perfectly equipped airplanes. The remaining $344,000,000 of this $907,339,000 appropriation would seem ample to defray the expenses of training camps, construction work, experimenting, and all of the other incidental expenses which could be incurred in the first year of operation.

The nation is not vastly concerned with what Sculptor Borglum did, or did not do, but it is vitally concerned with what has become of or will eventuate from the expenditure of this $900,000,000. Where are these 37,500 completed and perfected airplanes? When will even a few thousand of them go "over the top" of the top? What are we to expect from the additional $1,000,000,000 asked for?

You will have to pay your share of this bill, and you can obtain a clearer view of the character of the obligation incurred by reading carefully this epitome of what thus far has happened:

When we entered in this war a year or more ago our War Department had a few airplanes which proved themselves worthless when tested in Mexico. We had a number of aircraft inventors and experts. We had men of capital who believed in the future of the airplane both for purposes of war and of peace. The Dayton-Wright Company was making planes and other accessories, but was not manufacturing motors. The Curtiss interests were making planes and engines. The Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation was making the Hispano-Suiza motors for the French Government. Other concerns were making parts of the Rolls-Royce, for the British Government. There were a score or more of companies hard at work on various types of engines and completed planes.

Had a Firm Foundation.

We had laid the firm foundation of the aircraft industry. This industry thought it had the right to expect the support and patronage of our Government. No such support was extended when Germany invaded Belgium and plunged Europe into war in 1914, but our inventors and manufacturers of aircraft devices renewed their efforts so as to be better prepared in the event we were dragged into the conflict.

We declared war against Germany in April, 1917. A small appropriation for aircraft purposes was made by Congress. In the following June an appropriation of $640,000,000 was voted, and an Aircraft Production Board was established. A branch of the Signal Corps was detailed to co-operate with it.

Not a man closely familiar with the science or practice of aviation or of aircraft production was appointed to either of these boards, and up to the present date not a man recognized as an aviation expert has been called by the War Department to duty in either of these official bodies or given any authority in directing its policy and in expediting the speedy production of aircraft fit to meet the up to date and highly efficient German air fleet.

The Wright brothers invented the airplane and founded a great industry in the United States, and they did this despite the fact that its Government failed to take advantage of their genius and of their long and hazardous years of work and experimenting. Mr. Wright, the "father of the flying machine," was not called to the aid of the War Department, neither were any of the men who had been trained under him in the years when the airplane was ignored in Washington, but constructed by the thousands in Germany, which was then plotting for the mastery of the world and the overthrow of democracy.

Few Fliers Were Available.

We did not even have a sufficient number of capable aviators with which to man our obsolete machines. We officially knew less about the flying art than any first-class nation in the world, but we had $640,000,000 with which to build an air fleet.

All of our allies and most of the foreign builders of airplanes and engines placed their models and wares at our disposal. We ignored these offers. We decided to reject all that Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, (we had all of the German models,) and all that other nations had learned from years of study and from two years of practical and thrilling tests in the battles and campaigns of the world's greatest war, and preferred to go ahead on our own account. We confidently announced that we would astound the world with the speedy production of an enormous air fleet which would sweep the German flyers from the sky.

Whenever I think of our ravishingly beautiful air program of those Summer months of 1917, I am disagreeably reminded of the song of Kipling's monkey folk, the Bandar-log:

Here we sit in a branchy row,
Thinking of wonderful things we know;
Dreaming of deeds we mean to do,
All complete in a minute or two—
Something noble and grand and good,
Won by merely wishing we could.
Now we're going to—never mind,
Brother, thy tail hangs down behind!

Months before we appropriated this $640,000,000 certain of the engineers of the Packard Motor Company of Detroit began experimental work in an attempt to transform their "twin-six" automobile engine into an aviation motor. They planned to incorporate with it many of the features of the Mercedes, the type mere generally used by the German aviation engine manufacturers. They built an engine which stood tests satisfactory to them. Other men of affairs connected directly or indirectly with the automobile industry took a keen interest in this motor.

I do not mean to imply that this was a selfish or mercenary interest. They doubtless believed that a wonderful and superperfect motor had been developed. They took it to Washington and convinced Secretary of War Baker that he need seek no further for a solution of the aircraft problem. Not one of these automobile experts knew enough about the aviation problem to realize that a shop test of a motor is only of comparative value, or that the successful use of a motor in one type of plane does not imply that it can safely be transferred to another type of plane. There were a score of other vital facts which these inexperienced enthusiasts did not know—and that is the main reason why we have expended hundreds of millions of dollars without producing airplanes which we dare ship abroad for battle use.

Called Liberty Motor a Success.

On Sept. 12, 1917, Secretary Baker announced the triumphant and unqualified success of the Liberty motor in an official statement which will endure as a classic. How Secretary Baker was deluded into making this grotesque statement is a mystery which Washington never wearies of discussing. It is doubtful if Secretary Baker wrote this statement, but he surely gave it to the public with the weight of his name and office.

In this famous statement and prediction Secretary Baker said:

The United States aviation engine has passed its final tests. They were successful and gratifying. The new motor, designed by the Signal Corps as the "Liberty Motor," is now the main reliance of the United States in the rapid production of large numbers of high-powered battleplanes for service in the war. In power, speed, serviceability, and minimum weight the new engine invites comparison with the best that the European war has produced. I regard the invention and rapid development of this engine as one of the really big accomplishments of the United States since its entry in the war. * * * Progress already has been made toward organizing industry for the manufacture of the new machines, and deliveries will be made within a comparatively short time.

It was because Secretary Baker implicitly believed what he thus announced that he formulated his unfortunate policy of committing the fate of our aircraft program to a group of men who had won deserved fame as designers of automobile engines, but who had no knowledge of the science of aviation except that derived from a brief period of experimenting with a motor type which, when put into production under their direction, developed innumerable real or fancied defects. The draftsmen and experts under their control have ordered hundreds and even thousands of changes in the nine months which have passed since Secretary Baker was led to believe that he was warranted in proclaiming to the world the perfection of a motor which is not yet out of the experimental stage.

Even had the Liberty motor been even more nearly perfect than thus officially advertised, there would have been no warrant in committing the sole direction of our aircraft program to its designers and intended manufacturers. The motor is only one detail in a fighting airplane—an important detail, it is true—but the motor must harmonize with all of the other parts and features of a complete type of flying machine, and there are a number of types absolutely required for war and training purposes.

Your aviation engine designer does not of necessity know more concerning the detailed construction of an airplane than does a plumber or a heating expert about the architecture of the building into which his plumbing or heating appliances are incorporated.

More than that, the most capable and inspired aviation motor designer or a group of them, combining mastery over every detail of designing such engines, would probably be absolutely unfitted to conduct the vast manufacturing operations necessary to put their creation into quantity production.

More than that, these motor experts could not be expected to have any grasp of the vitally important military problems involved in formulating and executing a constructive program.

Please do not construe this as fault finding for the sake of the satisfaction some find in that quest. But we must terminate our seemingly inevitable period of "muddling," without a day of avoidable delay. We must profit at once by the mistakes we have made. The lesson to be drawn from this sketch of our experience in aircraft production, so far as I have completed it in this and the preceding article, is this:

The membership of the Aircraft Production Board should largely be composed of men who have had actual and long experience in the designing and manufacture of airplanes. If these cannot be found in the United States, send abroad and get them.

HUGHES TO HAVE CHARGE.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Charles E. Hughes today notified Attorney General Gregory that he would come to Washington as soon as possible to take up investigation of the airplane production situation at the request of President Wilson. Although the Attorney General made no announcement of plans for the inquiry after communicating with Mr. Hughes, it is understood that Mr. Hughes will have full charge and will be assisted by William L. Frierson, Assistant Attorney General.

Among the many telegrams received at the White House commending the appointment of Mr. Hughes was one from General Felix Agnus, the veteran editor of The Baltimore American and The Baltimore Star. It read:

"I heartily congratulate you on the appointment of Mr. Hughes. He is a man of natural legal force, who understands the prosecution of a righteous cause and the administration of justice, and one who puts patriotism above partisanship. The whole country applauds your decision to enlist his talents in the common cause. The Republicans are with you to win the war. We are a nation undivided, resolved upon victory and confident in your leadership.

STARVING JEWS TO DEATH.

Turks in Palestine Seek to Exterminate Them by Hunger.

AMSTERDAM, May 16.—The persecution of Jews in Turkish-occupied territory in Palestine is not yet ended, according to the Jewish Correspondence Bureau at The Hague. Of 4,000 Jews in the City of Safed, near the Sea of Galilee, 3,000 are without bread. Djemal Pasha, formerly Turkish commander in that district and now Minister of War at Constantinople, devised new plans to bring the still remaining Jews to a slow but sure death, the bureau says.

Since the beginning of April he has ordered all Jews to evacuate colonies and towns near the front. Not a single Jew has been left in the village of Kefr-Saba, northeast of Jaffa. Only Jews were driven out of the village and the remainder of the population was allowed to stay. In Kefr-Saba five or six persons die daily from hunger and typhus.

PLANS MORE AGREEMENTS.

Berlin to Have Compacts with Other Allies Also, It Is Said.

AMSTERDAM, May 16.—Definite decisions have been reached regarding the armed assistance that Austria is to render on the western front, according to the Vienna correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin.

It is also reported from the same source that agreements similar to those just concluded between Germany and Austria will also be concluded between the Central Powers and Bulgaria and Turkey.

These agreements have to do with strengthening the alliance between the powers with respect to economic and military questions.

liaison mission on April 12. Flying at 800 meters, they finished their mission in spite of intense fire from enemy machines and anti-aircraft guns.

North of Toul, on the afternoon of May 14, Lieutenant Angel and Lieutenant Emerson were killed by a fall within our lines in an observation plane in which they were flying. The accident took place within a cloud and the particulars are not known.

North of Toul our aviators today brought down three German two-seated machines, one of our aviators bringing down two and another bringing down one.

FIRES IN MONTDIDIER STARTED BY OUR GUNS

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 16, (Associated Press.)—Several fires were set in Montdidier and behind the German lines by the American batteries last night. Enemy communications are continuously battered by the American heavy artillery and the aerial services on both sides are active. The infantry, however, has not been engaged.

Two German airplanes were brought down yesterday by French aviators in this sector.

The Germans are using searchlights every night.

Camp Court to Try Negro Slayer.

CAMP UPTON, N. Y., May 16.—Laton James, the negro infantryman who confessed to the murder of Mrs. J. Harrity and Private Michael Maloney in the woods here on May 5, will be brought here in a few days to be tried by general court martial. Major H. H. Walker, the cantonment provost marshal, made the positive statement that the murder was the result of an altercation that ensued when Maloney made an impertinent reply to a flippant remark by James. It was also declared that James was not on sentry duty on that post at the time and did not stand guard over the bodies after the shooting. If James is convicted of murder here he will be hanged within the reservation.

OUR AIRMEN SWIFT IN DOWNING FOES

Peterson Calls It a "Cinch" as He Briefly Tells How He Destroyed Two Machines.

MARR SURPRISED ENEMY

Opened Fire Before They Knew He Was Near—Victors Off Hunting Again Next Morning.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 16, (Associated Press.)—Captain David Peterson of Honesdale, Penn., and Captain Kenneth Marr of California, heroes in the aerial battle yesterday in which Captain Peterson brought down two German monoplanes and Captain Marr destroyed an enemy biplane in the Toul sector, told their stories of the battle today.

"I was flying near Thiacourt at an altitude of 5,000 meters," said Captain Peterson, "when I saw two German Albatross scouts going away at right angles in the distance. One was ahead of the other. I ascended 200 meters, circled, and stopped my engine and darted after them. I finally got close to the last plane. At a distance of 100 yards I opened fire with incendiary bullets and the German machine almost immediately burst into flames and fell.

"I continued straight on my course and within two minutes had the other enemy machine before me. He started a quick dive but I am certain that some of the bullets went home. One of the wings of his machine crumpled up at the same moment. As I circled about I saw one machine burning on the ground and the other, smoking in its downward plunge, crash to the earth. That is all there is to it. It was a cinch."

Captain Marr was flying at an altitude of 2,000 meters when he saw an enemy machine over the American lines.

"As I sailed out I saw him far away, circling out from our line amid a cloud of puffballs from our "Archies," he said. "I circled out wider and finally passed the German and turned again down our line, between the enemy and the sun. Both of us had the sun at our backs.

"As I opened up my motor and approached nearer I saw that I had a two-seater to deal with. I thought that the German might see me or hear my motor, so I went a hundred meters lower until right under the tail of his machine. Then I pointed the nose of my airplane upward and went on a level with the enemy and opened fire at him at point-blank range.

"The German never knew I was there until incendiary bullets, alternating with ordinary missiles began pattering through his machine. After twenty shots his machine toppled. I must have got a lucky shot home on the pilot, for the machine went down, wavering through the air like a leaf falling from a tree.

"I saw the observer standing up in the machine trying to get his machine gun to bear on me, first from one side and then from the other. I certainly felt sorry for the helpless beggar. There he was dashing to certain death, but to the last gamely trying to give me a fight."

Captain Peterson and Captain Marr were standing on their flying field at daybreak this morning as they spoke. It was a perfect day for flying and they were about to leave for a patrol over the enemy lines. As they stepped into their machines Captain Marr said:

"Well, we're off again. Maybe we will get some more. Maybe they will get us. Anyway, its a fine day for it. So long."

The motors started and the two airplanes, with several other machines, took the air and disappeared toward the front.

FAILED TO REACH PARIS.

Two Groups of German Airplanes Made Futile Efforts.

PARIS, May 16.—Two successive attempts to reach Paris were made by two distinct groups of German airplanes last night. The first group, after dropping bombs eighteen miles south of a point where they crossed the line, regained their base shortly before 11 P. M.

A few minutes later a second group of four airplanes crossed at about the same spot and headed southwestward. This group was headed off after it had covered thirty miles. The machines belonging to it dropped a few bombs, which fell in fields.

SAYS KAISERS CUT PARLEY.

Was to Have Lasted Six Days, Zurich Dispatch Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Official advices from Zurich reached Washington today indicating that all may have not gone well in the recent conference between Emperors William and Charles, which the Bavarian and Saxon monarchs insisted upon attending uninvited. The dispatch from Zurich asserts that the return of Emperor Charles to Vienna has caused the most diverse comments.

"The conference was to have lasted six days," says the dispatch. "It was prematurely interrupted. It is not difficult to conclude that the conversations must have taken a less satisfactory turn than was hoped, and that certain divergencies of view rendered the adjournment necessary.

"Obviously nobody thought that the details of the new treaty of alliance would be drawn up and sealed in a few days, but the possibility of an agreement upon the two essential questions, closely related to each other, was admitted, these questions being the regulation of the Polish question in favor of Austria, and Austria's obligation to put her armies at the disposition of Germany, whether on the Italian front or the western front. It will be seen in a few days whether this agreement was reached. Concerning the first point the correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung states that nothing definite was decided."

DOWN 55 GERMAN AIRPLANES IN A DAY

British Airmen Account for 37 of Them and French for the Remaining 18.

LONDON, May 16.—Fifty-five German airplanes were brought down by British and French aviators on Wednesday, according to the official reports on aerial activities, issued tonight.

Thirty-seven airplanes, twenty-five of which were destroyed, were accounted for by British airmen. The official statement on aerial operations reports a marked increase in the activities of aerial forces on the western front. It reads:

A great deal of work was done by our airplanes and observation balloons on Wednesday in conjunction with our artillery. Our bombing machines began their attacks at dawn and continued until dark, dropping over twenty-four tons of bombs on targets, including the railway stations at Tournai, Courtrai and Chaulnes and billets in the neighborhood of Douai, Bapaume, Menin and the River Somme and on the Zeebrugge-Bruges Canal.

Enemy aircraft was active in the early morning and again in the evening, hostile scouts attacking our bombing machines with particular insistence. Twenty-five German machines were brought down and twelve driven down out of control. One was shot down by machine gun fire from the ground.

On May 15 our pursuit machines were extremely active in the air. Eighteen German planes were brought down and four captive balloons were set on fire.

ALLIED AIRMEN SUPREME.

Have Acquired a Marked Superiority in Alsace and on the Rhine.

GENEVA, May 16.—Swiss troops, stationed along the frontier, have noticed in the last three months an increasing superiority of the Allies over the Germans in the air over the territory under Swiss observation.

The German aviators, operating in Alsace and along the Rhine, have become scarcer, while the allied aviators are circulating freely in those regions.

The front further north, it thus appears, is demanding the services of the best of the German aviators.

VOTE ON CREEL TODAY.

House Committee Expected to Decide for an Investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The House Committee on Rules to which was referred Representative Treadway's resolution, calling for an investigation into a recent utterance by George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, alleged to reflect on Congressmen, is expected to act favorably tomorrow. The matter was informally before the committee today. Democratic members sought to belittle the importance of the resolution, but it is believed there will be enough votes to obtain a favorable report.

Representative Pou, Chairman of the Committee, speaking for himself, today said:

"If Mr. Creel did not make the statement reflecting upon Congress he should, in justice to himself, repudiate the statement. If he did make the statement, it seems to me a question is raised to be dealt with by the President. Personally, I do not regard the incident of sufficient importance to warrant any action whatever by the House."

The belief exists in the Rules Committee that if Mr. Creel should act upon Representative Pou's suggestion the proposal for an investigation would be dropped.

TWO CARGO SHIPS LOST.

One Torpedoed and One a Dutch Ship, Was Sunk in Collision.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Navy Department was advised, late this afternoon, of the loss of two large cargo-carrying steamers employed on the lines of supplies and communications between this country and Europe, one of the vessels lost, the Neches, having been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine, and the other, the Zaanland, having been lost in a collision at sea. No lives were lost with either vessel and no troops were being carried. The announcement regarding the loss of the Zaanland follows:

"The Navy Department is informed that the U. S. S. Zaanland was sunk in collision at sea on May 13. All on board were rescued and will be returned to the United States. The Zaanland was a cargo carrier and was one of the Dutch ships taken over by the United States Government, and was 8,700 tons dead weight. It was commissioned and manned by the navy for army account."

This statement was authorized by Secretary Daniels regarding the sinking of the Neches:

"The War Department has received information that the Neches, a cargo carrier of 7,175 tons, was torpedoed and sunk on the night of May 14 or early morning of May 15.

"All on board are reported saved. The vessel was returning without cargo. It is believed that the vessel carried a crew of about 125 men. No troops were on board. The Neches was under charter by the United States Shipping Board. It was a steel ship, built in 1914, and had a capacity of about 14 knots per hour."

ASSERT WE WILL PUT 5,000,000 IN FIGHT

And If More Are Necessary to Win They Will Go Too, British and Italians Are Told.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 16.—"We intend to act seriously. We intend to win whatever the cost. If 5,000,000 men are not enough, if it is necessary we will send 10,000,000," writes Irving Bacheller of Riverside, Conn., to Ernesto Nathan, ex-Mayor of Rome.

Bacheller continues, saying that if Nathan and his countrymen were able to see the feverish activity occurring in America, they would not have moments of doubt about the future. He concludes:

"Tell our Italian brothers to fight with undiminished faith and light heart. If other means should fail, we will construct with our ships a bridge across the Atlantic, thus attaining our mutual aim to join hands in the name of liberty across the ocean."

The press publishes the letter with large headings producing an excellent impression.

LONDON, May 16, (Associated Press.)—American preparations on the western front are amazing in their immensity and plans are being made to care for 5,000,000 American troops, Harry E. V. Brittain, Secretary of the English branch of the Pilgrim Club, told the Royal Colonial Institute last night. If the Germans do not give in, he added, the number of American troops will be increased to any amount necessary.

Sir Charles P. Lucas, former head of the Dominions Department at the Colonial Office, said he wondered if the Germans realized what the entry of America into the war meant. It meant, he said, not only the accession to the Allied powers of many millions of fighting men and the addition of vast resources, but also the coming in of the only one amongst the great peoples of the world who have seen and carried through to an unmistakable issue a four years' war.

The United States, asserted Miss Higgins, of the American Labor Delegation, had answered the call of blood. England had been a wonderful inspiration, and the heart of America was full of gratitude for what England's sons had achieved.

and that a total of 4,000,000 men during the year will be nearer the mark.

Secretary Baker explained today his view as to what the new practice of brigading American units with French and British divisions and the appointment of General Foch as supreme commander might bring about in the way of producing mixed army corps or divisions.

It was possible, he said, that American division or higher commanders would have command of French or British troops or both under the arrangements made by General Foch. Where a mixed division or corps was constituted and American troops predominated, Mr. Baker thought it probable that an American would command if one of adequate rank and experience is available.

PRESIDENT OPPOSES ANY WAR INQUIRY

who, with Senator Jones of New Mexico, voted against reporting the resolution out, said he wanted time to file a minority report.

"For the life of me, I cannot see any objection to the resolution, amended as it is to meet objections that have been raised before our committee," said Senator McKellar. "Everything to which objection was raised has been eliminated."

Senator Thompson said there were still "a few objections" to the resolution, and he would point them out in the minority report.

"I do not think a conflagration is going to take place unless we go at double-step to take up this resolution," interpolated Senator Martin. "I want to see both these reports, and I want ample time for it. Indeed, I had hopes that the steps taken by the President in appointing to the case one of the best lawyers in the Department of Justice, associating with him Justice Hughes, would satisfy every Senator that the Government proposes to make a full investigation of this matter. If the charges made by Mr. Borglum are true, criminal prosecution would lie against the men he names, and if they are not true they are libelous."

Senator Brandegee suggested that the Borglum data be referred to the Military Affairs Committee in confidence, with the privilege of making it public if considered wise. This was done.

Senator Thompson was assured that he would have ample time to put in his report. He expects to have it ready tomorrow morning. The Chamberlain resolution is on the calendar for tomorrow, but no effort will be made to put it to a vote unless its advocates feel assured of enough votes to adopt it.

Senator Brandegee later in the day told of receiving the letter and affidavits mailed to him by Gutzon Borglum to refute the charge that he was interested in an aircraft concern at the time he was investigating for the Government. The Connecticut Senator, while disclaiming responsibility for the Borglum data, said he felt there were things in it that ought to be considered by some committee of the Senate.

"Mr. Borglum makes some serious charges against two gentlemen in affidavits accompanying his letter," said the Senator. "I hesitate to stand sponsor for them, and yet I do not want to pocket them. If the charges made by Mr. Borglum are true, criminal prosecution would lie against the men he names, and if they are not true they are libelous."

Senator Brandegee suggested that the Borglum data be referred to the Military Affairs Committee in confidence, with the privilege of making it public if considered wise. This was done.

SUFFRAGISTS CHIDE POLITICAL SPEAKERS

Hear Leaders Explain Party Aims, Then Say They Didn't Learn Anything.

MISS HAY STOPS HISSING

The principles and achievements of political parties were recommended to an Aeolian Hall audience of women last night, women who are going to enroll on May 25, and wanted to know how to pick their parties. Fifteen minutes of oratory and five of question and answer were furnished for the Prohibitionists by Dr. Ralph Meyer, for the Socialists by Morris Hilliquit, for the Democrats by Senator Robert F. Wagner, and for the Republicans by Senator Albert Ottinger. And when they had finished, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the Woman's Suffrage Party of the city, which had organized the symposium, asked her audience: "Well, have you learned anything?" And the women answered with an enthusiastic shout of "No!"

Whereupon Miss Hay advised the women voters to go home and get the literature of all the parties, study it hard, and then make up their minds for themselves.

The crowd, which included a scattering of men, was earnest enough at the outset, but developed a somewhat irreverent attitude toward the speakers in the latter part of the evening. Most of the earnestness was exhausted in asking Morris Hilliquit about the Socialist Party attitude toward peace, but there were enough Socialists left who had things to ask of the representatives of the old parties to keep things lively in the latter part of the meeting. Miss Hay was an iron-handed Chairman. She stopped hissing with the firm and definite statement that it would not happen again while she was Chairman.

Deprived of its opportunity to hiss and heckle, the crowd developed the habit of interrupting a speaker with [illegible] applause of somebody whom he was denouncing, and many a burst of oratory was greeted with tumultuous laughter. The speakers held on gallantly, however, and most of them evaded the unpleasant possibilities of the five minutes given over to questions from the floor by answering a single question at such length that it took up nearly all the time allotted.

While apparently the bulk of the women were there to get guidance in making up their minds as to party affiliations, a good many of them had preferences that were indicated by their applause. They cheered pretty liberally for all the parties and all the public men, and of them all the largest outburst was provoked by the name of Theodore Roosevelt, with the President a close second.

And after the party representatives had set forth their views Governor Whitman came in to beg the women to enroll themselves in some party—not any particular party, he was careful to state, though admitting a personal preference; but in some party.

"I am a member of a party," said the Governor, "but in the discharge of the very onerous and difficult duties connected with that office I am not and never have been a party. Greater and more important than partisanship is patriotism, and the man who assumes that all patriotism and all Americanism resides within his own party deceives himself."

Dr. Meyers, the first speaker, got on better with the audience than his successors. He pointed out that the Prohibition Party had been strong for woman suffrage, and declared that it didn't want to prohibit any of the just rights of man, but only to institute a greater measure of liberty, justice, and happiness.

Mr. Hilliquit suggested that women might be voted for at the primaries this Fall, at which Miss Hay shook her head, explaining later that what she meant was that women should not be voted for simply because they were women. The difficulties of the Socialist representative began with the questions, when half a dozen persons popped up to ask him about the war. Miss Hay explained that he was only representing a party, and that the question was not Mr. Hilliquit's attitude toward the war, but the Socialist Party's attitude. Thereupon a man at one side of the auditorium asked:

"Does the Socialist Party support a military organization in the United States for home protection?"

"The Socialist Party here as elsewhere," said the speaker, "is opposed to all war at all times." [Applause. "In this we are not alone; you all are—" [Hisses and many shouts of "No!"] Then Miss Hay declared that there would be no hissing while she was Chairman, and Mr. Hilliquit went on to explain that what he meant was that no sane person was in favor of war as such, but that the Socialist Party would not favor any kind of a peace; that it was opposed to a peace of subjugation and enslavement; and that "the Socialist Party in this city long before the war expressed its hatred of the German system of monarchy and militarism."

Senator Wagner and Senator Ottinger, combating the growing levity of their hearers, had a harder time of it; particularly Senator Ottinger, who finished up his remarks by declaring that "the Democratic Party of today resembles Jefferzonianism as much as Mayor Hylan resembles Daniel Webster," only to be met with the question: "You've told us what the Republican Party did back in 1492; what are you going to do?"

"The Republican Party," said the Senator, "is going to do what it has done in the past if you put it in power, but it will not do it if it is not restored to power." Then Miss Hay got the audience's opinion of the speakers and the Governor's appeal closed the meeting.

ALUMNI TO AID FUND.

University Graduates Enlist in the Campaign for $450,000.

The alumni of New York University met at dinner last night at the Hotel McAlpin and formed plans for a campaign to raise a fund of $450,000 to enable the institution to meet current operating expenses and to provide equipment for the engineering school, which is now training 600 soldiers. Although the actual campaign for subscriptions has not begun, the Executive Committee announced that $85,000 had already been obtained.

The speakers who explained the object of the campaign were James Boyd, Chairman; Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown, William M. Kingsley, Cyrus C. Miller, and M. H. Avram, Chairman of the Engineering Fund Committee.

WOMEN FOR RADIO WORK

Ten young women for Government radio service were called for yesterday at the radio class for women at the East Side Branch, Young Men's Christian Association, 153 East Eighty-sixth Street, where a class of twenty-five young women is studying. An officer of the Signal Corps in Washington asked William C. Bohn, instructor of the class, to fill the places. The girls will be placed in large commercial plants where orders are being filled for the Government.

Two young women of the class immediately volunteered and will go to their positions next week. The other eight will follow later.

NO WAR WITH URUGUAY, BERLIN DECLARES

Germany Finally Answers Montevideo's Demand That She Make Her Position Known.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, May 16.—The German Government has informed Uruguay, in response to the request for a definition of the relations between the two countries, that it does not consider that a state of war exists. This official note was issued today:

"When the Uruguayan Military Mission was detained by a German submarien the commander of the submarine justified his arbitrary action by the state of war with Uruguay in which he said Germany had found itself, and said that he was acting in accordance with instructions from the Admiralty, which he exhibited.

"Our Foreign Office demanded that Germany state whether the submarine commander had acted in accordance with instructions from the Government, at Berlin, adding that in case a negative reply should be given our military representatives should be relieved of their engagement. [This evidently refers to pledges which the members of the Uruguayan mission were compelled to give before being permitted to proceed.]

"Several days later the Spanish Government made an offer of mediation in regard to the promise made by the Uruguayan officers. Mediation was suggested by the German Ambassador to Spain. The Uruguayan Government refused, regarding this as incompatible with the dignity of the nation. Moreover, the fundamental point of the question, which was whether Germany was or was not at war with Uruguay, must be decided by Germany. The German Government responded that it relieved the Uruguayan officers of their engagement, but in exchange hoped that Uruguay would exert influence in France to the end that the Chilean mission in Spain be permitted to pass over French territory. [This apparently refers to a Chilean mission to Germany, which has been denied passage through France.]

"The Uruguayan Government, without accepting the abrogation of the pledges, called for a reply to the fundamental question; that is to say, whether Germany did or did not consider that a state of war existed. Germany replied that it was not at war with Uruguay. It said, furthermore, that the rupture of relations between Uruguay and Germany was not brought about by itself, and called attention to Uruguay's silence on the subject of the passage of the Chilean mission.

"Meanwhile, the Uruguayan Government inquired of the Chilean Government if it desired Uruguay to request the French Government to authorize passage of the Chilean mission over French territory. The Uruguayan Government decided to take this step only as a mark of deference to a friendly country. The Chilean Government replied that it had no interest in the passage of the mission. The Uruguayan Government informed Germany of this fact. Germany replied today that it relieved the Uruguayan officers of their pledges without any condition. It said that the Chilean question had been raised simply in a desire to consult Uruguay on the subject, and that, in view of the negative reply of Chile, the German Government considered the incident to have been closed."

CONBOY ANNOUNCES DISTRICT DRAFT QUOTAS

5,000 Men from New York City Will Be Mobilized Next Week.

Director of the Draft Martin Conboy made public last night the quotas of draft men from the various New York City districts who are ordered to entrain for the regular army mobilization camp at Fort Slocum during the five days beginning with next Monday. The call, which come unexpectedly, summons to the colors 5,000 men from the five boroughs and precedes the call for the much larger number of men who are ordered to report for duty between May 25 and 29. The quotas affected by this last call were published in THE TIMES last week.

Five hundred men selected by the Government from the New York State draft, including a large number from New York and Brooklyn, went into training yesterday on the campus of New York University, University Heights. The newcomers are a contingent of the 90,000 the Government is distributing among colleges and universities for technical training, and added to the 100 Iowans already at New York University makes 600 now at University Heights.

New York University was one of the first colleges to enter upon the work, though it was then thought the number of soldier students would be small on account of the housing problem. The gymnasium has already been given over to the Iowans, but the housing will be extended by turning the Hall of Fame Museum of six rooms set apart for the commemoration of great Americans, whose names are inscribed in the colonnade above, into barracks. Gould Hall will also be turned into barracks.

JURY DENOUNCES FUSION'S BIG FUND

URGES NEW REFORM LAWS

Would Put Election Workers on Fixed Pay—Finds Indictment Against Timothy Healy.

Recommendations for amendments to the election laws to prevent the use of unlimited funds by any political party were made by the extraordinary Grand Jury yesterday in a report reviewing its two months' investigation of the contributions and disbursements in the Fusion campaign in the municipal election in November. The jury denounced the "reckless expenditure of an amount of money so unduly large as to have shocked the public conscience."

To the previous indictments returned by this Grand Jury against William Hamlin Childs, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Fusion Committee, and against ex-State Senator Josiah T. Newcomb, Chairman of the Fusion Campaign Committee, and William Sulzer, one of the speakers of the campaign, the jury yesterday added a fourth indictment, against ex-Coroner Timothy Healy, President of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, charging him with attempted bribery, petit larceny and forgery.

The presentment of the Grand Jury, which was read by the foreman, J. Sinclair Armstrong, a Republican, who had made two contributions to the Fusion fund, evoked this statement from Justice Goff in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court concerning remedies suggested in the presentment for safeguarding the ballot.

"You have touched the vital spot. The foundation of our political institutions, irrespective of party affiliations or of leanings, and their existence and maintenance, we must all recognize, must depend upon the purity of the ballot box, and no more important presentment has ever been handed up to this Court in this county than the one you have handed up. For the services which you have rendered the people of the city should be deeply appreciative, and the Court adds to that appreciation its own expression of grateful recognition."

Justice Goff announced that as the Legislature was not now in session, he would send a copy of the presentment to Governor Whitman, to be presented by him or his successor to the Legislature at the proper time.

The Grand Jury in the presentment pointed out that under existing election laws candidates were limited as to the amounts which they might expend, but no limitation was placed upon the amounts which committees might disburse on behalf of candidates. While the present law required the filing of a more or less detailed statement by such committees or persons as received and expended moneys subscribed for election purposes, the Grand Jury said that this was not a sufficient check to the existing evil. Continuing, the presentment says:

"The evidence before the Grand Jury as to the campaign conducted by the Fusion Committee of 1917 as regards the amount of money expended seems so detrimental to the purity of the ballot as to warrant the strongest condemnation, and it most earnestly recommends that a recurrence should be prevented without delay by remedial legislation."

Commenting on the present law that requires a political committee to consist of at least three members in order to handle funds in a campaign, the Grand Jury's presentment says:

"It expressly relieves such committee of responsibility for the proper expenditure or accounting of any amounts transferred to other political committees, [the opinion of the Grand Jury this] is a source of evil and should be remedied."

The Grand Jury condemns the custom of political parties of paying out large sums of money "on the eve or on election day to so-called district leaders, who in turn dispense the same on election day without restriction, at their own pleasure and without regard to any other obligation than to furnish some kind of general voucher."

According to the tabulation made by the Grand Jury from financial statements, $170,851.42 in cash was placed in the hands of Fusion district leaders on election day. The presentment adds:

"There is before the Grand Jury, on well-substantiated evidence, a case where a large amount of money was paid to one individual, apparently with little reason, and with no obligation on the part of the recipient to further the political cause for which the money was subscribed. The total of the moneys expended in conducting the Fusion campaign of 1917 reached the astounding figure of $1,610,862.58."

In conclusion the Grand Jury recommends the defining by law of the status of every worker at an election, with fixed compensation and says the payment to any person of an amount in excess of the fair and reasonable value of his services should be prima facie evidence of corrupt intent, and be punishable. It would restrict newspapers to the usual rates for advertising; would prohibit a political committee from giving money to any society, club or organization with the intent of influencing the votes of persons conected with any such organization, and would compel the names of all election workers, leaders and others to be filed fifteen to thirty days preceding election.

MACHINERY BIG WAR NEED:

Manufacturers Warned of Coming Call for Ordnance Tools.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 16.—The nation's aircraft program collapsed because those directing the work failed to allow sufficient time for the patterning of the intricate tools necessary for their production before starting to manufacture, according to J. E. Doan of Cincinnati, President of the National Machine Tool Builders' Association, speaking at the annual convention of that body here today.

"Right now there is a scarcity of large size machine tools, which apparently will shortly be urgently needed to speed up war machinery," said the speaker. "It is obvious, therefore, that since it is not possible to produce them over night a program should be laid out as far in advance as possible, so that when production is demanded proper machinery will be in readiness."

Unless there is a big speeding up immediately in the production of machine tools of large size there will be a serious delay with the big ordnance program in 1919, said Major H. H. Reed of the Ordnance Bureau. The Major announced that the War Department was preparing to establish two mammoth ordnance factories at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia in the next few months, which will require $10,000,000 worth of machine tools for big guns and an additional $5,000,000 worth of smaller tools in reserve for small arms. Of this amount, only $1,500,000 worth are in sight, he said, urging the toolmakers to prepare for the huge order.

CATHOLIC CHURCH AIDS SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Pastor of St. Patrick's Cathedral Calls on Parishioners to Give to War Fund.

With only two days left in which to get the last $75,000 of New York City's quota of $250,000, the Salvation Army campaign was spurred yesterday by an appeal to Catholics to support the drive, which was issued by Mgr. M. J. Lavelle, pastor of St. Patrick's Cathedral, and secretary to Cardinal Farley. Addressed to all Catholics in the archdiocese, the appeal was:

"One of the most striking changes brought about by the war, and the necessity of raising great funds for charitable work under the direction of the various organizations best fitted for it, has been the practical razing of old walls of religious insularism. These various drives have brought Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, and the nondenominational shoulder to shoulder.

This war has had a wonderful effect in bringing people together, making them waive differences of religion and party, and causing them, without the slightest diminution of loyalty to individual belief, to join hand in hand and stand together in every enterprise calculated to promote the welfare of our common country.

"We Catholics have striven to do not only our share, but our utmost, in the financial support of the Government and of all the war charities. We appreciate cordially the aid we have received from our non-Catholic fellow citizens in the Catholic War Drive; consequently we are deeply concerned in the success of the Salvation Army's present drive. I wish it well, and shall lend it every assistance. We know that the money thus raised—like that of the Y. M. C. A. and the Jewish Society—will be wisely used for the welfare and comfort of our soldiers in the camps and on the battlefield. This unanimity of sentiment in the present issue, is of great value to the country at all times, but especially in these days of danger and stress."

At the headquarters of the campaign, 148 West Fourteenth Street, announcement was made last night that the campaign total now stood at $175,000. Among the larger givers were Cleveland H. Dodge & Co., $1,000; Mrs. R. A. Wellington, $1,000; Clarence MacKay, $1,000; Mrs. Walter Damrosch, $1,000; R. G. Dun & Co., $500; American Telephone and Telegraph Co., $1,000; New York Telephone Co., $1,000, and $500 from Liggett & Myers.

A factory girl, who has relatives at the front, approached a Salvation Army woman yesterday and tendered two $100 Liberty bonds. Investigation disclosed that the girl was trying to give away her entire savings, and the bonds were returned. The girl, highly indignant, said she could use her own money as she pleased, and mailed her contribution right into headquarters.

The high cost of living was completely forgotten yesterday when John Beck, manager of the American Lithographic Company, 32 East Nineteenth Street, called his employes together at noon and talked to them about helping the campaign. With R. E. Newberry, a member of the firm, he rounded up all the men in the big plant and started to auction off doughnuts at $2 apiece and pies at $1 a portion. The auction brought $1,045 in twenty minutes.

Commander Evangeline Booth yesterday issued an order directing all Salvation Army workers to give one day to helping the Red Cross in its drive next week, besides helping all they possibly could while pursuing their regular duties. The Salvationists have already donated forty-six ambulances to the Red Cross, and furnished several drivers, who have won honors.

$17,000,000 in Record Income Tax.

Yesterday was a record-breaking day in the collection of taxes in the Second, or Wall Street Internal Revenue District. Collector William H. Edwards's appeal for advance payments of individual and excess profits taxes met with a gratifying response, for at the close of business yesterday the Collector estimated the day's collections at $17,000,000.

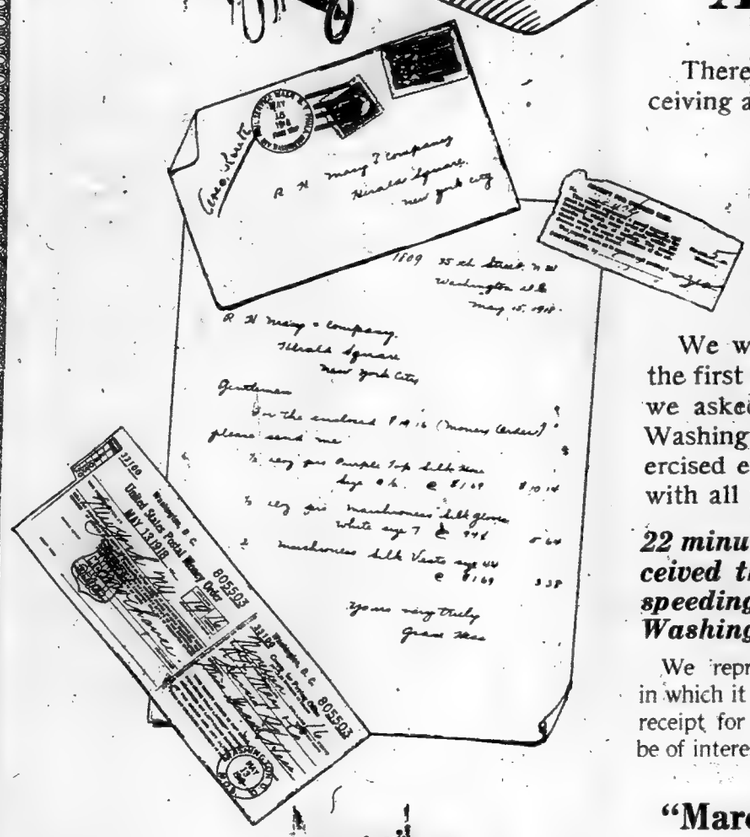
An Order By Aerial Mail

There is nothing spectacular in receiving an order from Washington—in fact, almost every Washington mail brings us news of the needs of some of our Washington customers—but there is something thrilling about an order received by air-post.

We wanted to have an order by the first regular air postal service, so we asked one of our customers in Washington to send us one. We exercised every effort to fill the order with all possible dispatch.

22 minutes from the time we received the order the goods were speeding on the way back to Washington.

We reproduce the order, the envelope in which it came, and the return registered receipt for the merchandise sent. It may be of interest to note what was ordered:



"Marchioness" Gloves

DEAD OF BATTLE ARE THERE

How Irvin Cobb Arrived as the Stiff-Necked Passenger of a Motor Cycle.

By FLOYD B. GIBBONS.

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

[Seventh Article.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY UNDER GENERAL FOCH IN FRANCE, May 16.—Leaving the cellar where I had spent the night with the Major I explored the town by daylight the next morning, noting the havoc wrought by the shells that had arrived in the night. I had thought in seeing the refugees moving southward along the roads that there was little in the variety of article, related to human existence, that they had failed to carry away with them. But inspection of the abandoned abodes of those unfortunate peasants was enough to convince one of the greater variety of things that had to be left behind. Old people have saving habits, and the French peasants pride themselves upon never throwing anything away.

Cottage rooms were littered with the discarded but saved clothing of ages. Old shoes and dresses, ceremonial high hats, and frock coats, brought forth only for weddings or a funeral, were mixed on the floor with children's toys, prayer books and broken china. Shutters and doors hung aslant by single hinges.

In the village inn mud had been tracked in by exploring feet and the red tiled floor was littered with straw and with pewter mugs that would be dear to the heart of an antiquary.

The ivory balls were gone from the dust-covered billiard table, but the six American soldiers billeted in the cellar beneath had overcome this discrepancy They enjoyed their afterdinner billiards just the same with three large wooden balls from a croquet court in the garden. The croquet ball is a romping substitute when it hits the green cushions.

That afternoon we laid more wire across the fields to the next town north. The man who do this job, in my opinion, are the most daring in any organization that depends for efficiency upon uninterrupted telephone communication. For them there is no shelter when a deluge of shells drops upon the field across which their wire is laid. Without protection of any kind from flying steel splinters, they must go to that spot to repair cut wires and restore communication. During one of the shelling spells I reached cover at the side of the road and prepared to await clearer weather.

In the distance down the road appeared a scudding cloud of dust. An occasional shell dropping close on either side of the road seemed to add speed to the apparition. As it drew closer I could see that it was a motorcycle of the three wheeled, bathtub variety. The rider on the cycle was bending over the handle bars and apparently giving it all there was, but the bulky figure that filled the side car rode with his head well back.

At every irregularity in the road the bathtub contraption bounced on its springs, bow and stern rising and falling like a small ship in a rough sea. Its nearer approach revealed that the giant torso apparent above the rim was encased in a double-breasted khaki garment, which might have marked the wearer as the master of a four-in-hand or a Mississippi River steamboat of the ante-bellum type. The shoulders thus draped were surmounted by a huge head which, by reason of its backward, star-gazing position, appeared mostly a chin and double chin. The whole was topped by a fat cigar, which sprouted upward from the elevated chin and at times gave forth clouds.

I was trying to decide whether the elevated chin posture of the passenger was the result of bravado or an Adam's apple when the scudding comet reached the shelter of the protecting bank in which was chiseled the dog kennel that I occupied. As the machine came to a halt, the chin depressed itself ninety degrees, and brought into view the smiling features of Irvin S. Cobb.

"I have neither a sensitive nose, a saw-edge collar, or an inordinate admiration for clouds," he explained, with reference to his stiff neck pose. "But George here," waving to the driver, "took a sudden inspiration for fast movement. The jolt almost took my head off, and the wind kept me from getting it back into position. George stuck his spurs into this flying bootblack stand just about the time something landed near us that sounded like a kitchen stove half loaded with window weights and window panes. I think George made the record for this road. I've named it Buh-Looney Boulevard."

When the firing subsided we parted, and I reached the next town without incident. It was almost vesper hour, or what had been the allotted time for that rite in these parts, when I entered the yard of the village church, located in an exposed position at the crossroads on the edge of the town. A sudden, unmistakable whirl sounded from above, and I threw myself on the ground just as a high velocity small calibre German shell registered a hit on the side of the nave where the roof and wall met.

While the steel splinters whistled through the air an avalanche of steel tiles slid down the slanting surface of the roof and fell in a clattering cascade on the graves in the yard below. I sought speedy shelter in the lee of the western wall. Several other shells had struck the churchyard, and one had landed on the final resting place of the family of Roger la Porte. The massive marble slab which sealed the top of the sunken vault had been heaved aside and one wall removed, leaving open to the gaze a view of eight caskets lying in a row.

Nearer were fresh mounds of yellow earth, surmounted by new and unpainted wooden crosses, on which were inscribed in pencil the names of French soldiers with the dates, indicating that their last sacrifice for the tricolor had been made ten days prior. At the head of each grave an ordinary beer bottle had been placed, neck downward, and through the glass one could see a paper scroll, on which the name, rank, and record of the dead man was preserved.

While I wondered at this method of identification, an American soldier came around the corner of the church, lighted a cigarette, and sat down on an old tombstone.

"Stick around if you want to hear something good," he said. "That is, if that last shell didn't burst the organ. There's a poilu comes up here every afternoon at 5 o'clock for the last three days and plays the sweetest music on the organ. It certainly is great. Reminds me of when I was an altar boy back in St. Paul."

We waited, and soon there came from the rickety old organ the soothing tones of reeds. Ancient pipes, sweetened by the benedictions of ages, poured forth a melody to the touch of one whose playing was simple but of the soul.

We sat silently among the graves as the rays of the dying sun brought to life new coloring in the leaded windows of stained glass behind which the soldier of France swayed at the ivory keyboard and heavenly harmony ignored that thing of death and destruction that might have arrived through the air at any minute.

FORSTMANN AGREES TO SHOW HIS BOOKS

Consents to Admit Expert When Attorney General Makes Drastic Order.

HEARING AWAITS REPORT

Government Wants to be Sure That Transfer of Stock in Woolen Mill Was Genuine.

The Forstmann & Huffmann Company of Parrais, one of the largest woolen goods manufacturing concerns in the United States, decided yesterday to permit James A. McKenna, the public accountant retained by A. Mitchell Palmer, the Alien Property Custodian, to examine its books. In the course of the hearing before Attorney General Lewis on Wednesday, which was called at the request of the Government to inquire into certain transfers of stock in the company from German to American control, Mr. McKenna testified that when he went to Passaic the Forstmann & Huffmann Company declined to let him make such an examination of the books as was necessary in the case.

Samuel Untermyer, attorney for Mr. Forstmann, at that hearing said that Mr. McKenna was not acceptable to his client, and said that any one of the numerous other accountants would be acceptable. Mr. Forstmann, when questioned by Attorney General Lewis, said that he declined to permit Mr. McKenna to make certain examinations as a result of advice given to him by Robert H. McCarter of Newark, one of his attorneys. The accounts which Mr. McKenna said he had been denied access to were the personal ones of Mr. Forstmann. The German stock in the company, which figures in the present investigation, was sold to Mr. Forstmann, who is an American citizen of German birth.

Mr. Untermyer told Attorney General Lewis that several accounting firms which he named would be acceptable to Mr. Forstmann. It was a case, according to the testimony, of anybody except Mr. McKenna, who was selected for the work by the Alien Property Custodian.

At the close of Wednesday's hearing, which was at times a very stormy one, Deputy Attorney General Becker served a subpoena on Mr. Forstmann which called for the production in New York of all the books which Mr. McKenna desires to inspect. Attorney General Lewis told him to have the books at the office of the Attorney General at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The service of the subpoena was entirely unexpected by Mr. Forstmann. He was informed by Mr. Becker that the purpose of the Government was to determine whether stock known to have been owned by enemy subjects had been transferred into bona fide American control and ownership, in other words, whether it is actually owned by American citizens or merely held by them for persons who are enemy subjects. Checks with which it is said Mr. Forstmann paid for the stock are in evidence, the total amount represented being $670,000.

Yesterday afternoon Deputy Attorney General Becker was informed that Mr. McKenna was acceptable to the woolen firm and that he would be permitted to make the examination he desired without interference. Mr. McKenna immediately got to work and the hearing was adjourned pending his report.

The investigation which Attorney General Lewis is making for the Government in order to ascertain whether the Germans had, or still have, in this country 1,000,000 Mauser rifles and over 1,000,000,000 rounds of rifle ammunition will be resumed at 10:30 o'clock next Wednesday morning. It was said yesterday that Mme. Gadski, wife of Captain Hans Tauscher, may be called as a witness in this case next week. Captain Tauscher is said to have negotiated for the sale of the guns to revolutionary elements in Russia.

Mme. Gadski is said to be a friend of a Countess von Sievers, who is also reported to know something about the guns. She may also be called as a witness. Freiherr von Gersdorff, who is said to have offered to arrange for the transfer of the guns to Russian revolutionists, it was said yesterday, is now in an internment prison. He may be brought to New York to testify as to what he knows about the matter.

Foot Valued Above Man's Life.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Cohalan returned a verdict yesterday for $30,000 in a suit of Harry Stoffman, a shipping clerk for a hospital uniform manufacturing concern, because he lost his foot in an elevator accident in a Childs company building while loading packing cases containing Red Cross uniforms. Another jury before Justice Cohalan gave Mrs. Rebecca Cohen $25,000 for the death of her husband, Benjamin Cohen, proprietor of a Summer hotel at Mountaindale, Sullivan County, who fell between two cars on the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad and was killed.

Collect $29,500 for Hospital Fund.

Mrs. James Speyer, Treasurer of the Woman's Auxiliary of the United Hospital Fund of New York, announced yesterday that $29,500 had been received in contributions as a result of the special appeal sent out to continue the work of the organization. The money is greatly needed now owing to the extensive work planned in connection with the war. Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, President of the auxiliary, pointed out that the amount was the largest collected by any auxiliary with the exception of the Bankers and Brokers, of which Walter E. Frew is Treasurer.

FINDS SHIPWORKERS KEEN FOR VICTORY

Dr. Charles A. Eaton Declares Appointment of Schwab Has Stirred Men Under Him.

LIBERTY RAIL FOR SEDITION

Rides on a Heated Iron Pipe Now Employed by Workers to Suppress Disloyalty in Yards.

"The shipworkers can be trusted by the nation, and the more the nation trusts them the better work they will do," said Dr. Charles A. Eaton, head of the National Service Section of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, yesterday on his return from a four weeks' circuit of the country's shipyards. During his trip Dr. Eaton, who was commissioned to gauge the spirit of the men and to stimulate them to greater effort, visited 154 shipyards and addressed about 125,000 of the 350,000 workers.

Dr. Eaton said that every man in every yard was now awake to his responsibilities and that there had developed an inter-yard rivalry that was "putting all the workers on their mettle" in the practice of the gospel of speed the ship. Discussing slacking and pro-German attempts to slow up the men, he declared that the enemy activities had been practically stamped out through the organization of the men themselves to fight them. Enemy agents, said Dr. Eaton, are being seized right and left, and those the Department of Justice doesn't get are given severe treatment by Vigilance Committees formed by their fellow workers.

"Out on the Pacific Coast," he said, "the men have what they call the 'Rail Committee.' This is formed of workmen and is charged with seeing that every hand in the yards is 100 per cent. American and on the job eight hours, six days a week. In a yard at Seattle the rail committee has an iron pipe which is called the 'Liberty Rail.' It is kept near the blacksmith's forge. When a workman utters a disloyal remark, fails to buy bonds or war savings stamps or in other ways proves he is lukewarm, the rail committee waits on him. The Liberty rail is heated at the forge and the disloyal workman is ridden about the yards on the hot rail. At one time, I was told, there were 42 men in a Seattle hospital recovering from 'Liberty rail' rides.

Unpatriotic Get Rough Usage.

"I saw a man at one of the yards who failed to take off his hat one night when the national anthem was played during a change of shifts. This man was seized by the workmen and badly beaten before the guards could rescue him. These punishments, rough but earned, should indicate the men's mood toward anything or anybody that attempts to block the shipbuilders' determination to carry their work through rapidly and thoroughly.

"The appointment of Charles M. Schwab has had an inspiring effect on the men," he added. "They appeared to be crazy about him and to regard him as one of them. To hear the shipmen talk you'd get the idea that the big boss was a man who when he wanted a little change from the monotony of speeding things up would slip into overalls and drive a few thousand rivets or put in a couple of hours at the brake of a hoisting crane."

Though he was convinced that the men had done much toward eliminating the insidious work of Germans and their sympathizers he cited an instance to show that efforts were still being made to tie up the ships. He said that when his party visited the plant of the Union Iron Works at San Francisco 7,500 men assembled to hear speeches. Just as one of Dr. Eaton's aids, A. Richmond Parkhurst, started his talk a Secret Service man edged up to the platform and warned the speaker not to go on. He said the Government had been informed that five Germans armed with bombs planned to enter the yards while the speechmaking was at its height and, taking advantage of the assemblage, wreck some of the ships then on the ways. While Mr. Parkhurst suspended his speech, Government agents went through the crowd and the half-finished ships, but without success. Dr. Eaton said that while the search for the Germans was being conducted bands of angry workmen followed the Secret Service men with shouts of "Turn them over to us."

Dr. Eaton said that orders had been received extending the scope of his department to include patriotic campaigns to increase the output of all factories turning out materials which enter into ship construction. In all, about 5,000 factories will come under his supervision.

SHIPWORKERS ON STRIKE.

Men at Sparrows Point Demand Bonus romised Them.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 16.—Ignoring the agreement made by the Associated Shipworkers' Union with the Wage Adjustment Board and their promise not to strike during the war, 1,800 riveters and ironworkers at the Sparrows Point plant of the Bethlehem Ship Coporation threw down their tools today, completely tying up the work now under way. The men say they walked out because the bonus promised them last February by the Emergency Fleet Corporation has not yet been paid in full, and they say they will wait no longer for this extra money.

They were told by the officials of the company that a large office force was busy working out the new scale, and just as soon as it was completed they would receive their pay. Officials say the scale will be completed tomorrow, and the men will be paid immediately.

The Wage Adjustment Board of the Emergency Fleet Corporation at Washington has wired Acting President Weyant of the Riveters' Union to endeavor to adjust the differences.

NEW RIVETING RECORDS.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 16.—A gang of negro riveters working at the Sparrows Point Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation broke the world's record for driving rivets in a steel steamship today. Charles Knight drove 4,875 three-quarter-inch rivets, 2¾ inches long, in nine hours. The previous high record was 4,442, established in shipyard in Scotland.

The work was witnessed by W. Tinsley and Joseph O'Keefe, Inspectors of the United States Shipping Board, and other men prominent in the shipbuilding industry.

PORTLAND, ORE., May 16.—By driving 4,089 rivets in nine hours, a crew at the shipyard of the Northwest Steel Company, working on the 8,800-ton steel steamer Westview, established today what is claimed as a new American record. The best previous performance in driving rivets was a total of 3,415 in nine hours, made by a crew at the Wyandotte plant of the Detroit Shipbuilding Company. The record claim for today's performance was telegraphed tonight to Chairman Hurley of the United States Shipping Board. The British record recently was reported as 4,422 in nine hours.

DRIVE 165 PILES IN ONE DAY.

Captain Bob Sutton and Crew at Hog Island Make a New Record.

"Bill" Gordon, section Captain at Hog Island, who established a record of having driven 140 piles in nine and a quarter hours, must look to his laurels, for Captain Bob Sutton and Engineer Stone have gone him one better. The Raymond Concrete Pile Company of 140 Cedar Street announced yesterday that in nine and a quarter hours on last Friday Captain Sutton and his crew drove 165 wooden piles, or approximately two miles of piling, continuous driving. The company has a contract for ten shipways of Group No. 2 at Hog Island.

Ever since the pile drivers at Port Newark announced they had laid down sixty piles in a working day the record has been going up. Captain "Bill" Gordon's crew placed seventy-eight in a working day, and later laid down 140 in record time. More than that they challenge any other pile-driving team, and now the crew headed by Bob Sutton has come to the front.

"Captain Sutton's record is the best record so far published," said P. D. Case, Secretary of the Raymond Company. "We shall be glad to hear of any one who beats it. In all fairness to Captain Sutton, we believe the title now goes to him."

MAYOR BRUSH TO FIGHT.

Says Mount Vernon Will Bar Hearst Papers Unless Stopped by Court.

Mayor Edward F. Brush of Mt. Vernon was served yesterday afternoon with a copy of the order of Justice Greenbaum, obtained by The New York American and The New York Evening Journal, restraining the Mayor and city officials from enforcing the ordinance against German newspapers and The American and Journal.

Mayor Brush said the city would answer the injunction, and added, that the ordinance would be enforced unless the injunction was made permanent. "The matter has been referred to the Corporation Counsel," he said, "and we are ready for any kind of a fight. We like a row in Mount Vernon. In this case we feel that we are on the right track, and will see it through to the end."

SUMMIT, N. J., May 16.—Posters notifying the citizens of Summit that newsdealers here have agreed not to sell The New York American and The New York Evening Journal were printed today at the order of Mayor Buford Franklin, and will be posted in conspicuous places. Newsboys sent out by the Hearst Circulation Departments sold the papers on the streets today. They wore American flags around their left arms.

The Union News Company today repudiated the action of its agent, Max Knoller, in agreeing not to sell The American and Journal, and placed the papers on sale at its stands.

LEAGUE FOR VICTORY TO BRING PEACE

Taft Expresses Convention's Opposition to End of War on Other Terms.

OTHERS TAKE SAME STAND

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—Peace, but not without victory, was the slogan sounded by speakers at the opening session here today of the "Win the War for Permanent Peace" convention of the League to Enforce Peace. Ex-President William H. Taft, who presided, emphasized the fact that there could be no peace without victory, and declared that the American people should set their faces sternly toward one end—war.

"Let us have peace," said Mr. Taft, "but let us have war that we may have peace. To sound the trumpet for war to the end this convention was called.

"No one in the wildest flight of his imagination now can think of undefeated Germany yielding either proper indemnity to Belgium or justice to Alsace-Lorraine. Nor will the unconquered German ruling class consent to lift the German paw from prostrate Russia, or give over to decent rule the blood-stained Christian provinces of Turkey. If the wrongs of the oppressed are not righted the war will have been fought in vain."

Many other speakers indorsed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Taft.

Delegates appointed by President Samuel Gompers to represent the American Federation of Labor and Democracy at the convention presented a statement tonight indorsing the plan for a league of nations, but opposing international labor conferences during the war. The statement, it was announced, was drawn up at a conference in Washington at which Mr. Gompers presided.

Government Speaks for Nation.

"In times of war," the statement said, "we oppose conferences with the subjects of enemy countries for any purpose connected with the war or peace. In America, as in all other democracies at war, the Government speaks for the entire nation in all negotiations or conferences with enemy subjects or Governments in relation to foreign affairs. All persons or groups of persons who in open or private collusion with persons in enemy countries attempt to cause to be initiated or to influence peace negotiations or the conduct of the war independently of the Government are guilty of violating the fundamental principles of democratic Government, based upon the consent of the people."

The statement advocated the fixing of maximum prices of the necessities of life, urged the increase of war taxation for those who can stand it, Government regulation of rents, and the establishment by the Government of adequate housing facilities for war workers.

"We are opposed," it said, "to legislation for the suppression of the so-called nonessential industries."

The collapse of civilization in the next war, which he said must surely come if Germany is not conclusively defeated in this war, was pictured by Dr. Franklin H. Giddings of New York, Professor of Sociology and the History of Civilization in Columbia University.

"If the Central European powers shall obtain a substantial advantage by means of the war which they began in 1914," he said, "justice and democracy will have thenceforth for generations no safe abiding place in the world. If the Entente Allies lose the defensive war that they are now waging, a greater war will follow in which civilization will collapse. This is the monstrous peril that the civilized world faces today.

"There is but one way left to save civilization. It runs through battlefields from Amiens to Potsdam. The black flag of Germany must be lowered in unconditional surrender."

A League in the Trenches.

Speaking on the subject, "A Conflict of National Ideals," Oscar S. Straus, ex-Ambassador to Turkey, said in part:

"The allied young manhood in the trenches have already cemented a league of nations. Why need we wait longer to formulate what their blood and sacrifices have created and sanctified? Why not make sure that such a league as unites us now shall be continued and perpetuated for the future? The formation of such a league now during the continuance of the war will give added assurance not only to the allied but to the neutral nations as well as to the people of the world that we seek not the victory of conquest but the victory of justice, which all nations shall share equally, secured by the combined power of the combined nations.

George Wharton Pepper, Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University; Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Lyman Abbott, Richard Heath Dabney, Robert McElroy, Charles B. Elliott, and W. Morgan Shuster were also speakers at the meetings, while telegrams expressing regret at being unable to be present were read from Viscount James Bryce, ex-British Ambassador to this country, and Cardinal Gibbons. The Cardinal wrote in part:

"The doctrine of might aand brute force must give way where the teachings of God find welcome and firm footing. May the convention enunciate more clearly than ever these same divine teachings, and thus aid in bringing about true, lasting, and permanent peace."

Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, the former Mrs. Grover Cleveland, presided at one of the sessions, and in taking the chair said the League to Enforce Peace never had deceived itself into the belief that it was living in a world that was ripe for the realization of its ideal. "This society," she said, "has never lent itself to wild visionaries, the 'peace-at-anyprice' people. On the contrary, it prevented these visionaries from destroying the moral courage of the American people."

$40,000,000 SUPPLY BASE FOR BROOKLYN

It was announced yesterday by the Turner Construction Company, 244 Madison Avenue, that it had obtained the contract for the erection of the supply base for overseas transportation, and that it will build for the War Department a freight and steamship terminal that will cost approximately $40,000,000. The new terminal will improve and enlarge the terminal facilities already in South Brooklyn. The new improvements will occupy the property located between Second Avenue and the pier head and between Fifty-eighth and Sixty-fifth Streets, South Brooklyn.

One feature of the plans is that it is proposed to erect the largest building, the company claims, that was ever built in the world. The plans for this and the other structures were prepared by Cass Gilbert, under the direction of General Guethals, Director of Storage, Transportation, and Purchase. The great building is to have 6,000,000 square feet of fireproof floor space and will be approximately 1,000 feet square. It will take eight or nine stories to allow for this space under one roof, as the plan calls for the lighting of the building by one street and three courts.

9,000-Ton Tank Ship Launched.

QUINCY, Mass., May 16.—The 9,000-ton tanker George W. Barnes was launched at the Fore River Yard of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation today. Mrs. Edward L. Doheny of Los Angeles, wife of the President of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company, which contracted for the steamer, christened it as it started down the ways. The vessel is expected to be put in service by the end of this month. It has been taken over by the United States Shipping Board.

WHITMAN OPENS THIRD TERM FIGHT

Governor Reviews His Record and Tells of His Confidence of a Re-election.

SAYS 'WE HAVE MADE GOOD'

Three Hundred Women Among the Members of the County Committee Who Applaud His Declarations.

Governor Whitman made the opening speech last night in his campaign for re-election to a third term before the members of the New York County Republican Committee at its regular monthly meeting in Bryant Hall, Sixth Avenue near Forty-second Street. The hall was crowded with men and newly enfranchised women, who for the first time were present in large numbers at a meeting of the committee. They cheered and applauded when the Governor made his appearance and again after he had concluded his speech, which began with a patriotic appeal and ended with praise of his administration and a prediction that the achievements at Albany during the last four years would be rewarded by re-election for a third time.

"I am willing to assume full responsibility for all that has been done during the last four years by any of the Republican State officials who were elected with me," said the Governor. "It is all good. We have made good on every pledge that we made to the voters four years ago and two years ago."

The Governor appeared to be in very good humor. He made no reference to the Prohibition issue. He had praise even for the men who are preparing to place hurdles in the way of his third term ambitions. Kvan Attorney-General Merton E. Lewis, who already has announced his intention of entering the Republican primaries for the Gubernatorial nomination, was included in the friendly mention Governor Whitman made regarding the achievements of his elective associates in the State administration. After he had discussed the work of the other elective State officials, he added:

"What I have said regarding them may be said truthfully, too, regarding the Attorney General's office." This point praise failed to evoke any enthusiasm or applause. The Governor made light of the opposition to his re-election.

"There may be opposition," he said. "It would be strange if there were not. Even in the same party all men cannot think alike on every question or every subject. The world would be a dull place if they could. The only place where there is perfect harmony is the graveyard."

Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman, of the Republican County Committee, introduced the Governor as a man who in his years of public service had "strengthened the belief of the people in the belief that the Republican Party is the party that should rule in New York State."

"We are Republicans, all of us," said the Governor after the applause had subsided. "We are Americans, all of us, and at this time when so much is happening in the world which concerns us as Americans we are not going to waste our time or energies on matters of purely political of partisan purport. First, last, and all the time, you and I as citizens are going to devote our time and our energies to the welfare of our country, its Government, its army and navy, and to whole-hearted support of our President. They are our Government, our army, our navy, and our President, and we are not going to let small, mean, partisan political, or individual consideration interfere with the support we owe them in an emergency where issues vital to the future of our land, humanity, and civilization are at stake."

At this point Governor Whitman cheerfully reminded his audience that he had been an active worker in the Republican County organization for twenty-six years and had begun his political life as an election district captain.

"The electorate of this State is not easily stampeded," he continued. "It has been shown again and again that the voters are wise and know what is going on. The general public is not very readily fooled. The people have not forgotten what was going on at Albany during the four years next preceding our coming into office. They have not forgotten how indictments dropped all over the State, as snow flakes in Winter, as a result of highway scandals."

Refers to Record Plurality.

The Governor recalled to his audience that after serving his first term, he was re-elected by a plurality of 169,000, the largest in the history of the State.

"The same things that are being said now were being said then and with just as much bitterness," said the Governor. "But we have been in office at Albany for four years and there has been no scandal so far as I know and no fraud, and that is more than can be said for any Administration that preceded us. Millions have been spent on the State highways during the last fifteen years. For the first time there is no charge that a single dollar has been misspent in the State Highway Department during the last three years and a half."

The Governor reviewed the work of some of the State departments and said they had done well.

"I am waiting with intense curiosity for any one to raise his voice against any man that I have appointed to office," he added. "I have appointed more Judges than any other Governor in the history of the State. I am proud of every one of them. I have appointed more men to public office during the last three years and a half than any other Governor who ever held office in this State. There has been no breath of scandal against any of them."

"The State Engineer is not under indictment, and that could not always be said about the State Engineer," Mr. Whitman said at another point in his speech. "The Barge Canal, now completed, will remain a monument to his administration."

In closing, Governor Whitman said that it was easy to deceive the people for a little while and easy dishonestly to misrepresent the motives of honest men in public office.

Tells of His Confidence.

"It is not easy to deceive for a long time 11,000,000 intelligent American citizens," he added. "Knowing the men in office at Albany, knowing what they have accomplished and the stuff they are made of and knowing the people, I am supremely confident that the people will say that the men who have faithfully served them in these turbulent times shall be suffered to continue to do for the people the things the people want done and in the manner that the people want them done."

Before he appeared at the meeting, Governor Whitman had been entertained at dinner at the Republican Club by Chairman Koenig. All the Republican district leaders, men and women, Mrs. John Francis Yawger, Chairman of the Women's Division of the Republican State Committee; Miss Helen Varick Boswell, head of the Women's Division of the Republican County Committee, and Republican State Chairman George A. Glynn attended the dinner, too, as Mr. Koenig's guests.

Mrs. Yawger and Miss Boswell spoke briefly at the meeting of the committee, urging the women to come out and enroll a week from Saturday. There were fully 300 women in attendance at the meeting, a larger number than any that ever participated in a meeting of the committee.

It was announced that Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, would make an address at the June meeting of the County Committee.

LEWIS TO HIS DEPUTIES.

Wants Them to Feel Free to Support Whitman if They So Desire.

ALBANY, May 16.—Attorney General Merton E. Lewis notified all attachés of his office today that he did not desire his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor to cause them embarrassment. The notice, a copy of which was sent to each employe, follows:

"The fact that I have announced my candidacy for the nomination for Governor should not in any way be regarded by the deputies and employes of this office as embarrassing.

"All deputies and employes should, as the campaign progresses, feel perfectly free to exercise their own judgment as to their choice of candidates. No person in this department need hesitate as between Governor Whitman and me, nor fear loss of position as a result of the exercise of his political freedom in the pending primary campaign."

DUTCHESS FOR WHITMAN.

Republican County Committee Indorses His Candidacy for Re-election

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 16.—By a vote of thirty to seven the Republican County Committee of Dutchess this afternoon adopted resolutions indorsing Governor Whitman and his administration and pledging support to his candidacy for re-election. The resolutions also indorsed other State officials who are seeking re-election.

Sweet Indorsed for Governor.

OSWEGO, N. Y., May 16.—The Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee today passed a resolution pledging support to Thaddeus C. Sweet, Speaker of the Assembly, for the Republican nomination for Governor. Speaker Sweet, who was present, declared he was in the hands of his friends. It is expected he will wage active campaign for the nomination.

Women in Villages Now Enrolling.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 16.—Enrollment blanks for women voters in communities of less than 5,000 inhabitants are now being sent to the various Boards of Elections in counties of the State. This is provided for by the laws of 1918, which provided that women voters living outside of cities might enroll by affidavit any time from May 15 to June 15, but that women living in cities and who desire to enroll must do so on the fourth Saturday of May, between the hours of 8 A. M. and 10 P. M.

ANXIOUS ON ARMY COMPACT.

Viennese Uncertain as to Prussianizing Austrian Army.

ZURICH, May 16.—Publication of the contents of the military agreement arrived at by the German and Austrian Emperors at their conference is awaited with intense anxiety in Vienna, according to a dispatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung from the Austrian capital. The most important question is whether the agreement is so complete that the Austro-Hungarian Army will be permeated with the Prussian spirit as were the armies of the south German States after 1866.

In this event, it is added, the alliance would be deepened and completed in such a manner that the significance of other political and economic questions would recede into the background.

TAMMANY WOMEN TOLD HOW TO ENROLL

AIDS THRIFT STAMP SALE

Mrs. Belmont Attacks Democrats, Charging They Blocked Federal Amendment.

The Tammany Hall Executive Committee, on which women have equal representation with men, held a meeting yesterday at the Fourteenth Street headquarters and discussed at length the question of getting out a full enrollment of women Democrats on Saturday, May 25, the official enrollment day for women. Tammany leaders explained to the women present the importance of getting every Democratic woman in their districts to enroll.

Samples of enrollment ballots were given to the women and it was carefully explained just how to mark the ballots under the star, the Democratic emblem, so that the women would be eligible to vote in the primaries on Sept. 3. Alfred E. Smith of the Committee on War Savings and Thrift Stamps, made a report for the committee in which the suggestion was made and adopted that there be erected in every Democratic clubhouse in New York County a booth for the sale of the stamps.

The booths will be in charge of the men captains, while the women captains will be made a field force to visit every house and manufacturing building in the districts for the purpose of putting before the people the necessity for buying the stamps.

John F. Mulcahy, who was elected a few days ago leader of the Twenty-second Assembly District in place of Thomas F. McAvoy, who resigned, was installed as a member of the committee. The vacancies of women leaders in the Third, Fourth, Tenth, Eleventh, and Twentieth Assembly Districts were not filled as the district committees had not decided upon their selections.

The National Woman's Party, through its Chairman, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont; its Acting Chairman, Mrs. John Winters Brannan, and its Legislative Chairman, Mrs. John Rogers, issued a statement yesterday, attacking the address to women voters of the State, urging them to enroll as members of the Democratic Party, sent out by the Democratic State Committee on Wednesday. It said in part:

It is amazing that Democrats dare ask the support of women, when it is now apparent that the Democratic Party is responsible for the blockade of the federal suffrage amendment in the United States Senate. Last Friday Senator Jones, a Democrat, who is in charge of the amendment, was forced to confess that if the measure was brought before the Senate, Democratic opposition would defeat it.

The Republican Party, as its leaders stated on the floor of the Senate, is ready for a vote at any time, with two-thirds of the Republican membership pledged to support it. The votes lacking for its passage are Democratic votes. Women will never support a party so long as it refuses to apply to the women of the United States the liberty which half the world is struggling to preserve.

The Republican women of the Tenth Assembly District were instructed yesterday at their headquarters, 8 West Twenty-eighth Street, by Mrs. John Francis Yawger, State Chairman of the Women's Republican Party of New York, how to enroll. Mrs. Yawger said that following her tour throughout the State instructing women how to enroll there had been almost 100 per cent. increase added to the interest which was manifested by women voters prior to her tour.

Underwriters Elect Officers.

At the thirty-sixth annual meeting of the National Board of Marine Underwriters at the board rooms on Wednesday reports submitted by the various committees, the Treasurer and Acting Secretary outlined the work accomplished during the year were accepted with much satisfaction by the members.

The officers elected were William H. McGee, President; H. K. Fowler, Vice President; Louis F. Burke, Treasurer, and Harry Bird, Secretary.

FIND JACOBUS BABY IN BRIDGEPORT JITNEY

Pearl Hayner, Held as Kidnapper, Says Mother Loaned Her the Child.

Shirley, the 5 months old daughter of Mr. and and Mrs. Max J. Jacobus of 227 West 121st Street, who was kidnapped on May 3, was restored to her parents last night, and Pearl Hayner, or Pearl Ferguson, which is her real name, is under arrest in Bridgeport, Conn. The arrest was made yesterday afternoon after weeks of patient work by Detective Conklin of the Fourth Brance Detective Bureau, who found the woman giving the baby an automobile ride. The baby wore a new dress and showed evidence, the detective said, of having been well cared for. The prisoner denied the kidnapping, and said that the baby had been loaned to her by Mrs. Jacobus.

Pearl Hayner, as Mrs. Jacobus knew her, lived next door to the Jacobus family. In March she volunteered to take care of the Jacobus children if she were given a home. This agreement was entered into, and the woman roomed with the family for a week. Then she left. She returned on May 3 and volunteered to take care of the children while Mrs. Jacobus went shopping. Shortly after the latter left the house the woman packed up the baby's clothing in a suitcase and departed. That was the last seen of her until yesterday.

On her last visit to Mrs. Jacobus the Hayner woman said she had married a James Bloise. Through the Bureau of Criminal Record the detectives found Bloise on Harts Island, where he was serving a short term for having narcotics in his possession. He denied marrying the woman, but said he knew her and he told the detectives who were her friends. Captain McKenna found that the alleged kidnapper's name was Pearl Ferguson and that she was the daughter of Ward Ferguson, a former Danbury hatter, now a resident of Lawrence, Mass. The girl, the police found, had been a checker in the College Inn and other restaurants; some in Coney Island. A friend was found who had heard her say that she was dissatisfied because New York was "shut up" and she was going to Bridgeport, where it was "wide open."

Detective Conklin went to Bridgeport yesterday and came across the woman and baby in a jitney. The woman admitted her identity at once and agreed to accompany the detective to the police station. She will be brought to New York today.

SUES DR. PETROVITCH.

Wife of Serbian Professor and Soldier Says He Was Cruel to Her.

Dr. Wolslav M. Petrovitch, who was a college professor in Serbia when the war began and is now head of the division of Slavonic languages at the New York Public Library and author of a number of books, has been sued for a separation by Mrs. Vera D. Petrovitch, a native of North Dakota, whom he married on Aug. 9 last at the Fort Washington Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Petrovitch asked Justice Greenbaum for alimony pending the trial, and in her petition said that her husband began to treat her cruelly a month after their marriage, and that their life together has been unhappy ever since because of her husband's unjustifiable jealousy. They lived at the Nevada apartments, and at 24 and 82 West Eighty-second Street. The plaintiff submitted to the court fervent love letters written to her by her husband, in one of which he said:

"Our marriage was based on beauty and sentiment. It was a wonderful dream of which never shall I be bereft; short but intense. Few intense things last long."

Dr. Petrovitch said that his means are small, because his estates in Serbia have been confiscated. He fought in one of the most bloody battles of the war, he said, and has lost thirty-two relatives."

URGES REVENUE BILL IN LETTER TO WILSON

Hull's Support of McAdoo Plan Disturbing to Advocates of Early Adjournment.

LETTER NOT MADE PUBLIC

President May Use It Later to Influence Congress — Kitchin's Opposition Not Modified.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee, recognized as an authority on taxation, today in a letter to President Wilson supported the argument advanced by Secretary McAdoo for an additional tax levy at this session of Congress. Thus Mr. Hull comes into conflict with the majority members of the Ways and Means Committee, including Chairman Kitchin.

His action has caused uneasiness among members who have been looking forward to an adjournment in July. The fact that the news of the receipt of the letter was given out at the White House caused the conclusion among many that President Wilson favors another revenue bill. Senators who have acted as Administration mouthpieces have been saying so, and the development of today is taken by many to mean that President Wilson sought the letter from Mr. Hull and in due time will make use of it in recommending to Congress a revenue measure before adjournment.

Mr. Hull's letter, on reaching the White House, was sent immediately to President Wilson. It will probably be given to the press later in the week if President Wilson agrees with the arguments advanced. Mr. Hull declined to make known its contents, saying its publication rested with the President.

It is understood, however, Mr. Hull advocated an additional inheritance tax, a heavy tax on luxuries, and a readjustment of the rates on incomes. He does not favor lowering the exemptions, which are $1,000 and $2,000, respectively, for single and married persons. He is in agreement with Representative Kitchin that the tax on excess profits should be increased enormously.

Mr. Hull's arguments, as they have been impressed upon his associates, are that there is need of more revenue without delay, and that if there is a postponement until the short session Congress will force through an ill-digested bill or pass none at all. With the Democratic majority in the Senate slight, there would be opportunity for a filibuster at the short session. Many Democrats in the Senate oppose further direct taxes for the prosecution of the war. If the revenue bill should be defeated, the Government would be forced to obtain additional revenue entirely by bond issues.

Postmaster General Burleson has informed members of the House that he will exert his influence with President Wilson to prevent revenue legislation before the November election.

Representative Kitchin said today that the attitude of Representative Hull had in no way affected him. He reiterated his opinion that there was no necessity for more revenue before early next year and said a better bill could be written after the Government had found just what revenues were needed.

When he meets Secretary McAdoo next week to discuss finances, Mr. Kitchin will present figures intended to show that there will be more than sufficient money to vigorously prosecute war activities until next March.

The total appropriations for the next fiscal year, Mr. Kitchin said today, would reach about $20,200,000,000, divided as follows:

Army	$11,700,000,000
Navy	1,500,000,000
Fortifications	6,000,000,000
Shipping	3,000,000,000
Loans	6,000,000,000
Ordinary	1,000,000,000

In the opinion of Mr. Kitchin, not more than $18,000,000,000 can be expended by the Government out of the fiscal appropriation for next year. It is estimated by him that more than $4,000,000,000 will represent the income from the present Revenue bill. In addition, he points out, the Government has obtained $8,000,000,000 in loans and has authorization to issue certificates of indebtedness for $7,000,000,000. Returns from miscellaneous sources, he said, would amount to $700,000,000. The Government, by March next, he continued, would have a total estimated income of about $18,000,000,000, more than would be required for its use up to March, by which time other revenue legislation could be put into operation.

CITY BREVITIES.

Columbia University adds another war course to its program today, when the department of extension teaching starts a course in military camouflage. The instruction will be open to "artists and mature students in various branches, painters, sculptors, architects, wood and metal workers, modelers, carvers, photographers, and other persons of allied qualifications."

The Lotos Club has issued in volume form the addresses given at the clubhouse at a dinner given March 27 in honor of the British Ambassador, the Earl of Reading. The collection bears the title "Across the Flood," and includes, in addition to the speeches of the evening by Frank R. Lawrence, President of the club; the Earl of Reading, Governor Charles S. Whitman, Charles S. Hughes, and Colonel George Harvey, a special message sent by cable by the British Premier Lloyd George, to the American people, which was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES, a poem by Lord Tennyson, the late poet laureate, and an extract from Schiller's "Invincible Armada" translated by the first Lord Lytton.

The New York City Federation of Women's Civil Service Organizations will hold its first convention in the Municipal Building, Room 626, on Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The speakers will include Police Commissioner Enright, Commissioner Hamilton of the Correction Department, James E. MacBride of the Civil Service Commission, Dr. Frederick Robinson, President of City College; Mrs. Yawger, President of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the Woman's Suffrage Party of New York State.

Representative woolen rag graders from all over the United States met yesterday at the Hotel Astor and formed for the duration of the war an Organization to be known as the Wool Stock Graders' Association, which has as its object co-operation with the Government's war agencies.

INDICTED AS LOAN THIEF.

McClair Alleged to Have Robber Young Woman Agent.

Herbery L. McClair was indicted yesterday, charged with the theft of $400 from the Liberty Loan booth at Rector's on April 9. McClair, it is alleged, impersonated Charles Gault, a student at Columbia University, stole his draft registration card and used it to have himself enrolled as a loan worker.

Charles H. Carr of A. E. Leach & Co., in charge of an uptown loan precinct, enrolled him as a volunteer canvasser under Gault's name. Then McClair, it is alleged, went to the branch of the Pacific Bank at Seventh Avenue and Forty-ninth Street and got permission to set up a Liberty Loan booth in the lobby.

Miss Edith S. Beaver-Webb of 31 Park Avenue had charge of the booth at Rector's. McClair, it is charged, introduced himself as the manager of the Pacific Bank booth, and when Miss Webb closed the booth at midnight asked her what she intended to do with the subscriptions and cash received. Miss Webb said she would wait until the Federal Reserve Bank collector came or leave the money, $400, with the restaurant cashier.

That is not a safe method for your protection," McClair is alleged to have told her. "You had better look it up in a vault of the Pacific Bank," offering to take charge of the money. McClair fled to Maine with the funds, where he was arrested on a charge of burglary made by the New Haven police.

Exhibit Anti-Aircraft Gun.

Nearly 800 members of the New York Zoological Society participated in the annual garden fête yesterday at Bronx Park. An anti-aircraft gun, brought from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, was exhibited to the guests. The gun is of the three-inch type, with a range of three miles.

—the accurately-fitted, smooth-closing doors
—the simple, convenient device for holding doors ajar
—the good hardware throughout —the combination robe-and-hand rail
—the "two-range" carburetor—a wonderful saver of gasoline and help to power and speed —the carefully worked-out, comfortable seat positions
—the French-plaited upholstery, soft and deep
—the real foot-rest in the tonneau
—the mahogany glove-box in the back of the front seat
—the quality of the accessories
—the neat, protected speedometer-drive
—the oil-cups instead of grease-cups throughout —the accessibility of all parts
—the beautiful color-options—Studebaker Blue or Maroon

It is little details like these that prove a car, and show the sincerity of its makers.

Are Your Feet Comfortable?

THERE are Walk-Over shoes to relieve and correct foot troubles. You may have a weak arch which can be relieved by a Walk-Over Corrective Shoe made with a stiff shank. If the trouble is not acute a shoe with a flexible shank would be better. No one type of shoe can possibly correct all the many forms of foot and arch abnormality.

Walk-Over store salesmen are especially trained to diagnose conditions and to prescribe the proper shoe.

By the way, when a pair of Walk-Over Corrective Shoes have relieved your foot troubles you need not wear them all the time. But they are so comfortable, yet modish, that you may want to do so.

Walk-Over Shoes are manufactured at Campello, Brockton, Mass., are sold in all the important towns and cities of the world, and the world over bear the same trade-mark.

PLAN FOR CAMPAIGN TO AID RED CROSS

Committees Will Endeavor to Get 500,000 Subscribers, Breed Tells Luncheon Guests.

TO CANVASS ALL BOROUGHS

Davison in Unannounced Speech Says, "We Are at War for Our Lives."

The Merchants' Association gave a luncheon at the Astor Hotel yesterday at which plans were discussed for the coming campaign in New York to raise the city's $25,000,000 quota of the $100,000,000 Red Cross War Fund, and at the same time the 500 guests heard from Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross, and others of the work the American Red Cross is doing on a dozen battlefields.

Mr. Davison was an unexpected guest, remaining only a few minutes. He explained that he was on his way to his home and had not yet had time to see his family since his return from Europe. In a speech which caused much enthusiasm Mr. Davison said:

"I have just come back from the war zone, and I only want to tell you one or two things. In the first place, we are at war for our lives. The situation is serious, but we are going to win this war.

"I was delighted to find that every one of our commissions in Europe is inspired with the thought that it is not the Red Cross, it is the American people, and that every act of the Red Cross is done in the name of the American people. You may have been told something of the work in France. There may be language in which to express the work of the American people there, but I certainly have not the language to express the valor and the courage and the wonderful conduct of the French people and the French soldiers. Well, we have some boys over there, and you will hear more of them and more from them.

"In France, the reception which is given to the American people is not only touching, but it shows a desire on their part to reach their hands to us as we are endeavoring to reach our hands to them, and the same may be said of Italy.

"I have never been more surprised than I was when I had covered the country of Italy and found the appreciation of the service, of the help, and of the comfort which had been given to the Italian people by the American people. I learned something about Italy, and I want to cite one little instance from which you will get the lesson that I myself had.

"When I arrived in Italy, it was just after the most serious part of the offensive. It was eight days after the beginning of the offensive, or, on the 29th of March. We were bound that the American Red Cross, through its commission in Italy, should leave nothing undone which would immediately give greater courage to the Italian people and to the Italian forces. In order that nothing should be left undone, we had a conference in my room at the hotel. At that conference there were three very distinguished, important Italian men—important in the affairs of Italy. We discussed the situation, and then I asked Colonel Perkins, the head of our commission, if he would step outside, that I wanted to have a word with him, and I said to him: 'What would you think of our doing something now in rather a large way for the Italian Red Cross?'

"'Well,' he said, 'I am not quite sure.' I said, 'What would you think of my submitting that to the Italians?' He said, 'I should think very well of it.'

"I then went into the room and called Major Byrne aside, and I put the question to him, and he replied as did Colonel Perkins. I then submitted the proposition to the three Italians. I said, "The American people wish nothing left undone which will immediately cause greater spirit in your people and to your forces. We would like to give you a substantial amount of money to be used through your Italian Red Cross.

"They said it was a new thought, and they should like to consider it; so they withdrew. In a few moments they came back and said:

"We cannot express to you our appreciation of your offer, but we really believe that it is not wise, now, for us to accept that money from you, because we do not quite see how that, of itself, would serve the purpose you are seeking to attain.

"I want to say that throughout Italy we found that same attitude," Mr. Davison continued. "We are not giving our money to people standing with their hands outreached to get it. We are only working in close co-operation and harmony with those people that appreciate it as we do ourselves."

Emergency Force of the War.

"You know," he said, "the Red Cross is officially recognized by both army and navy. You know that the Red Cross is really a doctor, a nurse, a comforter and friend of those who have gone to the other side. It is the great emergency force in this war, and it deserves your support on that ground, if for no other. One year ago, the American people were asked to raise $100,000,000, but this time it will not be on faith. It will be upon a record of achievement unparalleled in history.

"The War council has fixed the quota for the City of New York at $25,000,000. This is one-quarter of the entire fund. The Liberty Loan quota for this district was one-third of the entire amount. I have heard people say that that was too large an amount in proportion to our population; and they are correct in that. I have heard them say that it was too large an amount in proportion to our wealth; I am uncertain about that. But I have not heard any man say that it was too large in proportion to the expression of the patriotism and the determination of New York to stand behind its men who are over there."

Mr. Breed said that committees had been selected which would see to it that every man, woman, and child in the five boroughs of New York was informed of the needs of the Red Cross. He said that in the last campaign there were 21,000 subscribers to the war fund, but he expected this time to see 500,000 names on the list.

Hugues Leroux, former editor of Le Matin and at the present in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in France, followed Mr. Breed. He spoke as a Frenchman conveying to America France's message of gratitude for the Red Cross and respect for the Red Cross Workers in Europe.

"You have come to help us," said M. Leroux after describing the fraternal feeling which has been growing along the first line trenches between the poilu and the Yankee. "I must use the word help, although you never use it. You are speaking of shoulder to shoulder and heart to heart, but never use the word help. But we use it. I don't think I need to tell you that our soldiers are not at all broken up. You know they are not. Behind the lines there are fathers and mothers and wives and children, a little exhausted, all in mourning, who felt that we were alone.

"There were 40,000,000 inhabitants in France before the war. A million and a half were killed, men from 20 to 45. The poilus just now fighting are boys from 20 to 23, or men from 35 to 40.

Says France Will Not Forget.

"It was time to come and to help, and you did. And we shall never, never forget that the great American Red Cross came as the Spring comes before the Summer. That we shall never forget."

M. Leroux closed with a tribute to the Red Cross nurses.

"What are you doing for our soldiers?" he said. "Let me tell you. I recently happened to be at Apernaix, one of the junctions of our railroads, where your Red Cross nurses are awaiting our soldiers when they come from the front. When they are coming home, to go to the front again, you know they are tired and want to be comforted; and there are the Red Cross nurses waiting in the snow, in the rain, and in the darkness for them. These dear Red Cross American women are there helping them."

The last speaker was Mrs. August Belmont, who was a special Commissioner for the Red Cross in Europe. Mrs. Belmont told from personal observation of the courage and fortitude of the fighting men of England, France, and America. She emphasized the needs of having a well-equipped Red Cross organization at the front. She told also of the wonderful feeling of comradeship growing between America and France and England through common suffering and common heroism.

Rabbis Appeal for the Fund.

Following the conference of Rabbis and Jewish editors held in the Educational Alliance last Monday, a letter was issued by the Rabbinical Association yesterday urging the Jews of America to subscribe generously to the Red Cross fund. Among those who signed the letter were B. Drachman, President of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America; H. Pereira Mendes, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America; Rabbi H. S. Margolies, Rabbi Ph. Klein, Rabbi S. E. Jaffe, Rabbi J. Rosenberg, Rabbi J. Segal, Rabbi L. Silver, Rabbi M. L. Preil, Rabbi B. Revel, Rabbi J. Ranovitz, and Rabbi J. Jackson.

More than 100 New York hotels announced yesterday through the Hotel Men's Association that they would give 10 per cent. of one day's receipts to the fund.

Twelve thousand pamphlets were sent yesterday to corporations in New York City asking for subscriptions to the Red Cross Fund. The pamphlet contains copies of the statutes enacted by the Legislatures of New York and New Jersey empowering corporations to make direct contributions to the Red Cross.

Bernard K. Marcus, Vice President of the Bank of the United States, Chairman of the East Side Red Cross Division, held a conference yesterday with 300 business men of the east side. Mr. Marcus asked for a store-to-store canvass.

Police Commissioner Enright said yesterday that the police would aid in the campaign for the Red Cross Fund. Patrolmen, he said, would be asked to give a certain sum each month for a whole year. It was hoped, the Commissioner said, that the Police Department would raise at least $50,000.

There will be a lawn fête today on the reservation at Fort Hamilton for the benefit of the Red Cross. There will be a bayonet drill and an exhibition drill by the Coast Artillery.

A dinner to H. P. Davison will be given tonight in the Hotel Astor to celebrate Mr. Davison's return from the war front. Five hundred invitations have been sent to the Presidents and other chief executives of the leading corporations of this part of the country.

President to Come Here Today.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—President Wilson will go to New York tomorrow, to remain until Saturday night, when he is to open the war relief fund campaign of the American Red Cross by addressing a mass meeting in the Metropolitan Opera House.

Chairman of War Council Says Organization's Activities Now Extend from Scotland to Sicily.

RETURNS SURE OF VICTORY

Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross, returned yesterday after spending nearly three months abroad in inspecting in allied countries the work of the Red Cross. He saw the troops of the Allies at their best when they were pouring to the front to resist the German drive, and he saw evidences of the Hun at his worst, bombing the civilian population of towns and villages, and killing women and children in Paris with his long-range gun. Mr. Davison returned very optimistic over the outlook for the Allies.

"Italy has come back," he said in reply to a questioner.

"This war is still in a very serious stage, and the demands upon our people for sacrifice and support of it are greater than ever before," Mr. Davison said. "There is no occasion for anything but confidence, but that confidence must be based upon determined effort and willingness on the part of every man and woman to do his or her part. Our boys, as they arrive in France, are showing the most wonderful spirit. They go into action with dash and bravery which is the talk of all Europe. But the price that will have to be paid for victory will be very heavy, and it will be some time before our boys can become as effective as they must be to help England, France, Italy, and Belgium with the victory that must be won.

"The outstanding feature of German method at the present time is the effort to terrorize the women, children, and old men at home. While the German troops are making their drive on the front, airplanes nearly every night are bombing towns behind the lines with the deliberate and declared purpose of terrorizing civilians. The purpose of the fight behind the lines is to break down the morale of the civilian population to such a point that they will importune their Government for peace.

"I was in Paris on many of the days on which the long-range gun was bombarding the city. That gun does comparatively little damage and is wholly intended to get on the nerves of the people at home.

Red Cross Upholds Morale.

"One of the great missions of the Red Cross has been to attempt to uphold the morale of the people at home. We have workers all over Italy and France carrying a message of comfort and cheer, helping especially to care for the refugees driven away from their homes, to care for the children and to provide for the sick and needy, particularly among the families of soldiers.

"In France, we are carrying on direct work in 121 cities and towns, 38 out of the total of 82 departments or counties of the republic being covered by American Red Cross activities. In Italy, we conduct direct activities in 45 cities and towns and we extend relief in 218 other places. Among Belgian refugees in France our work is on a similar scale.

"The gratitude the people feel for what the American people are doing through the Red Cross is beyond description.

"The way these people of our allies hold out their hands and look to America as the land of hope and promise, and as the great fact that makes certain that German might shall not prevail, is most stirring. America is today a rainbow toward which Western Europe, from the north of Scotland to the south of Italy, looks as the sign of comfort, hope, and victory.

"We have 3,000 American workers throughout the countries of our allies and these workers are succeeding to an extent that would be difficult to describe, not alone in carrying relief to these peoples, who are suffering and enduring for us as well as for themselves, but also in conveying to them a consciousness of the finest side of American life. It is all going to constitute, when the war is over, the strongest possible tie to hold the nations together in an enduring peace.

Conferred with Pershing.

"I went through the American Army zone, especially to see in what way the Red Cross could reinforce the work of our own army in caring for our own troops. I had conferences with General Pershing, with his chief medical officers, as well as many civilian officers, and men in the army. They told me that the work of our Red Cross was being conducted with wonderful efficiency and fidelity to what the American people would want to have done.

"Right here I want to say that throughout Europe I was impressed with the value and effectiveness of the voluntary work the women of America are doing in their Red Cross workrooms.

"We are serving both the French and American soldiers right up behind the lines with rolling canteens, and also providing rest stations and canteens at railroad stations. The soldiers tell us that the food and hot drinks that we bring them are of enormous comfort, but, above all else, is the satisfaction they have of feeling that some one is there who is not compelled to be there to give them a helping hand—some one representing home.

"Our Home Communication Service has just been fully organized. It searches for American soldiers in all the hospitals, writes letters for them, and to any man, sick or well, offers home help in whatever form it may be needed.

"The American Red Cross is itself operating thirteen hospitals in France, two in Italy, and five in England. We are also operating a large number of dispensaries in France, England, and among the Belgians.

"On the eve of our War Fund Drive next week, I would like to say that I have no question whatever that the American people will contribute the money which is necessary to carry on the work of the American Red Cross."

They cost more why?

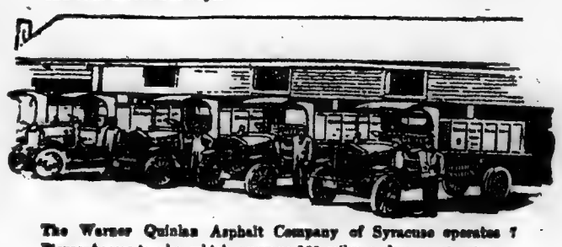
PIERCE-ARROW trucks cost more than other trucks. They cost more because they cost more to build. They cost more to build because they are built to deliver a greater service—to do more work, to do it in less time, with less idle time, with fewer interruptions, and over a longer period of years than any other truck. That is why they are higher priced.

Price is fixed strictly on cost plus a reasonable profit. A less cost or a smaller profit would jeopardize both the character and continuance of the service. To cheapen construction in any element would endanger the delivery of the service which has made the preeminent reputation of the

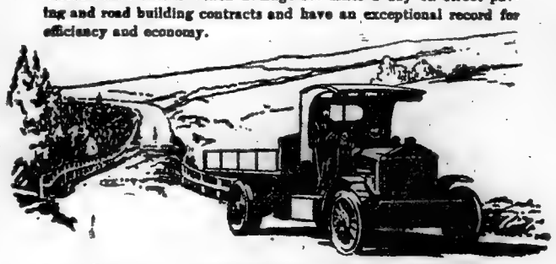
PIERCE-ARROW
Motor Trucks

This reputation is not built on what we say of the trucks. We say little. It is built on what owners say of them. They say much and say it enthusiastically. The more they have tested Pierce-Arrows in comparison with other trucks, the more enthusiastic they are. Most significant tests are made by contractors. Examine their records:

The Degnon Contracting Company used 6 Pierce-Arrow trucks so successfully hauling heavy loads of rock in the subway excavations in lower New York in spite of congested traffic, that it bought three additional Pierce-Arrows for similar work on the Seventh Avenue and 59th Street Subways.



The Warner Quinlan Asphalt Company of Syracuse operates 7 Pierce-Arrow trucks which average 100 miles a day on street paving and road building contracts and have an exceptional record for efficiency and economy.



Seven Pierce-Arrow trucks hauled for the George H. Pride Company 10,000 tons of iron ore over the roughest roads in the Adirondack Mountains, to the nearest railroad station after horses and traction engines had failed completely. The trucks made the 48 mile round trip in 5¼ hours. Running day and night, each truck averaged 180 miles a day.

We could multiply instances like these, but we prefer to tell you what Pierce-Arrows have done in situations like yours, if you will ask us.

ONE LONE TALLY IS YANKEES' TOTAL, BUT IT PROVES SUFFICIENT TO BEAT BROWNS

ONE TALLY ENOUGH TO WIN FOR YANKS

Pipp's Ire, Aroused for the First Time on Record, Causes His Exile to Clubhouse.

BAKER'S TIMELY HIT WINS

Third Baseman of Huggins's Tribe Brings Gilhooley Home with Run That Beats Browns.

Until yesterday, the meekest lamb in baseball was Walter Pipp, the long, silent custodian of first base for the Yankees. He is possessed of as much patience as Job, but the serenity of his nature was broken yesterday when Umpire Dick Nallin called him out on strikes at the Polo Grounds. It was in the fifth inning, and there were two runners aboard the bases when Pipp came to the bat.

Pipp half waved his bat at a ball which Nallin called the third strike, and Pipp turned loose all the opinions he has been storing up in his mind about umpires for years. Manager Huggins backed up Pipp in his protest, and the first baseman was exiled to the club house for the first time since he has been in the major leagues. Huggins was also invited to stick to the bench. The Yanks won the game anyway by a score of 1 to 0.

Herb Thormahlen gave further proof that he is a pitcher of parts. He held the Browns to four hits and was remarkably effective when he should have been. Bert Gallia gave the Yanks a lot of trouble, except in one inning, the fifth, when Huggins's lads managed to shove over a run.

Gilhooley started out in the fifth by bouncing a sizzling hit of Jimmy Austin's glove at third. Peck sent the runner along to second with a sacrifice, and Frank Baker cracked a single to centre which sent Gilhooley over the plate with the one precious run which was so badly needed to break up the pitchers' battle between Thormahlen and Gallia.

Pratt got a pass, and he and Baker worked a double steal, and with these players perched patiently on third and second, Pipp came up to the bat. Pipp was overanxious to get a hit to score the two impending runs, and he was highly incensed when Umpire Nallin called him out on strikes. It was such an unusual thing for Pipp to kick at a decision that he immediately won the support of the crowd, and Pipp gave the umpire a large piece of his mind after throwing his bat high in the air. Huggins tried to quiet Pipp, for when there is any opinion to be handed to the umpire, Huggins retains that privilege for himself. That is one of the reasons why they have baseball managers. Nallin sent Pipp home to his dinner and told Huggins to remain silent at some inconspicuous spot in the shadows of the bench.

There was still a chance for the Yankees to get the two runs which Pipp tried so hard to drive in, for Ping Bodie was the next batter up. Ping, however, died on a pop fly to Hendryx in left field. The Yanks had Gallia worried again in the next inning, when, with two out, Thormahlen walked, and went to third on Gilhooley's two-base smash to right. Peck was hit by a lurid pitch and filled the bases.

With Baker at bat, the crowd jumped up and beseeched the home-run slugger to plant the ball into the grand stand, but no such thing happened. Baker lifted a high fly to Johnny Tobin in centre field. Zinn Beck played first after Pipp had been ejected, and when Pratt singled in the seventh, Beck sacrificed him to second. Bodie got a pass, and there was an excellent chance for Marsans to clean up. The Cuban spilled the beans by hitting into a double play.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—After making a muff that allowed Cleveland to tie the score in the ninth, Clarence Walker drove in the winning run in the latter half of the inning, and Philadelphia emerged victorious, 6 to 5, after two hours and twenty-three minutes of wild baseball. Fourteen errors were marked up.

The Athletics obtained a three-run lead on a fumble by Wambsgans, three stolen bases, and three wild throws by Catcher Peters. After his fourth wild throw Peters was spiked by Shannon and had to retire. First Baseman Williams went behind the bat and Wood played first.

WHITE SOX TAKE REVENGE.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Chicago and Washington played their second consecutive extra-inning game today, the White Sox winning in the eleventh, 4 to 2. Benz was knocked out of the box in the first inning, but Washington was unable to bunch hits on Danforth, who succeeded him. Chicago again fielded perfectly, making twenty-nine innings played here without an error.

TONEY TERRORIZES M'GRAW'S BATSMEN

Giants Unable to Score Against Matty's Twirler, While Reds Get Three Runs.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 16.—Fred Toney, always a hard man for the Giants to beat, again asserted his superiority over McGraw's men today, blanking the league leaders 3 to 0. The right-hander limited the Giants' allowance of hits to seven, and these were judiciously distributed over the nine innings.

Jeff Tesreau, on the other hand, was not very effective and suffered his first defeat of the season. Jeff gave way to a pinch hitter in the seventh and Al Demaree finished the game.

Groh, on his initial appearance at the plate, singled to centre. He was forced by Lee Magee, who stole second, only to be picked off that bag a moment later on Tesreau's snap throw to Fletcher. Roush tripled over Burns's head. McCarty then let one of Jeff's offerings get by him and Roush raced home. Tesreau kept the Reds from scoring again until the sixth, but in that frame they got to him for two runs, which, as it developed, were superfluous.

Lee Magee led off with a double to left and took third on a passed ball. Roush beat out a slow roller in front of the plate, Lee Magee being held at third, and then stole second. Sherwood Magee came through with a timely drive, a triple to right, that scored Lee Magee and Roush. Sherwood was left stranded at the far corner, as Griffith was tossed out by Tesreau, Neale died on a short drive to Burns and Blackburne flied to Kauff.

Toney was the Giants' master at every stage of the game except for a few moments in the seventh inning, when he lost his control temporarily. The New Yorkers tried hard to take advantage of the opening offered by the big fellow's wildness, but he shut down on them in time to prevent any scoring.

After Zimmerman and Fletcher had been retired in that inning, Holke beat out an infield hit and McCarty walked. Manager McGraw hastily withdrew Rodriguez from the batting order and sent Wilhoit up to bat for the little Cuban. Wilhoit waited Toney out and drew a pass, and Thorpe was ordered to hit for Tesreau. At this point Toney regained his effectiveness and fanned the big Indian.

Cubs Rally Too Late and Moran's Men Win Second Game, 6 to 5.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Philadelphia hit Chicago's pitchers opportunely today and made it two straight, winning 6 to 5. Mayer weakened in the ninth when Chicago started its belated rally and retired in favor of Oeschger, with the tying run on second base. The locals outhit the visitors, but snappy fielding behind Mayer kept down the score.

LARRY DOYLE IMPROVING.

The condition of Larry Doyle, second baseman of the Giants, was reported at the New York Post-Graduate Hospital last night to be very much improved. Doyle was operated upon Tuesday for intestinal trouble, but he is confident that he will be able to resume playing with the club when it returns to the Polo Grounds after the Western trip on June 1.

Doyle's absence has noticeably weakened the batting strength of McGraw's club, for up to the time he was forced to leave the team, after the Boston series, he was hitting the ball at a .430 gait.

SANDERS JOLTS SUPERBAS.

Young Pirate Pitcher Saves Day for Buccaneers, Who Win, 4 to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., May 16.—The Pittsburgh Pirates surprised the Brooklyn Superbas today just when it looked like another victory for Manager Robby's boys, winning by 4 to 3. The work of the young Pirate pitcher, Roy Sanders, secured from Kansas City this Spring, was too much for the visitors after he had relieved Elmer Jacobs.

The latter had sent the Brooklyns back to the bench in order in the first four innings, but he slipped a cog, and after two runs were over on four hits and a walk and the bases full, Sanders was rushed to the scene. The first man to face him was O'Mara, who sent out a sacrifice fly to Carey, and Krueger scored the third run. Sanders then filled the bags again by walking Zack Wheat, but he fanned Hi Myers and the side was retired.

In the very next inning Sanders got into the limelight and incidentally won the game for his side. The Pirates had bunched three hits in the fourth inning, but they got only one run and went down with three men on, but in the sixth they got four more hits, which netted three runs, enough to win.

Bigbee took King's place at bat and coaxed a walk, stayed on first while McKechnie fouled out, but reached second on Schmidt's safe blow, and both these runners crossed the plate on a mighty swipe for three bases by Sanders, tying the score.

Caton lined the ball at Coombs, who threw the runner out at first, holding Sanders at third, but Mollwitz bounced the ball off Johnston's shins for two bags, which gave Sanders a chance to score what was eventually the winning run.

The Pirates' first run was a cheap one, as Wheat lost Cutshaw's high fly in the sun, and the former Robin reached third, scoring on McKechnie's single past short. The visitors got a man to third in the eighth inning with only one out, but Hickman struck out and the next man was easy.

CREWS REACH ANNAPOLIS.

Columbia 'Varsity Boat's Outriggers Smashed During Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 16.—The 'Varsity crew of Columbia and the Syracuse freshmen arrived in Annapolis this afternoon for the regatta of the American Rowing Association, which takes place here Saturday and the 'Varsity and freshman crews of the University of Pennsylvania are expected late tonight.

Only the Syracusans were able to get on the water, as the outriggers of Columbia's boat were smashed on the trip down and had to be fixed in the academy shops. There are prospects of fine conditions and good races. Pennsylvania, Columbia, and the Naval Academy will contest in the main event and Pennsylvania, Syracuse, and the Naval Academy in the freshman race.

REACH FINAL ROUND IN HARLEM TENNIS

Tilden and Bassford Gain Brackets by Victories Over Richards and Hathaway.

William T. Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia and Henry Bassford reached the final round of the Harlem Lawn Tennis Club's open tournament as a result of yesterday's play. Tilden won his way through to the advanced position by defeating two opponents during the course of the afternoon. In the fourth round he was pressed to rather a lively match by A. Von Bernuth of Columbia, the score being 6—4, 6—4. In the semi-final round the Philadelphia expert raced through to an easy victory over the national boys' champion, Vincent Richards, with the score 6—1, 6—3. Bassford gained his final-round bracket by vanquishing the formidable one-armed expert, Harrison R. Hathaway, whose play in earlier rounds was the sensational feature of the tournament. Three sets were necessary, Bassford winning at 3—6, 6—2, 6—1.

The doubles tournament, which started on Wednesday, showed many defaults yesterday. Of a number of matches that were scheduled, only two were actually contested. In both of these the team of Tilden and Cecil Donaldson proved victorious. In the first round the victims were L. Bry and B. Landau, the score against them being 6—2, 6—3. In the next round Tilden and Donaldson defeated the Georgetown team of H. B. and J. S. O'Boyle at 6—3, 6—1.

Chief interest centred in the singles events. It had been generally agreed after the draw was made that Tilden, one of the most capable players of the game, would experience little difficulty in making his way through to the final round in the upper half of the event. Von Bernuth, in the fourth round, however, gave Tilden a hard battle, but in the semi-final, when opposing Richards, Tilden romped along without ever being in danger. Richards was bothered greatly by Tilden's severe service, although he handled the second twist service rather well. His game, however, was not nearly strong enough to give him a chance against Tilden's severe play from the forecourt.

The one-armed player Hathaway for a little time seemed about to establish himself in a final-round position. In the first set he completely outplayed Bassford, his volleying and smashing forcing the latter to defensive tactics. In the second and third sets he seemed to tire, and, with his play lacking much of its usual severity, Bassford forced his way through to victory. Toward the close Hathaway was being passed with disconcerting regularity as he endeavored to reach the net.

The summaries:

Semi-final Round—W. T. Tilden defeated Vincent Richards, 6—1, 6—3; Henry Bassford defeated H. R. Hathaway, 3—6, 6—2, 6—1.

Doubles.—First Round—Martin and Mereereau won from Buchner and partner by default; Richards and Fischer won from Nehring and partner by default; Tilden and Donaldson defeated Bry and Landau, 6—2, 6—3; H. B. O'Boyle and J. S. O'Boyle won from Collom and Kirk by default.

Second Round—Tilden and Donaldson defeated H. B. O'Boyle and J. S. O'Boyle, 6—3, 6—1.

BUGLE'S FIRST CALL HEARD AT JAMAICA

CAMPFIRE WEAKENS AT END

Two-Year-Old Champion of 1916 Runs Third to Old Koenig and Startling in Paumonok Handicap.

Racing on New York tracks for the season of 1918 was ushered in yesterday at Jamaica by the Metropolitan Jockey Club, under conditions that augur well for a successful campaign. There was no dense crowd to welcome the thoroughbreds back to local competition, but the attendance was larger than a year ago, the fields well filled with horses of fair class, and the crowd showed enthusiasm over the three races in which the public choices came galloping home.

Perhaps the greatest disappointment was the failure of Campfire, the popular favorite, to win the Paumonok Handicap at six furlongs, which was the feature of the program. The two-year-old champion of 1916 appeared to be leniently treated by the handicapper, but the result proved that official to be right as usual.

Campfire, carrying top weight, was made an even money favorite, but he failed when the pinch came, as in most of his races last year, the honor of winning the first important local race going to the Beverwyck Stable's Old Koenig, while R. F. Carman's Startling outgamed Campfire for the place. The time of 1:12 2-5 is only two-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

Notter, a master rider in his day, has again taken up active work in the saddle, and he had the distinction of riding Mrs. C. W. Starr's War Zone, which was the first horse to step on the track in response to the gladdening notes of the first bugle call. The superstitious trembled as it was noticed that thirteen horses were carded for the opening event, but in this instance the number thirteen was lucky. It was the post position assigned to W. S. Sharton's Dottie Vandeveer, a two-year-old which gained renown in Maryland under the name of Mrs. Kate Leydecker. Neither the change of name, nor the outside berth had any effect on this youngster's speed, for she was driven into the lead in the first eighth and galloped home an easy winner.

Campfire Falters Near Finish.

H. P. Whitney's Tumbler and W. C. Clancy's Royal Ensign were withdrawn from the Paumonok, leaving eight to go to the post. With Campfire an overwhelming favorite, Old Koenig was made second choice on the strength of recent trials, and High Noon, Startling and Hank O'Day, the only others seriously considered. High Noon showed all his old speed at the break and quickly opened a gap of several lengths. Byrne, on Old Koenig, was the first to go in pursuit, and at the bottom of the back stretch he was almost lapped on High Noon with Green Gold leading Campfire several lengths back.

Going around the turn Campfire began to move up, and, rushing by Green Gold, he was gaining on the leaders so rapidly that a shout went up, "Campfire wins in a walk." Byrne must have sensed the onrushing effort of the two-year-old champion, for no sooner had he straightened his mount out in the stretch than he called on Old Koenig for a sprint that made Campfire's effort look like a canter. High Noon was left almost standing still to be swallowed up by the slow beginners.

While Campfire was struggling in the wake of Old Koenig, R. F. Carman's Startling came with a rush from far back and joined issue with the Wilson colt. It was a brief struggle for the place, but Startling was better conditioned by reason of Maryland racing, and in the last sixteenth he drew away to take second place by a length, two lengths behind Old Koenig. T. P. Thorne's Panaman finished fourth, just in front of the tired High Noon.

Two Riders Are Injured.

Reckless riding on green horses resulted in the injury of two jockeys. In the first race R. Denyse had the mount on the Casco Stable's Unwise Child. In the crowding at the turn Unwise Child was put on the fence, and the jockey's knee was so badly cut that M. Rowan had to be substituted for Denyse in the following race. There was a jam in the back stretch in the second race, which caused T. P. Thorne's Longhi to fall. His rider, J. Weasler, also was out on the leg, but not seriously.

After Longhi fell F. R. Doctor's Wheat Cakes emerged from the crowd in the lead, and, hard ridden by Troise, kept in front to win by a length. The victory of Wheat Cakes and Royce Rolls in the fifth race, were wildly acclaimed by the crowd, as both had been heavily supported in the oral speculation.

PIMLICO HONORS DIVIDED.

Entries of Major Parr and Lieutenant Cochran Win Chief Events.

PIMLICO, Md., May 16.—Major Ral Parr and Lieutenant Gifford A. Cochran divided the honors of the racing here today. In the Crickmore Steeplechase Handicap, which attracted the cream of the timber toppers, the Parr colors were carried by Captain Parr, a son of Ogden, that kept in the front flight all the way and at the finish defeated the top weight, St. Charlcote.

Only a small field started for the Clabaugh Memorial Cup for two-year-olds, and Lieutenant Cochran's Pinard was one of the outsiders, in spite of the fact that he had won his last race. Pinard was well handled by Jockey Buxton, and defeated the favorite, Esquimau, by a small margin.

The summaries:

Goblin, Bar of Phoenix, and Amackassin also ran.

CITY COLLEGE WINS AT NET.

Defeats Manhattan College Team at Tennis by 6 to 0.

City College won every match in its tennis meet with Manhattan College on the City College courts yesterday, 6 to 0. The Lavender racquet wielders had lost some of their men and sent out a new combination on the courts because of the enlistment of Captain Kweit in the Naval Reserve and the loss of several men because of the adoption of the one-year ineligibility rule in tennis, a sport to which it had never before applied in City College.

ADVERTISING MEN ON LINKS.

Barrow Wins Selected Score Event with a Card of 75.

Eighty golfers of the Metropolitan Advertising Golf Association competed in a one-day tournament over the links of the Arcola Country Club yesterday. In addition to enjoying some keen sport the members contributed generously to the Y. M. C. A. fund, about $200 being realized. The sum of $75 in War Saving Stamps was divided between five successful golfers in another event.

Hy Barrow won the day's most important prize, that offered for the best gross score in an eighteen holes selected score event, in which he returned the low gross of 75. Don M. Parker, with 76, 4—72, and F. H. Sisson, with 79, 7—72, tied for second and third prizes in this event. Barrow also shared in the laurels of a best ball foursome, in which he was teamed with G. P. Hotchkiss. This combination returned the winning card of 78, 8—70, topping by one stroke the card of E. Barber and O. Wood, with 87, 16—71.

In the Y. M. C. A. event P. Maxwell's gross of 80 was the best. The successful golfers in the War Savings Stamp play were led by H. F. Harrison, with 87, 15—72. F. H. Sisson, with 87, 14—73, was second; A. M. Scanlon, with 85, 11—74, was third, and a tie resulted between Al Reeves, 93, 18—75, and E. T. Raine, 88, 13—75, for fourth.

OLDFIELD WINS AUTO RACE.

UNIONTOWN, Penn., May 16.—Barney Oldfield defeated Louis Chevrolet in a five-lap match race at the opening meeting of the year at the Uniontown Speedway today. Oldfield's time for the five laps, slightly more than five miles, was 3:18:51. The race was for a purse of $10,000. The attendance was estimated at 10,000.

The Liberty Sweepstakes, with fourteen drivers entered and consisting of five heats of twenty-four laps each, was won by Ralph Mulford. His time was 16:42:82. Eddie Hearne made the second best time, and Tom Milton was third.

In the second heat of the Liberty Sweepstakes, Ira Vail narrowly escaped injury when the rear axle of his machine broke. The car skidded, but Vail held to the steering wheel and reached his pit uninjured. In the same race two flagmen were injured when the machine driven by I. P. Fetterman of Pittsburgh was hurled against a box in which the two men were sitting. The machine got beyond the control of Fetterman when a rear wheel collapsed.

Cochran Increases His Lead.

Welker Cochran gained a big lead over Joseph Mayer in the continuation of their 18.2 balkline billiard match at Maurice Daly's Seventh Academy yesterday. He is now leading on the two days' play by 1,200 to 396. In the afternoon game yesterday Cochran was the winner by 300 to 55, running out his string for an average of 42. In the evening Cochran defeated his rival by 300 to 182, and this time his average was 30.

FOG MISHAP HINDERS NEW AIRPLANE MAIL

WASHINGTON MAIL DELAYED

Rising to an altitude of 8,000 feet over Belmont Park at 11:29½ o'clock yesterday morning, a half minute ahead of time, Lieutenant Stephen Bonsel, in a new airplane, set his course for Philadelphia, carrying seventeen pounds of United States mail, thus opening the second day of the regular airplane mail service between this city and Washington. His departure was unattended by the ceremony which marked the flight of Lieutenant Torrey Webb on Wednesday and the circumstances were more businesslike.

Not long after he had gone those who had watched his departure from Belmont Park heard by telephone that Lieutenant Bonsel had suffered an accident at Bridgeton, N. J., where he had been forced to alight. Lieutenant Bonsel, caught in a fog, found himself far off his course, that followed on Wednesday by Lieutenant Webb, and sought a convenient landing place.

He chose the old Bridgeton race track, which is now in use as a horse bazaar, and dropping from the height of 8,000 feet, which he had maintained, he afterward explained, because he was using a new machine, he found the field filled with grazing horses. He opened his exhaust and throttled his engine to frighten the horses away, but they refused to budge. He circled the field and, to avoid killing some of the horses, he swerved into a fence. The propeller and one plane were badly damaged, but the aviator was unhurt. The mail was immediately forwarded to the railroad in an emergency motor truck, one of a number placed along the route for use in the event of just such an accident. The mail was sent on to Philadelphia and dispatched to Washington in the machine which Lieutenant Bonsel should have met at the relaying point, Bustleton, near Philadelphia. The damaged airplane was sent to this city last night for repairs. It was explained that at each end as well as at Bustleton substitute machines are provided, and the service will not be halted today because of the accident.

Shortly before 2:55 o'clock yesterday afternoon an airplane came into view over Belmont Park, and on the dot of 2:58 Lieutenant Torrey Webb stepped from his machine, completing the second northbound trip from Philadelphia. He carried 118 pounds of mail from Washington and 5 pounds from Philadelphia, a total of 3,490 pieces. These were rushed to a train which left for the Pennsylvania Station at 3:01 o'clock, arriving at its destination at 3:24. The pouches were opened at 3:26 and the mail left for the branch Post Offices through the pneumatic tubes at 3:38.

On the southbound trip Lieutenant Bonsel had only carried 237 pieces of mail. The heavy delivery from Washington was explained by the Post Office officials here, who pointed out that the northbound machine carried the letters which should have been brought on Wednesday, when delivery was not made because of an accident between Washington and Philadelphia.

Among the letters which Lieutenant Webb delivered yesterday was one sent by Postmaster General Burleson to Postmaster Patten of New York, the contents of which were published yesterday, though the letter failed to arrive on Wednesday because of the accident. The stamp of the letter had been canceled and autographed by President Wilson at Washington before the departure of the first machine from there on Wednesday. The envelope was turned over to Noah H. Taussig, President of the American Molasses Company, yesterday, to be auctioned off for the American Red Cross early in June. Mr. Taussig has agreed to start the auction with a bid of $1,000.

Another letter which arrived yesterday was one written by Postmaster General Burleson to the publisher of THE NEW YORK TIMES, inclosing a letter written in 1835 by the proprietors of THE NEW YORK TIMES of that day. The old document urged quicker mail service between New York and Washington. A facsimile of this letter was published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of yesterday, copies of it having been forwarded from Washington by rail.

Barring the mishap to Lieutenant Bonsel's machine at Brideton, the Post Office officials expressed themselves as highly satisfied with the service yesterday. The northbound trip was made with the smoothness of clockwork, despite the fact that the time for Lieutenant Webb's flight from Philadelphia was one hour and eighteen minutes. He explained that he had encountered stiff winds en route and that this had hindered his speed. The mail had been relayed to him at Philadelphia by Lieutenant Edgerton, who had difficulty in locating the landing field, Lieutenant Webb said.

Lieutenant Edgerton arrived in Philadelphia at 1:35, having been two hours on the way. Three minutes later Lieutenant Webb was on the wing for New York.

Lieutenant Edgerton had passed the Philadelphia landing field at 1:15 o'clock, having failed to see the markings on the hangar because of his altitude, approximately 8,000 feet. It was said that had he landed then he would have got to Philadelphia in an hour and forty minutes.

At the Post Office yesterday Superintendent of Mails Norris said that the Post Office Department had been approached by several inventors, who asked that they be permitted to look at the roof of the Post Office Building, with a view to devising a landing place for the plane post there.

"The inventors realize," said Mr. Norris, "that sooner or later we shall need our terminals right on top of the Post Office Building instead of at Belmont Park. One man had letters of introduction from Washington, and we provided him with the blue prints of the Post Office Building. Of course, we must take these things seriously. It does not do in these days to make fun of inventors, no matter how extravagant their ideas may seem."

Among the letters which arrived by the air mail yesterday were several addressed to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"The inauguration of the air mail service at this time is a fitting triumph at this crucial period in the world's history," said Miss Wenona Marlin, a clerk in one of the departments at Washington, in her letter. "Through this message," she added, "may I not congratulate THE NEW YORK TIMES on the part THE TIMES has played in bringing about this achievement?"

Another letter came from the Women's Committee of the Council on National Defense, and contained the news that the first conference of the committee, which ended on Wednesday, had been successful in the end for which it was planned—the interpretation of the war to women and the elucidation of the difficult points on which they have been engaged.

Another letter was from Alan R. Hawley of the Aero Club of America, which had been sent from this city to Washington several days in advance of the departure of the first machine.

"We all hope," said Mr. Hawley, "that some agreement may be reached between the nations which will guarantee against such a horror as the bombing of a nation out of existence overnight by another nation having tens of thousands of airplanes. But the present war has shown that hope does not save nations from the outrages of aggressors. As a matter of fact Germany's first air raids of Great Britain were conducted by Zeppelins, which were employed for passenger carrying before the war. So, while keeping our hearts in the right place, we must be ready to protect the republic and the rights of humanity and the cause of civilization."

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Airplane mail service between Washington and New York was deranged considerably today on the southbound trips, and the southbound consignment, which left New York before noon did not arrive here until 8:35 tonight.

Lieutenant Stephen Bonsal, Jr., leaving New York this morning, lost his bearings in a fog and wandered far off his course, landing at Bridgeton, N. J., forty miles from Philadelphia. The mail was rushed to the Philadelphia field at Bustleton and got under way again at 5:15 o'clock in a plane piloted by Lieutenant Walter Miller. The machine developed engine trouble after twenty-five miles and was forced to return. Lieutenant James C. Edgerton, who flew from the Capital to Philadelphia earlier in the day, then volunteered to make the trip, arriving over Washington at 8:35 o'clock tonight.

GET MRS. WILSON'S THIMBLE

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's gold thimble, which the wife of the President promised to the Treasure and Trinket Fund of the Aviation Committee of the National Special Aid Society, sent from Washington by the first aerial post, arrived at the headquarters of the society, 250 Fifth Avenue, at 5 P. M. yesterday. The thimble is one that has been used by Mrs. Wilson for the last few years. It was started on its journey on Wednesday, and Mrs. William Allen Bartlett, Chairman of the Aviation Committee, accompanied by Mrs. Edward Robinson, wife of the Director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, motored down to Belmont Park to receive it.

Owing to the accident at the beginning of the trip from Washington, the package containing the thimble was returned and arrived by air post yesterday. The thimble will be exhibited in the windows of Lord & Taylor's store for the next few days, with the table silver presented the fund by ex-President and Mrs. William H. Taft, gifts to them at the celebration of their silver wedding at the White House. The fund provides aviators with needed supplies which do not come to them through the Government. The thimble will be sold later.

FRANCIS WILSON LOSES BUNGALOW BY FIRE

The Summer home of Francis Wilson, the actor, at Lake Mahopac, was destroyed by fire early on Wednesday morning, and Mr. Wilson, his wife, and the three servants barely escaped with their lives. The bungalow with its broad verandas was destroyed. Mr. Wilson said yesterday that it would be difficult to estimate the damage. The fire, he believed, was caused by a defective flue.

Mr. Wilson was alone in the library, he said, when he heard the crackling of the fire. He found the rear of the house ablaze. He aroused the other members of the household, who were sleeping. They had difficulty in getting out, for the fire spread so rapidly that soon the entire building was in flames. The members of the household had no time to dress.

The fire destroyed the interesting objects that Mr. Wilson had collected in a lifetime on the stage and his collections of old china, pewter, prints, and old furniture. Among the articles destroyed was a collection of mezzoprints of old-time actors, in costume, and a collection of autographed theatrical prints. In addition, Mr. Wilson lost a collection of letters of famous men and women, including Emerson, Frederick Douglass, Eugene Field, Horace Howard Furness, Clyde Fitch, and others.

DR. ROBERTS ASSAILED.

WAUKESHA, Wis., May 16.—Dr. David Roberts, present only as a witness while Grace Lusk faces the jury charged with the murder of Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts, heard himself assailed today by witnesses and counsel as the alleged deceiver of two women—one his dead wife and the other on trial as her slayer.

Dr. R. E. Davies, the State's chief witness, testified that he was called to the house where Miss Lusk was rooming on the afternoon of June 21, 1917, by a telephone message from Dr. Roberts. There he found Mrs. Roberts dead in the parlor with two bullet wounds in her body. At the head of a rear stairway, he testified, he saw Miss Lusk with a pistol in her right hand and her left hand covering a widening stain on her white waist from a wound near her heart. Refusing to allow him to come up to treat her, she dictated the following statement:

"Dr. Roberts told me again and again that he loved me and only me. He said he and his wife never cared for each other. He swore on a Bible that he would tell her before the 15th of June. I told him that if he did not care for me we would end it all. Last night he told me again that he loved me. I told him that he must tell her, as it was the only honorable way. This morning I called him on the telephone and he told me he had told his wife that I had been chasing him and that I was the darndest fool that ever lived. She called me every name—every name. I loved him so dearly."

Later, Dr. Davies said, she asked him if the wound she had inflicted on herself was through the heart. He replied that it was not, and she then felt for the beating of her heart with her left hand, and, raising the pistol, fired again. When Dr. Davies reached her side he asked her why she had shot Mrs. Roberts, and believing she was dying she replied: "She drove me to it. She called me such awful names."

Walter D. Corrigan, in his opening statement to the jury for the State, drew another picture of the tragedy when he depicted Miss Lusk as a woman who was planning to separate Dr. Roberts from his wife that she might marry him herself, and declared that the prosecution would prove that the shooting was done with malice and premeditation.

BREAKS BROOKLYN RECORDS

All theatrical records for Brooklyn were broken last night by the performance of "Out There," given at the Academy of Music by the all-star cast now touring the country in the interests of the Red Cross. The total receipts for the performance were $21,882, which was inclusive of $1,450 paid for a program autographed by each member of the company, and sold at auction by Burr McIntosh.

Last night's receipts bring the total of the first five performances to about $85,000. A Wednesday matinée in Wilmington yielded more than $12,000, and the Wednesday night performance in Philadelphia brought in nearly $24,000. An auction sale of tickets held yesterday in New Haven, where a performance will be given next Wednesday, resulted in premiums of about $18,000, which was $1,000 in excess of the amount obtained in New York.

The first of three New York performances will take place at the Century tonight.

MUSIC NOTES.

Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra of San Francisco, will lead a concert of French music by ninety players at Carnegie Hall tonight, including works of Franck, Debussy, and Chabrier.

Lenora Sparkes, an English soprano of the Metropolitan, with Max Gegna, 'cellist, and Abe Seril, violin, will give a concert at the Brooklyn Academy tomorrow evening for the American Red Cross.

Belle Story, soprano of the Hippodrome, and Hans Kronold, 'cello, will appear with the Kriens Symphony Orchestra in a concert at Grace M. E. Church this evening.

ASKS SAVINGS BANKS TO ENLARGE ACTIVITY

Myron T. Herrick Says They Should Meet Competition of Government Institutions.

MUST WORK FOR DEPOSITS

Ex-Ambassador Believes the American People Can Supply Ample Funds to Win the War.

In the opinion of Myron T. Herrick, ex-Ambassador to France, the privately owned savings banks of the United States, with the increasing competition from the Government in the shape of postal savings banks, farm loan banks, and war demands, must reach out for deposits and stimulate attention to the local service they can render in their respective communities. Mr. Herrick, who is President of the Society for Savings of Cleveland, Ohio, was the principal speaker at the twenty-fifth annual meeting and luncheon of the Savings Banks' Association of the State of New York, held yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Henry A. Schenck, President of the Bowery Savings Bank, and President of the association, presided, and 240 savings bank men, representing 137 of the 141 institutions in the State, were present. Among the guests were John Harsen Rhoades, first President of the association; George I. Skinner, State Superintendent of Banks; Laurence McGuire, President Real Estate Board; William A. Nash, Chairman of the board of the Corn Exchange Bank; Samuel W. Fairchild, and Marcus M. Marks.

Mr. Herrick asserted that the American people had a reputation of being wasteful and extravagant. Nevertheless, they had enough money stored up to oversubscribe every recent bond issue of the Government, and also to buy $149,361,072 War Savings Stamps, besides contributing millions of dollars to the Red Cross and other charities.

Sees Ample Funds for War.

"By all indications," Mr. Herrick said, "they will be able to keep on supplying the Government and other public and private enterprises with funds until Germany is brought to her knees, and then will still have enough money left to maintain the United States in the front ranks of commerce, industry, and agriculture upon the advent of peace. Indeed, it seems, the wasteful and extravagant American people can always rise to the occasion by adjusting their habits to any condition of prosperity or adversity. A proof of this is the steady increase in the deposits in savings banks and policy holders in life insurance companies since the outbreak of the war."

Ohio's ex-Governor warned that the times called for the utmost frugality and thrift on the part of all classes, especially as the era of cheap living had closed. He then proceeded to discuss the changes that were leading up to centralization of Government powers and the attending competition from the Federal Government which the privately owned savings banks had to face. He declared that votes for women were not going to impede the Federal, State or municipal Socialist movement, as "the average woman is a born Socialist."

"So," the speaker added, "the not improbable outcome is a greater centralization of Government powers, the predominance of bureaus in Government, and the entering by the Government into various activities heretofore left to individual initiative and private enterprise." Mr. Herrick said Russia offered an example of dangerous centralization policies, where, among other things, the Bolshevist Government was "making a General out of each soldier."

"Banks Splendidly Successful."

The speaker said there had never been any claim that the private savings banks did not function satisfactorily, or that they needed help. On the contrary, they had been splendidly successful from the very start. In support of this, Mr. Herrick said that the 9,919 private savings banks and associations had together 14,935,445 depositors and members, which meant about one out of every three persons engaged in gainful occupations in the country.

"It is my belief that Congress will remove more restrictions from the postal savings banks, and will enlarge the savings bank features of the Federal farm loan system," Mr. Herrick asserted. "I can see no other outlook, owing to the enormous monetary needs arising out of the Government's own public functions and the private enterprises it is taking over, and is avowedly bent on financing directly.

"For this reason, I apprehend that progress for the private savings banks will not be so easy in the future as it was in the past. We have rent, taxes on reserves, salaries and expenses to pay out of income; and we are facing a highly privileged competition, such as has crushed out private enterprise in many a large foreign country.

"We cannot escape this fact by ignoring it. Our best hope lies in adjusting ourselves to changing conditions, even by engaging in local welfare work. In considering this readjustment, the first two points which present themselves are, of course, what interest may be paid on deposits, and how can deposits be invested?"

After analyzing present and prospective rates of interest paid by postal savings banks, and expressing the opinion that the Federal land banks could also accept deposits of any kind and pay interest at any rate thereon, Mr. Herrick continued:

Land Bank Free of Taxation.

"Thus the land bank and the depositor are both free from taxation, while there is no limit to the amount of the certificates or of the convertible bonds that one person may hold. As against this, private savings banks cannot accept deposits except for limited amounts, while their earnings must be reduced by taxes and various expenses, which, in the case of the Government institutions, are borne by the public. Therefore, it is my belief that the private savings banks will have very little advantage, if any at all, over the postal savings banks and the Federal farm loan system in the matter of the interest rate that may be offered.

"Perhaps the private and Government systems will eventually give about the same net interest return to the depositor. They will also be equal as regards safety. So the only way left for the private savings banks to meet this new competition is to become more active in reaching out for deposits, and more attentive to the local service they can render in their respective communities."

Resolutions were passed pledging support to the Government in the war.

THREE NEW IMMORTALS.

Jules Cambon, Curel, and Boylesve Elected to French Academy.

PARIS, May 16.—Jules Cambon, former Ambassador to the United States; François de Curel, playwright, and René Boylesve, author, were elected members of the French Academy today, succeeding Francis Charmes, Paul Hervieu, and Alfred Mezières, respectively.

WASHINGTON PLAYERS HARD HIT BY WAR

Entrance of Many of Comedy Theatre Actors Into Service May Cause Company to Disband.

The entrance of a majority of the male members of their company into various branches of war work, coupled with the other hardships imposed on the theatre by the war, probably will cause the Washington Square Players to abandon their enterprise for the duration of the war. The season will end at the comedy theatre tomorrow night, and it was said at the offices of the Players that no definite plans had been made for the resumption of activities next year. A Summer season, however, will be played in San Francisco, where the Players will offer about twenty of their plays in a five weeks' season.

Several of the male members of the company have been called by the draft, and with the end of the present season the director, Edward Goodman, will also take up war work. The past season, which has been the organization's second year at the Comedy, has not been profitable, although it was said that no money had been lost.

New York's other little playhouse, the Greenwich Village, has also been affected by the war. Its director, Frank Conroy, is subject to draft call, and will leave for camp in a few weeks.

STAGE WOMEN GIVE BENEFIT

Mme. Schumann-Heink Among Artists at War Relief Concert.

The Stage Women's War Relief gave a benefit last night in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton to swell its funds for the different activities of this organization which are to be taken up here and abroad. The first will be the establishment of canteens at the fronts in Europe, and a workshop for disabled soldiers and sailors, and a convalescent hospital will also be established soon.

Mme Schumann-Heink, who has just returned from a singing tour of the camps, was the chief artist. She opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner," and also gave several other numbers. Other artists who appeared were Max Rosen, Maggie Teyte, and Armand Vecsey, who led the orchestra in one of his own compositions.

Following the program there was a Summer promenade, when about twenty-five Summer frocks were shown. One which was chosen by judges as the most beautiful was auctioned off. The judges included Gladys Hanson, Crystal Herne, Elizabeth Risdon, Carroll McComas, Georgia Caine, and Margaret Namara.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Walter Jones will be seen in his original rôle when "Rock-a-Bye Baby," which was formerly "Baby Mine," begins its engagement at the Astor next Wednesday night. John Cumberland has been playing the part on tour.

Jessica Brown, a dancer who appeared in "The Cohan Revue" this year, will be added to the entertainers at the Century Grove next Wednesday night.

Yvette Guilbert and Percy Grainger are among those who will appear at a performance at the Shubert Theatre Sunday night under the auspices of the American Committee for Devastated France.

"Pershing's Crusaders," an official film showing the United States forces abroad, will begin an engagement at the Lyric Theatre next Tuesday night. The pictures will be shown under the auspices of Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Clarence H. Mackay and Frederic R. Coudert, and the proceeds will be devoted to war relief funds.

"In a Net," a drama by Maravene Thompson, was produced for the first time last night at the Apollo Theatre, Atlantic City. In the cast were Charles Milward, Clarence Handyside, Walter Wilson, Gypsy O'Brien, Walter Ringham, Ethel Rizer, and Carl Anthony. The piece will be seen in New York in the Fall.

Paul Dickey, author with Charles Goddard of "The Misleading Lady" and other plays, received a commission yesterday as a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps.

MR. HUGHES TO INVESTIGATE.

Men who have gone to President WILSON with suspicions that the aircraft production program was being wrecked by selfish counsels of delay in the interests of monopolists, or by insidious propaganda, have testified to Mr. WILSON's desire for an impartial and thorough investigation. But still there were those who believed that the President was trying to protect responsible War Department officials and did not want to have the light turned on. Mr. WILSON's answer to these critics is the appointment of ex-Justice CHARLES E. HUGHES as the Administration's investigator, to co-operate with Attorney General GREGORY. It is not easy to say which is more to be admired, Mr. WILSON's summons of the late Republican candidate for President to his side or the public-spirited response of Mr. HUGHES, who could have declined a difficult and thankless task without provoking criticism.

If the average citizen had been asked who is the bravest and most skillful investigator in the United States for a baffling case in which scandal may lurk, he would not hesitate to say, recalling the New York insurance exposure, CHARLES EVANS HUGHES. Nothing that is wrong or criminal can very well be hidden from his acute intellect. No reluctant witness can deceive him. Evildoers dread to face his examination. His mastery of detail, his clearness of statement, his penetration of motives, his quickness to detect evasion, and his always unruffled self-possession make him a consummate trail finder in a maze like that of the aircraft fiasco.

When Mr. HUGHES says in his letter to the President that he will "be glad "to co-operate with the Attorney General in making a prompt and thorough investigation of the charges of "dishonesty in connection with air-"craft production," the man of probity and action speaks. He means every word of it; he will get to the bottom of things. When Mr. HUGHES goes on to say that he assumes that the Attorney General will advise him "of his wishes "for a conference, with a view to the "making of definite and adequate "plans for the investigation," it means that Mr. HUGHES will be found ready to take a leading part in the inquiry and that he won't tolerate delay or mismanagement. Where he sits will be the head of the table. In fact, the understanding is that Mr. HUGHES will do the investigating in his own way, with the approval of the Attorney General.

FOCH AND PERSHING.

It was known that in the Ypres sector, and even before Amiens, French and British soldiers were fighting side by side, and that where the great battle has been raging most fiercely there was no longer a distinct French or British front. Obviously, the question of personal command of bodies of troops was to be settled according to numerical strength: General HAIG commanded in the Ypres sector, General PETAIN on the Somme and Luce, both subject to the orders of General FOCH, who could make transfers of divisions to suit his strategy.

It is now announced that General PERSHING is to have his share in the unified command. When American troops, brigaded with French and British, are in the majority along any part of the front, soldiers of the three nations will take their orders from the American General. This arrangement will be welcome to JOHN J. PERSHING, who is not the man to be satisfied with inaction and remoteness on the Lorraine border, holding a few miles of unimportant trenches. And the American soldiers will find it to their taste. They want to be in the fighting; and, for all his composure, General PERSHING covets the post of danger where history is being made. The rivalry of the three armies will be a spur to initiative and intrepidity, and the Americans cannot fail to gain in efficiency by the association. The enemy can't afford to blunder on his front; and when it comes to hand-to-hand fighting the Germans won't have the best of it.

An announcement which might have been anticipated is that General FOCH is to be as supreme in Italy, as he is in France: from the English Channel to the Adriatic he will be commander as well as strategist. No less than 6,000,000 men will owe him obedience and take orders from him. As he is a man of tact as well as genius, he will know how to reconcile questions of local command when they conflict. He will be likely to intervene and decide only when called upon to do so; but doubtless he will advise and urge in matters of the high command in cases of shortcoming and failure. In the history of warfare there has been no such responsibility as that of FERDINAND FOCH, called to the head of six millions of soldiers to achieve victory for human liberty and the blessings of civilization.

BOLOISTS.

DUVAL, manager of the "defeatist" Germanophil Bonnet Rouge newspaper, a replica in part of the Ardennes Gazette, printed by the Germans in Northern France, is the second "Boloist" to be condemned to death by court-martial for treason. Compared with the swaggering adventurer BOLO, he is a tame figure. Of the other defendants, LEYMARIE, sometime Director of the Ministry of Interior, gets off with the lightest punishment. Is his former chief, MALVY, Under Secretary of Interior in CAILLAUX's Premiership, Secretary of Interior under VIVIANI and RIBOT, and soon to be tried, not by court-martial, but by the High Court, to escape as easily?

Maker of Prefects, controller of elections, the Minister of Interior in all Latin Cabinets is a personage, a power, at least a main vehicle for the continuance in power of his chief. As LEYMARIE is interesting on account of MALVY, so MALVY is interesting, mainly on account of the arch-pacifist, defeatist, or Germanophil, JOSEPH CAILLAUX, a great financier, Finance Minister under WALDECK-ROUSSEAU and in CLEMENCEAU's first Cabinet, ten years ago "the most hated man in France," yet Premier in the "year of Agadir," 1911. Daring, dominating, cynical, with a sort of eighteenth century mixture of fashion, finance, politics, amours, "the Richelieu of the Republic," the man who "smashed "the income tax while seeming to de-"fend it," is a sinister figure. Distrusted, hated, feared, he long kept his friends in place; like GIOLITTI, he seemed to have the art of being in power when out of office. By sheer personal prestige or impudence he seemed to frighten and disturb the prosecution when he appeared as a witness in the Duval trial this week.

FEDERAL FINANCES AND TAX REFORM.

There is surprise only in the details of the statement that the income of the United States exceeds four billion dollars, almost all from taxes. In no country do war conditions prostrate business, the burden of taxes being offset by the expansion of credits due to the larger circulation of loan and tax moneys. Even in Germany the revenues are larger, and accounts reflect unusually large figures. In our case the increase is large over estimates last year, but less than within the last few days. Income and profit taxes are $348,000,000 more than was expected when the law was passed, but about a quarter of a billion less than hoped within a fortnight. Internal revenue receipts are a quarter of a billion higher than was expected by the lawmakers. These figures are based partly on actual receipts and partly upon bills sent for taxes due next month for which the figures are in hand. In round figures the expenditures will not be far from a billion dollars a month for the fiscal year, including some five billions of loans to allies. The proportion of taxes to expenditure is one-third, if allies' loans are included, and over one-half if they are reckoned as a deferred asset and deducted. There are those who want even more raised by taxes and less by loans, but the proportion is as large as experience, or comparison with the practice of other nations, indicates as judicious.

Decision regarding resting upon the present revenue law or levying additional taxes depends upon the expenditures of next year. More money was appropriated for this year than could be spent, but next year's expenses will demand larger provision than this year's. Expenses have a way of exceeding estimates even more than income. Yesterday it was announced that the postal employés' pay had been raised $40,000,000. That is only a minor item. It is hoped that the shipbuilding program will call for two billions, and the airplane bill may not be much less. There are huge expenditures for ordnance and ordnance plants in sight, several billions at least. The army alone may need as much as the total expenditures this year. There is a deficit of some hundreds of millions on account of the railways, subject to unknown offsets through economies and increase of rates. Secretary McADOO's minimum expectation approaches double this year's expenditures. That would more than absorb the excess of this year's appropriations, and would leave unprovided for more than ought to be left to a deficiency bill. If the increase of expenditures should be near expectation, the proportion of taxes to expenditures would be much less than is thought desirable by any authorities.

The outlook, therefore, is that the existing laws will not produce revenue enough. If left unamended, they will produce a deficit, in addition to difficulties in administration which have annoyed the Treasury as much as the taxpayers. The Treasury has not been able to perform its duties within the limits of the bill, and taxpayers have been provided with excuses for their delinquency. If it were possible to hope that there would be another surplus next year, there might be an argument for deferring new legislation. But it is a certainty that more money will be wanted, that the present laws will not provide it, and that the laws should be amended regardless of such considerations, because of defects apart from the Government's finances. More money could be got by better laws and with less friction. There are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of rulings by the Treasury of which notice should be taken when the tax laws are next under consideration. It is undesirable that the annoyances through which the Treasury and the taxpayers have just passed should be repeated next year, and if there is to be any change it should be in time to allow the Treasury to prepare itself for the new situation, instead of being pitchforked into a muddle as it was this year. If Congress had been compelled to execute its own laws, and if Congress did not pride itself upon some of the defects of the laws it enacted, there would be no question about prompt action. The plain question is whether the taxpayers, the Treasury, and the country are less to be considered than the convenience of Congress, which is thinking more of politics than of finance.

THE SALVATION ARMY IN THE WAR.

Salvation Army girls were in the battle of Seicheprey, under fire, going intrepidly about ministering to the needs of the American soldiers resisting the terrific German attack. Up to that time probably many Americans did not even know that the Salvation Army was at the front, though they ought to have known it; the Salvation Army is always at the front, whether the battleline is one of war or peace. It does not fear pain, disease, or death. It does not advertise, and there is no reward to be got for helping it, except the reward that comes from conscience. Yet that should be reward enough to make men willing to aid the army in its "drive" for war funds.

The drive ends tomorrow. All over the land the little fellows have been giving their mites. But war funds cannot be built up only by mites from the little fellows. Men with money should come to the aid of the Salvation Army. If they want to know what will be done with the money, let them look at Seicheprey. But they do know; they know that wherever a task for humanity is to be done, too disagreeable, too difficult, or too dangerous for ordinary human beings, there they will find the Salvation Army men and women doing it, cheerfully, courageously, and modestly.

WARM WORDS FROM WILHELM.

"Hearty greetings to ZITA and yourself," cheerily telegraphs WILHELM to KARL, giving out the telegram for publication. To ZITA, by all means; but what will ZITA do with them? Will KARL quite dare to lay the foundations for a domestic "scene" by audaciously presenting ZITA with WILHELM's hearty greetings? Or are Kaisers immune from domestic scenes? In private life a husband who has been foregathering with a chum whom his wife holds in abhorrence sometimes starts on his homeward way with the chum's last words echoing in his ears, "Remember me to Mary." And perhaps he really means to do so at first. But as he gets nearer and nearer to the house and to that waiting and wrathful spouse he begins to think of other things that would be much more genial topics of conversation, and when the latchkey scratches the lock he has made up his mind that perhaps it would be better to forget John's message; John will never know the difference, and there is no use in deliberately inviting trouble. Kaisers may be different, but we doubt if KARL really will deliver those hearty greetings to ZITA. And we doubt if WILHELM expected it; WILHELM knows ZITA. We think those hearty greetings were intended not for ZITA, but for the ill-bred persons who have been writing articles in the German press indicating that ZITA did not approve of WILHELM, or WILHELM of ZITA.

WILHELM is in happier vein when he talks to the Town Council of Aachen, or Aix-la-Chapelle. Have the Aacheners been grumbling? If not, why does the Kaiser remind them so emphatically that if it were not for him and the good German sword they might be suffering the fate of "devastated France"? "The offensive goes well ahead." "Our task in the "west will be accomplished, but we "must be patient." The grumbling Aacheners may ask what "our task in the west" is. The answer must be that it is whatever we accomplish, whether it is the rout of the Allies or a gain of a hundred yards. He is pleased with the patriotism of "Aachen, on the empire's frontier." The empire's frontier is elastic and fluid. Yesterday it was Belgium; today it is Aachen. The ultimate frontier will be wherever I and the good German sword can stay without being put out. Is Aachen so patriotic? We cannot doubt it, but why, then, does it persist in talking French? "We must cease to talk French." A word to the wise is sufficient. Ah, if one could dispose of ZITA as easily as of Aachen! If one could simply say to ZITA, "You must cease to sympathize with the French," and know that it would be done because there was no escape!

PROFESSORS, IDEALISTS, ANGELS.

German professors are servants of the State, missionaries of the Hohenzollern gospel. Many of them are snobs in the Teuton fashion. To wear a reserve officer's uniform is a greater glory than to be a savant of European favor. Germany is compact of drillers and the drilled. The professors belong to both classes. From time to time, since the beginning of the war, they have issued their sophisticated manifestoes and their defenses of indefensible, of criminal German policies and acts. The latest lesson set by "the military masters of Germany" for the professors to repeat relates to the dangers of "world-citizenship," of "idealism." Thus, ERNST HAECKEL, that illustrious pragmatical scientist, writes of "the false cosmopolitan idealism of the German people." When has there been any cosmopolitan idealism in Germany since the age of LESSING, of the indifferent philosophic GOETHE, whose "object was to get to "know man, content in general to let "people go their own way"; of the SCHILLER, later a strong nationalist in "Wilhelm Tell," who was saying in 1789 that "it is a poor and little aim to write for one nation"; of the FICHTE before the peace of Tilsit, before French garrisons held the Prussian cities, before the loss of half Prussia's territory had taught him to give up the half-affected devotion to Paris, the literary fashion of the eighteenth century, the cosmopolitanism of the citizens of little States, a divided Germany, and the Napoleonic legend? FICHTE developed in part a dangerous doctrine of the unlimited power of the State. German cosmopolitanism was an interlude where it was not a pose. FREDERICK the Great is the typical Prussian practical idealist. In the year he came to the throne he published his "Anti-Machiavel," wherein peace is praised, wherein he "would tell the Kings that "their true political interests consist "in outshining their subjects in "virtue." That same year he invaded and grabbed Silesia, "in order "to defend that country against at-"tacks from a third Power." This was a genuine Prussian, a genuine modern German, the hero and the god of the Hohenzollerns; and he had his professors too. As he wrote in "The Seven Years' War":

> If sovereigns wish to make war, they are not restrained by arguments suitable for a public proclamation. They determine the course upon which they wish to embark, make war, and leave to some industrious jurist the trouble of justifying their action.

On the larger scale of today practically the whole corps of professors is set at work justifying. That is part of their work as servants of the State. They get decorations besides, and are well-seen at Court. They are better paid than FREDERICK's favorite jurist and justifier, Professor VON LUDEWIG, who got, say, $2.25 (three thalers) a day for his assemblage of Prussia's right or claim to swallow Silesia. Forty years the good man labored for the author of "Anti-Machiavel," most Machiavellian of the Kings of his day, and was glad and proud to be paid with the honorific "von." FREDERICK's Minister, PODEWILS, said contemptuously of this typical Prussian professor's ennobling particle: "A little wind that costs nothing."

The "idealism," the "cosmopolitanism" attacked by the contemporary Ludewigs is willingness to renounce indemnities and annexations, satisfaction with what Professor HAECKEL calls "the infamous" peace resolution of the Reichstag. That, says the professor genially, "gave fresh and terrible "proof of the proverbial political in-"competence of 'German Michael.'" That terrible incompetence consists in "the ideal of an international itch for agreement." The professor fears that this will be "victorious over the in-"dispensable national real increase of "power." So "German Michael," docile as he is, is a little tired of being dead, wounded, and missing for the benefit of the Junkers and the purple industrials.

One hates to take leave of this band of professors without hearing reverently SPAHN of Strassburg. This is no time for universal peace, he says. "We have to make good the omissions of centuries," that is, rob all the territory and power we can, since we didn't begin to rob till 1864, or rob in good earnest till 1871. But, remember:

> It was we who brought into the world the idea that the common state life of mankind should depend upon a trinity—the right of all, freedom for every individual member of the community, and peace as an ordered state of civilization. Only a race so full of idealism as the Germans are was capable of lighting up the horizon of humanity with an idea so great and eternal. If mankind is gradually to draw nearer to such a superterrestrial goal, it will only be if we once more advance as leaders.

Evidently the Germans have been belied. They are angels of light, apostles of freedom.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Forgot What Was Unforgettable.

That the start of the aerial mail service should have been delayed for seventeen minutes beyond the appointed hour—and at the Washington end of the route, too—by somebody's failure to put gasoline in the tanks of the airplane, illustrates one of the most curious possibilities of the human mind. Of course there was nobody, from the Postmaster General down to the humblest mechanic on the flying field, who did not know that gasoline was just as necessary for making the contemplated journey as the airplane itself, or as the aviator to operate it. The very idea that the gasoline could be forgotten—that it would not be provided betimes and in adequate amount—evidently never entered anybody's mind. And it was probably as a result of this certainty that the all-essential fuel was missing when the hour to start arrived!

What was in a way everybody's business, and business that any one of at least half a hundred people could and would have attended to had they not all been sure that it would be attended to by somebody else, was thus left undone, and there had to be a wild scurrying about to remedy the amazing negligence.

Of course nothing adverse is to be deduced from this as to the practicability of sending off the mail planes daily at a fixed time. The equally embarrassing and amusing incident, one can be certain, will not occur again. As much can be said of the mishap that befell this same machine a few miles from the starting point. The aviator seems to have lost his way, and, in making a forced landing to find out just where he was, his propeller was broken. That, at any rate, is the explanation given for the necessity that arose for transferring his burden of mail to such an antiquated method of transportation as a special train plodding along on the ground at the miserable rate of fifty or sixty miles an hour.

The explanation of the descent, indeed, is not quite as plausible as it might be, but it will do, and, anyhow, the breaking of the propeller is adequately accounted for if the landing was for any reason compulsory and hurried. It is the losing of the way that remains a bit mysterious, occurring as it did on a fine day and in a region where notable landmarks fairly swarm.

A Remarkable Group of Misstatements.

By stretching charity close to the point where it breaks with a loud popping noise, it is possible to characterize no more harshly than as a display of amazing ignorance an editorial article entitled "The Repentance of the Red Cross," which the National Anti-Vivisection Federation has taken from The Christian Science Monitor, reprinted in leaflet form, and is now engaged in scattering all over the country. Every single statement made in the article as of fact is false; most of them are not only false, but the direct opposite of the truth as it is known to everybody who has investigated the methods and results of animal experimentation and biological research enough to justify the expression of an opinion of them.

The first departure from veracity is in the assertion that "vast numbers" of subscribers to Red Cross funds had protested against any allotment of its money to the establishment in France of a laboratory for the study of trench and camp diseases. The numbers were not "vast"; they were small, for the great majority of Red Cross subscribers have common sense. But the minority was noisy and it was organized, and the Red Cross made the grave mistake of rescinding proper and beneficent action simply because the threats of the few anti-vivisectionists were not balanced by the assurances of continued and increased support that could have been secured so easily from people to whom the life of an American soldier seems of appreciably more value than that of a white mouse, a guinea pig, or even of a dog.

This, however, is among the least of the misrepresentations made in the article. It asserts, for instance, by clear implication, that the opinion of the medical profession as to the value of "vivisection" is divided, that the "vivisectors" in their confidential moments do not pretend that "the slightest attempt is made to ameliorate the suffering of the animal," and that "the deadening of the suffering of the animal destroys the very raison d'être of the operation." Every one of these assertions is false—ludicrously or abominably false, according to the point of view. To make them worse, they are quite irrelevant to the sort of work which was to be done in the proposed laboratory.

A Collection More Than an Invention.

Only professional engineers will get much, if any, real information from the detailed statement issued by the Government as to the way the Liberty motor was designed and the sources of the various mechanical ideas and devices that are incorporated in its construction. Other readers of the statement will derive from it the impression that the motor is original only in that it combines old ideas in a new way, but in a way that leaves little of mystery in the fact that the congeries as it stands is of narrowly restricted utility and far from the triumph of ingenuity it was hastily claimed to be.

It seems hardly possible that a machine so assembled from other machines, each planned to gain a different end or superiority, would unite the merits of them all, and not very surprising that it does not show any of them to a notable degree. Even the amateur mechanic, however, can now see how it happened that German airplanes already have been captured which contain elements present in the Liberty motor. There is a simpler explanation for that than the wonderful efficiency of German spies at work in the United States and gaining access to our most carefully guarded shops and laboratories. Seemingly we copied their motor, not they ours, so far as any copying was done.

Further elucidations of the Liberty motor's strange history are contained in the articles by Mr. ADAMS in a series the publication of which began yesterday. Those articles are full of information understandable even by the non-expert.

A Choice for Drafted Irishmen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Irish claim that their reason for resisting conscription is that they do not wish to fight England's battles. Could not some agreement be arrived at between the two allies that the Irish who were drafted should have the option of joining the American forces if they preferred to do so?

In that case they would be fighting for the United States instead of for England.

MAURICE'S BLUNDER.

Unfair Criticism of the French Army Command.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that General Maurice has been punished for his "indiscipline" by being put on "relief pay," he is probably disposed of and we shall hear of him no more. But before consigning him to the oblivion that he seems to deserve we may note that he accomplished the apparently impossible. As official spokesman for the British Army he asked the assembled newspaper correspondents "Where is Bluecher?" and committed about twice as many blunders as there are words in his question. Surely this must be a world's record.

That is why General Maurice lost the position he then occupied, which in turn excited him to make the fatal mistake of attacking the truth of Lloyd George's statements. All the way through General Maurice seems to have made every possible mistake. He was not merely guilty of "a break" or "a bad break"; it was a compound fracture! He was even wrong about the facts, because the French came to help the British immediately after his effusion. Moreover, there was no definite obligation for them to do so. Heretofore the two nations have not sent each other troops except where their armies join and naturally overlap. Before General Foch received authority over the allied forces who was to decide when the situation called for mutual assistance? That was just the trouble. General Pershing overcame it by putting our troops at the disposal of General Foch. But England and France had not then made that arrangement, and it took time, because no one man had the power to make it.

Very likely the delay of the French assistance was due to that. At least it is a very good excuse for the French, but there is a far better point that they could make. They might most pertinently inquire, "Where is Wellington?"

Notice of the Soldier's Arrival Abroad

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note complaint of Walter S. Kupfer in THE TIMES this morning in regard to a safe arrival postal reaching a relative the day after a soldier had sailed. Mr. Kupfer asks if it is possible that the Government is careless in the mailing of these postals.

Notices are posted prominently in a number of places at the camps of embarkation advising the soldiers to write these cards and telling them that they will find mail bags on board ship in which to post them. When troops arrive at the piers they find similar notices displayed on bulletin boards near the gangplanks, they are advised by word of mouth, and also find circulars posted on the ship, all of these insisting that the mail bag is the proper place to drop their mail.

In spite of these instructions soldiers violate regulations by handing their cards to some sailor or workman. These men drop them in some Post Office box and they are mailed immediately. The fact that Mr. Kupfer received this card the day after his relative sailed is proof that it was mailed in this manner. This office does not begin to cancel and assort these cards for two or three days after the ship has departed.

Germany's Punishment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Professor George Trumbull Ladd's article in yesterday's TIMES, "A Whole World Outraged," is, in my opinion, a masterly one, and in reply to his question, "Should guilty Germany be permitted to ever resume her place among the nations?" I for one give a decided negative, and I think that now is the time to agitate the question of using the most drastic methods possible against Germany and German trade when the war is finished. I consider it the duty of every man and woman in the United States to lend their efforts to this end and refuse to be drawn into any business trade with Germany in the future, and it is their duty to voice these sentiments to this effect now, and impress upon their children the importance of continuing so to do; thus only can these barbarians be justly punished.

Brisk Recruiting in Ulster.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The impression has been given in certain quarters that the Protestant North of Ireland was opposed to conscription and was inclined to give the Government trouble. I am today in receipt of a letter from Belfast, dated April 26, from a reliable correspondent, who says: "There was a big rush in recruiting, over 2,000 in Belfast, the first week," (after passing the act.) Be it remembered that this is after Ulster had given over 80 per cent. of the total recruits from all Ireland. (Figures only up to Oct. 15, 1916; the proportion would be even greater since.)

THE SONG OF THE SHIPBUILDER

Written for the National Service Section of the United States Shipping Board and dedicated to the men in the ship trades.

We work in the oldest stuff of the world—
Water and iron and fire and air,
And the courage of men with a flag unfurled,
To build a bridge from here over there.

With a fleet of ships we'll span the sea,
To carry supplies to you in France—
Guns and food and T. N. T.—
And whatever you need for the big advance.

And what's the difference where we work—
At a bench with a hammer, or a trench at the front?
We all are needed and will not shirk;
We are done with delays! Count us in at the hunt.

And what's the difference how we fight—
With blood or money, labor or guns?
We'll keep the bridge building day and night,
Till we trestle the sea to get to the Huns.

And what's the difference where you are?
We're all on the job with a will to win:
So, boys, do your bit with your gun in the war;
We're doing our bit with the rivet machine.

We'll keep the bridge building night and day;
We'll speed up ahead of the submarine;
We'll build to you, boys, so keep 'em at bay;
We're doing our bit with the rivet machine.

Boys, keep up your courage, we're getting to you,
Khaki or overalls, count us all in—
Knapsacks or dinner pails, we're fighting, too,
And doing our bit with the rivet machine.

In camp or the shipyard we all of us swear
That the hope we are building will span to Berlin;
We're all of us soldiers, to do or to dare;
And we're doing our bit with the rivet machine.

POST OFFICE BILL PASSED.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Post Office Appropriation bill, granting wage increases to postal employes and authorizing Federal acquisition of the pneumatic mail tube systems in six of the largest cities of the country, was passed by the Senate late today without a record vote. The bill, which provides for appropriations of $381,000,000, an increase of $47,300,000 over the House bill, now goes to conference.

Efforts to attach an amendment suspending for at least a year operation of the act, effective July 1, increasing second-class postal rates were abandoned after supporters of the amendment became convinced that it would be defeated. Many Senators questioned the legality of attaching it to an appropriation bill. An effort will be made to add it to some other bill, it is said.

Under the bill as adopted, city mail carriers, clerks, and other postal employes receive an increase in pay of $200 a year, and rural carriers 20 per cent. Overtime pay for postal employes also is provided for in a committee amendment, which the Senate adopted today, 26 to 21, after it once had rejected it.

The Senate retained House provisions appropriating $100,000 for experiments in airplane mail service between cities to be designated by the Postmaster General, and fixing the postage cost for such mail at 24 cents an ounce, or fraction thereof. Senator King of Utah, Democrat, led a fight to eliminate this section, asserting that such experiments should not be conducted during the war, because of the need of airplanes in France.

Before passing the bill the Senate, by a vote of 31 to 19, ratified its action of last Tuesday in accepting the amendment to purchase the pneumatic mail tubes in New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and St. Louis. The proposal was opposed by Postmaster General Burleson.

58 MORE CONCRETE SHIPS.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Shipping Board has decided to proceed immediately on a large scale with the building of concrete ships, and will increase the program out of the appropriation of $2,250,000,000 which has been asked for the next fiscal year.

Eighteen concrete ships, aggregating 117,500 tons, have been contracted for. It was announced today that fifty-eight other concrete vessels, at a cost of about $42,250,000, will be ordered as soon as sites for the four new Government yards are chosen. A committee of experts is on the Pacific Coast looking over available ground, after a long trip through the South on a similar mission. Its recommendations are expected to be made soon.

Virtually all of the new ships will be of 7,500 tons each, and many of them will be tankers for the oil trade. Urgent need for ships is felt nowhere more severely at the present time than in the lack of tank steamers for carrying fuel oil to Atlantic Coast ports for shipment to the interior. Most of the existing tank steamers have been taken from coastwise trade for service with the navy.

WAR EXPENSES MOUNT.

Treasury Department Reports $1,229,000,000 Paid Out in March.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Rapid increase in expenses for the army, navy, and shipbuilding program was shown today by a Treasury report covering March expenditures of $1,229,000,000. The Government spent $570,000,000 for the military establishment in March, $47,000,000 more than in the month previous; the naval establishment cost $143,000,000, as compared with $92,000,000, and the Shipping Board spent $116,000,000, against $58,000,000. Completion of contracts was responsible for much of the increase.

For the nine months ended April 1, expenditures included: Military establishment, $3,312,000,000; naval establishment, $921,000,000; Shipping Board, $497,000,000; Treasury Department, $141,000,000; civil and Spanish war pensions, $132,000,000.

The Government's net debt on April 1 was $9,585,000,000, which did not include any of the Third Liberty Loan. Receipts from the Third Liberty Loan today swelled the Treasury's net working balance to $1,647,000,000, the highest record for several months.

MEMORIAL DAY STANDS.

Celebration Not Modified by Prayer Proclamation, President Says.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—President Wilson asked today that Memorial Day be observed as usual and announced that in proclaiming May 30 a day of prayer he did not intend to suggest a modification of the usual memorial exercises. The statement was issued in response to inquiries as to whether the usual exercises should be changed. In some places arrangements had been made to eliminate the usual celebration and to devote the entire day to prayer.

A request that the President suggest to the allied Governments that they designate May 30 as a day for fasting and prayer for successful termination of the war and an honorable lasting peace was made in a resolution introduced today by Representative Campbell of Kansas.

ORGANIZE WOMEN POLICE.

Headquarters School to Train Force of 10,000 as Reserves.

Following up Special Deputy Police Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker's plans to form a police reserve of women, which were approved last week by Commissioner Enright, the following order was sent last night from Police Headquarters to all Inspectors and Precinct Captains:

"You will organize in each precinct within your district a unit of women police reserves, to be made up of patriotic women who desire to render helpful and patriotic work at this time.

"One competent woman will be assigned to command, whose duties will be equivalent to that of a Police Reserve Captain.

"The duties of the Women Police Reserve will be to carry on the auxiliary Red Cross work now being done by the auxiliaries attached to the different precincts; to be vigilant and alert in their respective localities; to discover irregular and unlawful conditions, and to report the same to this department; to teach patriotism and civic duty, and aid in the Americanization of the alien element of the population; to detect and report cases of disloyalty and sedition, relieve cases of distress and destitution, comfort the unfortunate, advise and direct the weak, foolish and idle, and set an example of usefulness and patriotic devotion. Members of the Women's Reserve can be very useful also in looking after boys and girls who may be prone to be delinquent, keeping bad company or pursuing a course that would lead to crime.

"The reserve will be composed of 10,000 women. Women of ability and character will be sought to become members.

"A Woman's Police Training Corps, composed of women between the ages of 18 and 30, will be organized at Headquarters, and will receive training of police matrons, probation officers, and prison attendants."

WOULD LIST ALL MEN TO 45 FOR WAR WORK

Senator Cummins Warns It Is Not Enough to Prepare to Send 5,000,000 Fighters Abroad.

BROAD VIEW OF OUR TASK

Believes Needs Are Greater Than Has Been Realized—Not Sure Men Over 45 Shouldn't Be Summoned.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—In urging the Senate to adopt his resolution calling for information from the Government upon the country's industrial power, Senator Cummins of Iowa today declared that not only must America have 5,000,000 men in France within the next two years, but it must organize a civilian army to save industry from collapse. In his resolution Senator Cummins asks the Secretary of Labor and other officials for data as to the number of men available for industrial and agricultural work.

"My proposition is that every able-bodied man in this country between the ages of 18 and 45—and I am not sure that a few years ought to be added to the latter limit—must either work in a useful way or fight," said Senator Cummins.

"This at least should be the policy until we can see clearly that there is a surplus of civil energy that can be permitted to go to waste in unnecessary labor or lie dormant in idleness.

"It must be obvious to every thoughtful man that the time has come for a careful, comprehensive, serious survey of the entire war situation as it now presents itself. Whatever may have been our former view with respect to a speedy termination of hostilities, it is now reasonably certain that we have before us a long and severe struggle which, if it is brought to a successful end, as it must be, will demand our full strength of both men and material.

"It is not enough to do no more than to drive the Kaiser from power; it is not enough merely to send his brood of murderers into obscurity; it is not enough to take from his conspicuous butchers the weapons they are using in the deadly conflict. We must destroy forever the military menace of that nation, and crush beyond resurrection the criminal designs and the cruel ambitions of the German people—designs and ambitions which through fifty years of education and training have resulted in a savage, brutal, and remorseless society—the implacable foe of Christian civilization, free institutions, and the peace of the world.

"The undertaking which we have assumed has gradually developed into the most colossal task which has ever fallen upon mankind. The difficulties which attend our part in accomplishing the common object of the allied countries are tremendously magnified by one unchangeable fact—an ocean nearly 3,000 miles in width separates us from the battlefields of Europe, and the power we exert here must be extraordinary if we would strike with sufficient force in the fields of Belgium, France, and Italy.

"If our problem consisted simply in raising fighting men, it would be an easy one, for the patriotism, spirit, and grim determination of the people of this country to settle, once for all, the vital issue between Germany and the world would call to the ranks half the population of the Republic. There are, however, other things to be done not less important than our fighting forces.

"We must clothe, equip, and sustain the army and the navy. We must build ships, manufacture guns, cannon and powder, and other infinite paraphernalia of war. We must transport both men and material through submarines and mines to a foreign shore. We must produce all that the army and navy demand for their efficiency, and all that is required for the life, health, and comfort of the men, women, and children who are not enrolled in the fighting organizations. Not only so, but we must produce enough to supply the imperative necessities of Great Britain, France, and Italy and to continue our essential commerce with neutral and friendly nations.

"It will not be disputed that to do this successfully and continuously all the energies of all the people must not only be called into action, but they must be co-ordinated, correlated, and guided by wise, intelligent, far-seeing statesmanship, both in legislation and in execution.

"It is my opinion that before two years shall have passed if we do not call five millions of men into the military service we will have failed to do our part in the war, and will not be able to win the kind of victory which will justify the indescribable losses we will suffer. Everybody understands that to take five millions of our men from industrial occupations in the way those already taken have been enlisted, or selected, would result in an immediate collapse of production and leave not only our army without sustenance and equipment, but the civilians of the United States, Great Britain, France, and Italy hopeless and helpless.

"Our army must be very largely increased, and at the same time it is of vital importance that our naval and coast defense program should not only be fully and quickly carried out but that it be at once greatly enlarged. It makes me shudder when I think of the partial suspension of work on warships and the almost total suspension of coast defenses because workmen and material are so much needed in other preparations. If by any chance—not probable, but possible—Germany should win in France, and America stood alone against this monster of the ages, our first and maybe our only protection from the hate and power of the enemy would be found in the strength of our navy and the resistance of our fortifications.

"It must not be understood that I am advocating, or that I favor, drafting men for civil pursuits. The constitutionality of a measure of that kind may well be doubted, but entirely aside from the legal aspects of the matter it would be in the highest degree unwise and impractical. The object can be attained through voluntary selection, with the propert organization and leadership. The age of conscription for military service can be advanced to any point, and the idle man or the man whose employment contributes nothing to the welfare of the nation can be denied the privilege of exemption, and a judicious classification will complete the plan.

"Under such a restriction every capable man would be either in the army or navy or working directly or indirectly for the army or navy. Every able-bodied citizen would be either fighting for humanity or working for humanity, and, thus organized for efficiency, we can perform the task to which we have set our hands, win the final victory and establish a just and enduring peace."

FINDS SERIOUS DELAY IN POSTAL SERVICE

Merchants' Association Issues Report on Result of Five Months' Investigation.

MAIL 13 DAYS FROM SOUTH

Efficiency of Department Said to be Less Than People Have Right to Expect—Inquiry Asked.

The Merchants' Association of New York, through its Director of Research, Fred D. De Beard, yesterday presented to the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives in Washington a report comprising the results of a five months' investigation by the association of mail delays all over the United States. In the report, which has been approved by the Executive Committee of the association, it is stated that the efficiency of the Post Office officials has been materially less than the people have a right to expect and that the delay in the transmission of the mails has caused serious inconvenience to American business men from one end of the country to the other. An investigation of postal methods, with a view to increasing the efficiency of the department, is suggested.

(1) That mails are not dispatched with former frequency;
(2) That they are not fully worked in transit;
(3) That in consequence much stuck letter mail is turned into the terminal stations and there materially delayed;
(4) That inferior mails move with extreme slowness.
(5) That train delays are not a principal cause of slowness in the mails, but that
(6) Insufficiency in the number of railway postal cars, their withdrawal from a great number of routes throughout the United States, and reduction of the crews of railway postal cars appear to be the main causes of the conditions shown.

An additional cause, says the report, is the space basis of payment to the railroads, which leads to the consolidation of mails upon a lessened number of trains, thereby reducing the frequency of dispatch, causing the detention of trains for the purpose of transferring mails and overburdening storage cars to such an extent as to prevent the proper working of mails in transit, resulting in the detention of such mails in terminal stations.

The criticism of mail service in New York first became known last December when the Broadway Association, after a series of test letters mailed in various parts of the city, showed that mails were far from regular even within the city. Letters from Washington, D. C., and outlying places, such as Poughkeepsie, also showed that something was wrong. The Broadway Association addressed a report to Postmaster Patten of New York, and about the same time the Merchants' Association announced they would make a test that would cover the entire country. The present report is the outcome of this test. The inquiry was ordered by the Board of Directors of the association, and was made by the association's Committee on Postal Affairs, aided by the Research Bureau and a corps of experts.

Through the American Bankers' Association envelopes were obtained covering the daily mail for a ten-day period in twenty-three banking centres. An analysis was made of the postal train records on twenty-six railroads to develop the causes and extent of the delays to those trains. Analysis was also made to learn from Post Office reports of the reductions in postal car service.

In addition, about ten thousand test letters with return envelopes were mailed in two series to 800 correspondents scattered from one end of the United States to the other. In the first test one letter and in the second test two letters at different hours were mailed to correspondents daily for twelve consecutive days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays. These various tests and analyses brought out the following conditions of fact, which were embodied in the report:

First, that material and in many cases serious delays in the transmission of mails are general throughout the United States; second, that on more than 25 per cent. of the postal trains mail service has been wholly abolished or greatly curtailed; third, serious delays occur in the assorting and forwarding of mails in terminal stations; fourth, owing to insufficient postal car space or insufficient time for loading, large quantities of mail are habitually left on platforms of principal stations of important mail routes from New York; fifth, the movement of important postal trains has been until recently seriously delayed by the conditions imposed by the Post Office Department as to loading and unloading of mail at important stations.

The report cites cases of where letters have been as long as from ten to thirteen days in transmission between cities in the South and New York.

In the matter of terminal delays, the report has this to say about conditions in New York City:

In this city terminal delays to inferior mails have been, during recent months, continuous and prolonged, and great accumulations of mail have resulted. For many weeks not only were the platforms at the Pennsylvania terminal crowded to the ceiling, but large stacks of mail, probably numbering several thousand sacks, were piled in the adjoining area, open to the sky and without protection. By reason of the great accumulation, no space was left for working, and much of the mail was untouched for many successive days. In this case the condition seems to have been in large part due to the failure of the department to comply with the Postmaster's urgent demand for more space. It is stated that the congestion, after persisting for weeks, was finally cleared up by a desperate remedy, namely, by shipping the unworked mail to the extent of several carloads per week to other cities, there to be assorted and forwarded. Similar conditions have frequently prevailed at the Grand Central terminal station, and considerable detention there of inferior mails is common.

In view of the great increase in postal business it might be reasonably expected that the facilities of the department would have been correspondingly expanded to cope with the increased business. This has not been done. On the contrary, by reason of a fundamental change in departmental policy and methods, postal facilities have been greatly reduced, with the result that the efficiency of the service has been seriously impaired. The railway postal car service—the most essential and serviceable factor in the prompt movement of the mail—has been heavily curtailed without supplying an adequate substitute.

Camp Concert at Mrs. Hammond's.

The ballroom at the residence of Mrs. John Henry Hammond, 9 East Ninety-first Street, was the scene yesterday afternoon of a camp concert, given by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rogers in aid of the Art Workers' Club for Women.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers recently returned from a tour of the camps at the front where they entertained the American soldiers as well as the men of the Allies. They repeated their program of entertainment for the soldiers, giving amusing anecdotes, recitations, and songs. The several hundred women assembled joined heartily in the chorus when Mr. Rogers sang "Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag."

TO OUST DR. LUCK FROM PASSAIC SCHOOL BOARD

Mayor Says He Will Remove German-American for "Un-American Utterances."

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 16.—Dr. Paul Luck, leading member of the German-American Alliance and the Passaic Turn Verein and a member of the Board of Education, will be removed as a member of the School Board by action of Mayor George N. Seger, who today announced that he would demand his resignation "on the grounds that his recent utterances in the press were un-American."

Dr. Luck, prior to the meeting of the School Board on Monday evening of this week, when the German language was eliminated from the High School curriculum, bitterly assailed those who petitioned the board for its expulsion. He declared that they were "blockheads," and that the members of the local branch of the American Defense Society, who petitioned the board, were "ridiculous."

In a statement given to reporters on Monday morning, Dr. Luck highly praised German Kultur and the German ideas of education, comparing them with the American, which, he said, were "not good." He declared that German should be taught in every school in the country and that it should be made compulsory. The course in the High School in this city was elective and nearly 300 students took the subject.

There were about fifty citizens present at the board meeting on Monday evening, who demanded of the board that it eliminate the subject. Dr. Luck denounced them openly at the meeting. When William W. Welch, a Passaic lawyer, said that the statements in the newspapers of Monday afternoon made by Dr. Luck "were more seditious than those made by men now in internment camps," Dr. Luck replied:

"But you can't intern me; I am an American citizen."

Mr. Walch's answer to that was that his citizenship papers could be taken away from him by the Government, and that he could then be interned.

Dr. Luck declared to newspaper men on Monday that "a country that has fought the whole world for more than three years must be a wonderful country, and the language of that country worthy of studying."

Mayor Seger said that he had received a "large number" of letters from citizens who demanded that Dr. Luck be removed, and that a greater number had made the same demand to him personally.

"I feel," he said, "that the demand is general and that there is a general feeling that the doctor's utterances are un-American."

Dr. Luck is about 55 years old. He was born in Germany and came to America twenty-six years ago. He has been a citizen. He is an eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist, and is considered well-to-do. He has long been active in the German-American organizations in Passaic, especially the German-American Alliance and the Passaic Turn Verein, and he was active in the big German-Austro-Hungarian War Fund drive before the United States entered the war.

Even Dr. Luck's closest friends were greatly surprised at his statements. They say that they always felt he was loyal to the United States and that they never knew him to give Germany any praise.

He was appointed a member of the Board of Education a little more than a year ago by Mayor Seger.

In an effort to stop the spread of anarchistic propaganda, Federal officials last night arrested Salvatore Sergi, a barber of 112 East Hanover Street, Trenton, N. J. The warrant was forwarded from the Department of Labor in Washington. Sergi came here in 1917 from Italy, and will probably be deported.

Frederick Fedoff and Tony Tachin, convicted of making seditious speeches in Bayonne recently, were yesterday sentenced to serve ten years in State's prison.

John Sulzcki of 157 Eighth Street, Jersey City, a Russian, was held in $5,000 bail in Jersey City yesterday on the charge that he tore up a service flag and made disloyal remarks about the Government.

Oscar Matson, a Finn, who was found wandering around the Picatinny Arsenal, near Dover, N. J., with wood alcohol and matches in his possession, was arrested last night by army intelligence officers. No charge has been made against the man. He is suspected of having come into the country without going through the immigrant inspection and, if this is proved, he will be deported.

DRAFT BILL GOES TO WILSON

House Adopts Conference Report Exempting Medical Students.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The House today passed without a record vote the conference report on the bill requiring registration in the draft of youths who have become 21 years of age since June 5 last. The Senate previously had agreed to the report, and after its passage by the House it was sent to the President.

As finally agreed to, the bill provides that men registered under it shall be placed at the bottom of the lists of those classes to which they will be assigned, and that students now in medical and theological schools shall be exempt from the draft.

The only opposition to the bill in the House today was on the student exemption feature. Representative McKenzie of Illinois, Republican, denounced the provision as "class legislation, un-American, and violative of the principle that all Americans are equal."

Representative Kahn of California, Republican, in reply, said it was necessary to exempt medical students in order that the doctors who lose their lives in the war may be replaced and the country saved from a recurrence of the prevalence of "quacks" from which it suffered some twenty-five years ago.

SCHOOL TO RAISE $300,000.

A campaign for a war service fund of $300,000 is being conducted by the St. Agnes School for Girls of Albany, to provide an endowment to be used in giving free instruction and board to the daughters of men in the army and navy of the United States, who are without means or are killed in service. No discrimination will be made between children of different religions. At least 50 per cent. of the fund will be invested in Liberty bonds, it is said. A subscription of $15,000 will provide an endowed scholarship, $700 will pay for a student for a year, including vacations, and $500 will pay for a student for a school year. All contributions, it is announced, should be made payable to the St. Agnes's School War Fund and sent to Jonas H. Brooks, Treasurer, 55 Elk Street, Albany, N. Y.

OPEN DRIVE TO SAVE 4,700 BABIES HERE

Dr. S. Josephine Baker Urges Co-operation of Women in Nation-Wide Campaign.

CRADLE DEADLIER THAN WAR

Health Expert Says 4 Per Cent. Die in Allied Armies and 12 Per Cent. in Infancy.

Accepting as their inspiration the slogan "We must Hooverize our children" and "No mother's baby is safe until every mother's baby is safe," the Health Committee of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense met yesterday afternoon at the City Hall and officially opened the Federal Children's Year, the object of which is to aid in saving the lives of 100,000 children under 5 years of age in the United States.

Dr. S. Josephine Baker, Director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Health Department, who acted as Chairman, announced that to New York City had been assigned the task of saving the lives of 4,700 babies under the age of 5 in the coming year. The meeting was attended by several hundred delegates from a large number of social, civic, and neighborhood organizations.

In outlining the scope of the work, Dr. Baker said that there were four casualties in the allied armies out of every 100 men engaged in the course of the year.

"In the United States, 12 babies out of every 100 die in the course of the year," she added. "So that one way of putting it would be to say that it is three times safer to be a soldier in the trenches in this horrible war than to be a baby in the cradle in the United States.

"It is not only a necessity but a patriotic duty to see that our children are well cared for," she continued. "We are spending our manhood in the war but we cannot afford to lose the next generation. The children of this generation will take up the affairs of the world in the period of reconstruction and carry it on.

"In Europe they have seen fit to save more babies and to devote more time and money to child welfare work than to anything else except fighting," Dr. Baker declared. With reference to malnutrition, she asserted that at the present time but 1,500,000 quarts of milk were sold in the city, a decline of 500,000 below that of last year.

"The children of the poor have almost been compelled to forego the use of milk from their diet and they have been given wine, tea, and beer instead," she added. "In New York City the birth rate has already gone down since we entered the war. The infant death rate is increasing and undernourishment is increasing. We are going through the same experience of Europe only we are three years behind those countries, but we have not learned our lesson.

"We are going to need the wholehearted and vigorous assistance of every woman in the city. We are going to have volunteer doctors and we must have volunteer assistants to them, women who will work in the examination centres and who will do the follow-up work. In a week or two Teachers College will start a training course for volunteer helpers, and I hope many women will take the course."

The five boroughs of New York City will co-operate in the work. The Committee on Home Care and Nursing, of which Miss Lillian Wald is Chairman, is planning a house-to-house canvass in order that every mother may be reached. Meetings and exhibits will be held in all the boroughs.

In the course of the meeting copies of the President's letter indorsing the movement were passed around. Volunteers were asked to apply to the Headquarters for Children's Year, 139 Centre Street.

Health Commissioner Copeland returned yesterday from Washington, and announced that he had established working relations with the Federal departments. He said he invited two of the sanitarians from the Navy Department and the Public Health Service to come to New York in order to make a survey with a view to aiding the Health Department control those matters that were of interest to the Government. The Federal authorities will take no internes away from the city hospitals or do anything to embarrass the city Health Department, Dr. Copeland said, except in cases of stern necessity.

Mrs. Laura G. Cauble, Deputy Commissioner of Public Markets, called on the Health Commissioner yesterday, and discussed with him the problem of furnishing the poor of the city with milk at low prices. Dr. Copeland said that next week he would hold a conference with the city and State Commissioners of Food, and with some farmers, and the question of the milk supply would be gone into.

HEALTH DRIVE OPENS MAY 26.

Will Aim to Rid City of Dump Heaps and Piles of Rubbish.

Health Commissioner Copeland, speaking before the Civic Club, 14 West Twelfth Street, announced last night that the health drive of his department would begin on Sunday, May 26, and would last a week. The purpose of the drive will be to rid the city of the dump heaps and rubbish piles and the insanitary accumulations due to neglect and carelessness that contribute to disease.

Dr. Copeland said that it was his purpose to further the work of the Bureau of Public Health Education and not to disband this activity of the department. He also declared that the Bureau of Child Hygiene would devote itself with even greater energy than in the past to every activity of the Department of Health that had to do with the health and development of child life in the city.

The Health Commissioner announced that the facilities of the Health Department had been placed at the disposal of the Federal authorities in the effort to care for the soldiers and sailors who visit and pass through the city.

War Relief Committee Estimate Year's Need at $15,000,000.

It was announced by the American Jewish Relief Committee for Sufferers from the War yesterday that $2,786,400 had been collected for the 1918 fund of the organization by appeals sent to Jews throughout the country. It was added that to meet increasing demands in providing food and clothing for the Jews in Europe it had been estimated that the American Jewish Relief Committee must raise a fund of $15,000,000 this year. Recent cablegrams tell of increased suffering among the three million Jews in Poland and Eastern Europe, it was said.

According to an officer of the committee, Baltimore raised $430,000, while Wilmington, Del., is nearing the close of a drive for $100,000. Clarksdale, Miss., with a Jewish population of thirty-three families, led in per capita contributions, raising $12,000. A spirit of co-operation between Jew and Gentile in the cause of war relief work was displayed throughout the campaign, said the committee's representative, as many contributions were received from non-Jews.

THREATEN TO STOP ALL SUBWAY WORK

Employes Demand Advance of One-third—Service Board Asks Estimate Board to Act.

About a week ago the men employed on the new subways notified the contractors that unless they received a 33 per cent. increase in their wages by May 15 they would seek work elsewhere. The men were asked to delay action until the contractors could discuss the matter with the Mayor and the Public Service Commission, under the new law permitting the commission and the Board of Estimate to abrogate present contracts and save the contractors from further loss due to increased costs of labor and materials.

On Tuesday representatives of the contractors and the workmen discussed the matter with the commission, and later went to City Hall to talk with the Mayor, but the Mayor refused to see them without a special appointment. Yesterday the contractors again called upon the commission, and Acting Chairman Whitney wrote to the Board of Estimate, setting forth the need for haste if the 5,000 men employed on the subway were to continue the work. After referring to the law permitting new arrangements to be made with contractors, the letter said:

"It seems important that both the Board of Estimate and the commission should at once declare whether they propose to proceed under this law. It is the opinion of the commission that such a declaration should be made at this time because both the labor forces and the contractors should know what the attitude of these bodies will be. If relief is assured where it is warranted by the facts it would undoubtedly stabilize the labor situation and help the contractors in fixing their policy.

"The situation is that the labor organizations have made a demand upon the commission and the contractors for the scale of wages now offered in similar lines by the Federal Government in this vicinity. The declaration to the commission by the contractors' association is that unless relief is possible the wages cannot be paid.

"On the other hand the officers of the labor unions state that unless the men are assured that they will receive this scale it will be impossible to hold them. To this extent, therefore, an emergency has arisen which can be met only under the authority granted by the Lockwood law."

The commission suggests that the Board of Estimate name a committee to confer with a similar committee of the commission to discuss the matter. The letter says a few months ago there remained $35,000,000 worth of work to be completed before $80,000,000 worth of rapid transit lines could be put into operation. But about $7,500,000 worth of work has been done since, so there remains less than $30,000,000 worth to be completed.

Part of the uncompleted work is in the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue Subways, which the commission hopes to have in operation by midsummer. It was said yesterday by representatives of the contractors that if the timbermen, laborers, drill runners, and other workmen should quit it would be impossible to hire men to take their places and that subway work would be halted indefinitely.

F. L. Cranford, President of the General Contractors' Association, said the wages of the men had been increased within two years by 67 per cent., and if the present demanded increase of 33 per cent. were granted it would mean that wages would have been doubled since the contracts were let.

Mr. Cranford said that one morning newspaper contained six full pages of want advertisements and that subway workers knew they could get employment immediately at a much higher pay.

GOETHALS EXPLAINS PLANS.

Tells House Committee How Supplies Will Be Shipped to Army.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Government's freight diversion plan, as explained to the House Military Committee today by Major Gen. Goethals, acting Quartermaster General, contemplates shipment of supplies to American troops as follows: From New York, 65 per cent.; Baltimore and Norfolk, 10 per cent. each, and Philadelphia, Charleston, and New Orleans, 5 per cent. each.

Major Gen. Black, chief of engineers, told the committee $230,000,000 was needed for cantonment construction in France, and asked for $250,000,000 more for the purchase in France of supplies other than railroad materials.

General Goethals said terminal storage depots at the various ports would be of a permanent character. He asked an additional $150,000,000 for their construction, which will make a total of $300,000,000.

Asked if the large amount of freight intended for shipment through New York would not add to the congestion of the port, General Goethals said the Allies were arranging to move a large part of the future supplies through Southern ports, which would relieve New York. General Goethals said the Brooklyn terminals would not be abandoned in favor of a proposed location in New Jersey.

The committee will report the army bill, on which today's hearings were based, substantially in accord with the estimates already made public, totaling $11,771,666,848. About $3,000,000,000 for heavy ordnance and fortifications will be recommended in addition by another committee.

LEVI P. MORTON 94.

In excellent health and keenly interested in affairs, particularly the war, Levi P. Morton, once Vice President, yesterday celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday. At his home, 400 Park Avenue, it was said that Mr. Morton had not yet returned from his usual six months' stay in Washington, but that he intended to do so in a couple of days, preparatory to passing the Summer at Ellerslie, his 1,000-acre estate at Rhinecliff-on-Hudson.

Mr. Morton was born at Shoreham, Vt., on May 16, 1824. He had retired from active political life when, in 1888, he accepted the nomination as Benjamin Harrison's running mate. Two years after he ceased to be Vice President he became Governor of New York, 1895-96. From 1881 to 1885 he was Minister to France.

Miss Mary W. McBurney a Bride.

The marriage of William Howard Gardiner, formerly of Boston, but who has resided for several years in New York, and Miss Mary W. McBurney, the daughter of Mrs. John W. McBurney, took place yesterday at the residence of the bride's mother, 118 East Fifty-fourth Street, in the presence of the members of the family and a few close friends. As Mrs. McBurney is in mourning, the wedding was a quiet one, and the bride had no attendants. Mr. Gardiner's best man was Candler Cobb. Mrs. Gardiner is a niece of Henry F. Eldridge, her mother having been Miss Louisa Eldridge.

Miss Patterson to Wed Tomorrow.

The wedding of Miss Emily Marie Patterson, granddaughter of former United States Marshal John Wesley Jacobus and Mrs. Jacobus of this city, and Charles Benjamin Brush will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Central Presbyterian Church, Fifty-seventh Street and Madison Avenue. Miss Patterson has been active in Red Cross work.

Miss Faison Wed to Lieut. Norris.

Announcement is made of the marriage on Wednesday of Lieutenant John Langdon Norris of Boston, who has been assigned to aviation duty at Wichita, Kan., and Miss Elizabeth Faison, a daughter of Dr. W. F. Faison and Mrs. Faison, at their residence, 45 Glenwood Avenue, Jersey City. The Lieutenant and his bride will go to Wichita, Kan., to remain for the present.

TO DISCUSS STEEL NEEDS WITH BARUCH

COAL PROBLEM INVOLVED

Department's Requirements to be Canvassed and the Possible Output Considered.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Executives representing the large steel concerns will meet Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the War Industries Board, here tomorrow to determine the most effective way to control and distribute the steel output of the nation to help win the war. All phases of the situation, including the possible curtailment of less essential industries, coal production and transportation, will be considered. Government departments engaged in war work will be asked to submit estimates and the steel producers will be called upon for figures of plant capacity.

Among those asked to attend the conference are Charles M. Schwab, Chairman of the Board of Bethlehem Steel and Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the Shipping Board; E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corporation; J. A. Topping, Chairman of the Board of the Republic Iron & Steel Company; E. A. S. Clarke, President of the Lackawanna Steel Company; E. G. Grace, President of the Bethlehem Steel Company; J. A. Campbell, President of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, and J. A. Burden, President of the Burden Iron Company.

By some who are in close touch with the steel situation it has been held that the solution of the problems confronting the Government largely depends upon means to increase the coal supply and better the transportation facilities so that there will be no repetition of the conditions of last Winter.

In connection with the output of steel it has been argued that there will be sufficient for ship construction and all the ammunition and guns that can be transported without cutting down many less essential industries to a point that would mean practical suspension.

Such a situation, it has been held, does not call for more control of the steel industries than those which have already been taken.

A stir has been caused by proposals to cut the output of passenger automobiles to 25 per cent. of normal and treat the piano industry in a similar manner. Arguments against such steps have served to suspend, temporarily at least, a program of drastic curtailment of many industries.

It is believed that a better idea of the steps necessary to speed up the war program will be obtained when estimates, showing the needs of the War and Navy Departments and Shipping Board, are presented in concrete form. It can then be determined whether the needs of these departments will permit the use of steel by other industries on any considerable scale and whether it is practicable to attempt a large increase in the output of the steel mills.

The plans of the Shipping Board for expansion of its program are a factor in bringing about the present situation. The Shipping Board will want steel enough next year to build more than 10,000,000 tons of steel ships. Officials of the steel industries think that this amount can be supplied in addition to the requirements of the navy and the army without cutting off many of the less essential industries.

COULD BLOCK PUBLISHERS.

Suggestion That Move to Canada to Avoid Rates Would Be Valueless.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The announcement that periodical publishers were contemplating the removal of their publishing houses to Canada to avail themselves of a possible advantage over the zone system of mailing rates in this country, which goes into effect July 1, attracted very little attention at the Post Office Department today. The matter was brought to the attention of Postmaster General Burleson but he had no comment to make upon it. Assistant Postmaster General J. S. Coons, who has charge of the administration of postal rates, said he had not sufficiently examined the proposition to gather just what the publishers thought they could accomplish.

An official in the department who said he could not undertake to speak for the attitude of the Postmaster General or for the policy of the Administration upon the matter, said: "The idea of moving their business to Canada in advance of any understanding with the department would be fatal. Such matters are so easily controlled by the Governments concerned that little time would elapse before the publishers would find themselves as badly off in Canada as they think they will be here.

"The postal laws can be quickly changed by international postal conventions, and, even if that were not the practice, Congress could speedily act in a manner to catch up with the proposed arrangement and flank it entirely. About ten years ago a question arose as to the treatment of our publishers in Canada. The Canadian postal authorities took the position that they could not carry our magazines and weeklies at the second-class rates prevailing in the United States, and announced the intention to make rates based on cost. The United States Post Office Department sent Second Assistant Postmaster General Shalenberger and Mr. Bacon, the Chief Law Clerk of the department at that time, to Canada and an amendment to the existing postal treaty was negotiated by which the matter was promptly adjusted to the satisfaction of both countries and the publishers.

"In the present case this might not be so easily attainable, but any effort to get by the new zone rates if this Government seriously proposes to collect them would hardly make headway long. So far as I know the matter, however, has hardly come to the attention of officials here in the department. I confess that until it was called to my attention I had not noticed the proposal. The plan I suppose would be in many cases for the publishers to move their printed periodicals by freight or express in bulk to convenient Canadian points for mailing, and in others the printing could actually be done in Canada. To establish the business of printing on the scale required for some of our publications would be a gigantic task, involving large expenditure of capital that could hardly be risked in the face of the certain action of both Governments to adjust any possible advantage in rates for Canadian mail matter over that of this country."

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 16.—Discussing the suggestion that American magazine publishers might find it profitable to issue their periodicals from Canada, offered by Charles Johnson Post, director of the Publishers' Advisory Board, at a meeting yesterday in New York, Cyrus K. Curtis, President of the Curtis Publishing Company, today said:

"If the postal authorities continue their present attitude toward the publishing business of the country it may be that, in desperation, they will have to take some such step in the future, provided they are convinced there will be no change for the better in the situation. In the present stage, however, the proposition seems to be too vague to warrant further discussion."

George B. Harris Suffers a Stroke.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 16.—George B. Harris, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Burlington Railroad, suffered a slight stroke of apoplexy on Wednesday morning, but today he was reported better. His brother, John F. Harris, of Harris, Winthrop & Co., formerly of Chicago and now a resident of New York, is at his brother's bedside. Mr. Harris has been connected with the Burlington road for fifty-two years. He is 70 years old. In 1910 he retired from the Presidency of the road after nine years in that office.

THOMAS F. FREEL DEAD.

Superintendent of the S. P. C. A. Was Formerly Fire Marshal.

Thomas F. Freel, Superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, died suddenly from pneumonia yesterday at his home, 64 Bay Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, in his fifty-sixth year. Mr. Freel had been with the S. P. C. A. for ten years, and before that had a long career in the New York Fire Department, serving as a Fire Marshal in the administration of Mayor Low.

Mr. Freel was born in this city, and attended St. James's School. He had been a member of the Fire Department for twenty-seven years at the time of his retirement ten years ago. He rose to be Battalion Chief and served several years as an Assistant Fire Marshal before he became Marshal. While a member of the fire-fighting force he received the Stephenson Medal for efficiency, and a Congressional medal for bravery in rescuing persons during his service with the harbor squad.

Dr. B. E. Jacobson Dies from Tumor.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 16.—A tumor which grew to such dimensions that made it impossible for the other organs of the chest cavity to function properly caused the death today of Dr. B. E. Jacobson, chief resident physician at the Hebrew Hospital, at the institution.

The physician's ailment was an exceedingly rare one, and the case attracted much attention among medical men. A number of the most prominent physicians of Baltimore were called into consultation. The tumor's position made an operation inadvisable.

PAPER SURPLUS $105,165.

The North American Pulp and Paper Companies Trust reports a gross operating income of $3,528,451 in the year ended Dec. 31, a decline of $484,669 from the total in 1916. Operating expenses decreased $524,000, and the outside income of $629,886 showed an increase of $421,137. Administrative expenses, interest charges, &c., absorbed $1,218,500, and the final surplus before providing for minority stockholders' interests was $105,165, compared with a deficit of $309,360 the year before.

The annual meeting of stockholders was held on Tuesday. They were informed by J. E. A. Dubuc, President, that earnings had not come up to the expectations held at the opening of the year because of war conditions. The necessity of turning over part of the coal supply at the St. Lawrence mill to the Canadian Government, he said, had retarded operations. Fuel conditions for the current year, he stated, were satisfactory.

Stock Exchange Seat Brings $53,000

The New York Stock Exchange membership of Frederick H. Tate was yesterday posted for transfer to Thomas F. Nelson. The price of the seat was $53,000, a decline of $2,000 from the last previous sale of an Exchange seat. The firm of Auchincloss, Joost & Patrick yesterday proposed to substitute Sherman B. Joost as floor member in place of James C. Auchincloss.

Hotel Ansonia

Boneless Shad

Everyone likes Shad—but not the bones.

The magic of the Ansonia chef has removed the objection, namely, the bones. The deliciously rich and full flavored meat of this most famous fish is served in a number of ways, each as a masterpiece of culinary art. To those who have never tasted Shad a la Ansonia, there is a new epicurean delight in store.

WABASH EARNS $4,227,105.

The report of the Wabash Railway Company for the calendar year 1917, published yesterday, shows a decrease of operating income for the year of $1,127,567, in spite of an increase of $2,750,894 in gross operating revenues, which attained the record total of $40,471,999. Operating expenses increased during the year to $28,468,896, a rise of $3,594,479, while taxes increased by $283,983.

The net income of the road was $4,227,105, a decrease of $1,163,803, and sufficient to pay the 5 per cent. dividend on the A preferred stock, with approximately 4 per cent. left over for the 5 per cent. B preferred stock, and nothing for the common.

Good Neckwear Business.

Neckwear manufacturers report that buyers are still fairly active in this market, and that their factories are running to as near capacity production as the present labor conditions will permit. Guimpes of various sorts and sizes have had an unusual run of popularity this season, due, for one thing, it is said, to the vogue for sleeveless coats and sweaters. Neckpieces of foulard and of satin have been and still are well sought. Linen is also said to be favored for this purpose. Cuffs to match the collars are frequently wanted. White and very bright colors seem to have been the leaders of the season.

Men's Straw Hats Selling.

Business in men's straw hats is said to be starting off this season with a rush. As compared with last year, when the weather, it is recalled, was not so favorable to straw hats, buying has been exceptionally active. In many cases, the records for this same period a year ago have been doubled and even trebled. Manufacturers, therefore, are preparing for a rush of reorders which they believe will begin to come in very shortly if the present rate of buying at retail is at all maintained. It was pointed out that merchants generally did not buy heavily this year, and that therefore they have not very large stocks on hand.

Cutters Like Satin-Faced Silks.

From present indications, satin or shiny-faced silks are going to be the feature in Fall dresses. The famous crêpe twins—Georgette and de Chine—will again occupy a prominent place on the style stage. There is some talk that evening dresses of very soft taffetas will repeat former successes, but not much else is heard of in the trade these days so far as the so-called staples are concerned. With the new season so very young, manufacturers are in most cases loath to raise the curtain on their novelties, so what the new models will show in this respect is something of a mystery at the moment.

Retail Business Improves.

Business in the local department stores is said to be showing marked improvement this month over April. And in volume of business so far, this Spring is said to be a trifle ahead of the same period last year. One of the best features of the present business is said to be the great decrease in returned goods. Many stores report that their percentage of returns this Spring has been cut down one-half as compared with last Spring. "While this may be attributed in part to the seven days' limitation for returns which we have placed on all goods by Government request," said the general manager of one of the largest stores, "I think the fact that people are more careful these days in their purchases has a great deal more to do with it."

Men's Sports Clothes Sought.

Though it was thought last Winter by some authorities in the trade that sports-clothes for men would not move very rapidly this Spring, it is said now that the contrary is proving to be the case. White flannel and white linen trousers seem to be very much in demand for so early in the season, and knickerbockers for golf are also well taken. Coat sweaters of various sorts are popular and the darker colors, with navy blue predominating, are usually preferred. Sweaters made along Norfolk jacket lines seem to be particularly liked in many sections, though the straight coat sweater is the best general seller.

Gray Goods Prices Still Firmer.

Gray goods prices continued to firm up in the local market yesterday, in spite of the fact that business could easily have been larger. Second hands are now practically out of the market as sellers, and, with the increasing scarcity of goods resulting from their withdrawal, prices are heading back toward the recent high levels. June and July deliveries of 38½-inch 60-48s were sold yesterday by first hands at 16 cents, and similar shipments of 60-52s in that width sold at 16¼ cents from the same sources. The mills are not keen about selling 39-inch goods while the Government is still looking around, and this is particularly true of 68-72s. May deliveries of 39-inch 72-76s, however, were sold yesterday at 22¼ cents. Coarse-yarn goods continued featureless. This is the way mill prices on printcloths closed:

London Conditions Seen Here.

War-time conditions in London, as outlined by H. Gordon Selfridge on his recent visit to this country, are manifesting themselves in this city in so far as they affect the retail dry goods business. While reports from well-known establishments say that business is well ahead of last year now in dollars and cents, in spite of the Garfield days that set the January totals well back of those for the same month in 1917, a distinct change in the character of the consumer demand has come about. As was said by Mr. Selfridge about England, the war has made the rich poorer and the poor richer. The result is that, while the former are apparently economizing, the latter are doing the reverse. Expensive shoes, hats, hose, &c., are now being bought by women who four years ago would have thought it rank extravagance to pay more than $5 for a pair of shoes and $1.50 for a pair of silk stockings.

Raw Silk Prices Steady.

Reports from various leading raw silk markets indicate that buying has been none too heavy in the last week or so, but that prices are quite generally sustained at recent levels. Good silks of all kinds are in light supply at Yokohoma, and certain grades will be entirely missing from that market before long. At Canton there is some disposition on the part of reelers to attract new business, but no concessions of importance have been made. At Shanghai the feature has been the movement of tsatlees, the best grades of which have been disposed of for the remainder of the season. Milan is reported active, particularly so far as Lyons buyers are concerned, and prices are stronger. Local buying has been lately confined almost entirely to filling current needs.

Light-Colored Suits Coming Back.

Though retailers generally have done a fairly good business in women's suits of the lighter shades, many manufacturers are complaining that garments in these hues are coming back by the score. So marked has the returning of light-colored suits been, according to the bulletin of the National Garment Retailers' Association, that one well-known manufacturer says that if it were left to him this season, he would not make up suits in any other color than navy blue. This color, he says, was the best and nearly the only seller in Spring suits. He went on to say that in former years grays and tans had sold so well in the South and West, but that this season nearly every buyer had bought navy. As a result, he lost quite a tidy sum in making up tans, sands, and grays.

Accordion-Pleated "Tams" Now.

Some of the leading local wholesale millinery houses are introducing "tams" made entirely of accordion-pleated taffeta or Georgette. Hats of this type were displayed here about a year ago this time and were quite popular, but it is anticipated that they will meet with larger success this year because accordion pleating is being used extensively on dresses. The visit of the French "Blue Devils," with their "toppy" tams to this city may also have some effect in stimulating the demand for these models. Some of the new hats have small mushroom brims, while others fit close to the head and have no brims at all. They are trimmed with tassels or buttons placed on top of the crowns, the buttons sometimes being of soutache braid. A few models are offered in white, but the bulk of those seen at the moment are in navy blue.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

For the manner in which stocks acted yesterday in a session which saw the biggest turnover since the selling that took place on Feb. 1, 1917, there was an apparent explanation. The rise which it was so easy to initiate with the market almost bare of stocks got beyond control, and in doing so called attention to the unstable foundations on which the higher levels have been established. Prices have moved forward by from five to twenty points without any real distribution of securities, and whereas two weeks ago the banks were being called upon to finance only a small part of the normal amount of margin trading they are now being asked to carry in large volume stocks which have been marked up much more rapidly than any change in the underlying business or political factors justifies.

There was a marked difference in the attitude of bankers and professional traders toward the rise after the excited opening yesterday morning. They began to urge greater caution, and some of the largest commission houses which have been consistently bullish in recent weeks set about getting their customers out of the stocks which they bought in the final hours of the loan campaign. They consider the market in a vulnerable position, partly because of the lack of discretion shown in the eager rush for issues that were picked out for pool control, and partly because the rise has not brought about the short selling which would act as a brake on a decline in the event of bad news.

It is generally held by experienced traders that conditions have warranted a general advance in security prices, but the public has shown little disposition to take stocks on an investment basis. When a non-dividend issue like Baldwin moves 21 points in less than a fortnight without any extraordinary stimulus from news affecting the company it is obvious that an unhealthy speculative condition has been created that would not have resulted had the advance been made over a period of several weeks. Too many people have been buying stocks for no other reason than that they were moving rapidly, and without seeking to discover the justification for the advance.

Considerations such as these brought about liquidation and profit-taking in most of the recent market leaders yesterday, which brought about declines from the day's high running to more than 6 points, in the case of Baldwin, and from 3 to 5 points in other issues. Notwithstanding these reactions the list closed irregular with most of the changes on the side of higher prices. Steel moved through a range of 2⅛ points, closing practically unchanged near the lowest price of the day. In New Haven there was a movement of 3⅝ points, which resulted in a net decline of 1⅞. Midvale closed 4 points under its best price of the day, but nevertheless 2¼ points above its previous close. The cross-currents of speculation were so violent as to indicate clearly the effect of heavy selling on the part of the professionals in conflict with a wider buying demand from the public. It has happened before that in such a conflict the public has controlled the market and forced prices higher in the face of all that the big operators have been able to do. They may repeat the performance in this market if selling is not induced by the receipt of bad news. Sales yesterday ran to over 1,700,000 shares, closely approaching the record made in a falling market on the announcement of the beginning of Germany's present submarine policy.

Call loans were made at 5½ per cent. yesterday, with 6 per cent. being paid for borrowing secured by all industrial collateral. The Liberty 4¼s were steadier and closed only slightly under 98 after a comparatively dull session in this department.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

There was only one rate for call money yesterday—5½ per cent. for loans based on mixed collateral and 6 per cent. for those backed by securities of industrial companies. For the first time yesterday call money on industrials was put out on the floor of the Stock Exchange, and henceforth two call money rates will be quoted, the variation amounting to ½ of 1 per cent. Heretofore all call loans made on the floor were based on railroad or mixed collateral and call loans secured on industrials had to be made by brokers at their banks.

By reason of the activity of the stock market time money was in considerable demand, the rate for sixty-day loans being 5⅞ to 6 per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Marine's British Fleet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the International Mercantile Marine Company yesterday was made the occasion for a reappearance of the story of negotiations pending for the sale by the company to a British syndicate of all its ships under the British flag, for a sum said to be around $125,000,000. President Franklin, however, after the meeting made it clear that the deal was still just where it had been for some six months—in a state of suspended animation. Meanwhile Marine preferred sold up a point on the day.

Swiss and Dutch Exchange Rise.

Markets like yesterday's and others of the last week have naturally invited substantial sales of stocks on the part of holders who bought them further down. A sharp advance of Dutch exchange and another forward movement of exchange on Switzerland yesterday were explained on the theory that remittances were in increased demand in the process of sending out the proceeds of American securities sold by Dutch and Swiss owners. The quotation of 3.99 Swiss francs to the dollar, compared with the normal rate of 5.1826, established a new high record for Swiss cable transfers, and represented a premium of close to 30 per cent. at this centre. The Dutch rate of 50.50 cents to the guilder was a half cent higher than the day before, and made the premium above normal approximately 25 per cent.

Haste to Buy Stocks.

The wild manner in which stocks were bid up in the first quarter hour of business indicated that a lot of speculators feared there would not be enough to go around. This was especially evident in Baldwin Locomotive, with an overnight gain of a half point expanded in a few minutes to an advance of 4⅝ points.

Deposits of Tax Receipts.

The bankers of the country having failed to convince Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo of the desirability of having Congress enact legislation permitting of the payment of Federal income and excess profits taxes in installments, instead of in bulk, on June 15, are now endeavoring to persuade the Secretary to deposit the tax funds with the banks under an arrangement by which the funds would be withdrawn in regular installments. The Secretary has announced that the tax receipts would be deposited with banks—in fact that has never been questioned—but the point made by bankers is that conditions of the money market make it imperative that the depositary institutions should know in advance when and in what amounts these funds are to be withdrawn by the Government. In the case of the deposit of proceeds of Liberty bond sales or sales of certificates of indebtedness, banks have usually received a few days' notice of withdrawals of funds, but in some instances no notice has been given. It is urged that in respect to tax funds the Treasury Department arrange to make withdrawals at stated periods, the intervals between each installment withdrawal being as long as possible. Banks pay the Government 2 per cent. interest on deposits.

Cashing Liberty Bond Coupons.

Several persons who in the last two days have called at Federal Reserve Bank to have their Liberty bond coupons cashed, have complained that banks in their neighborhoods had refused to pay cash for the United States bond coupons. Several women reported that they had to spend about two hours in traveling and 10 cents in car fare in an effort to collect their $1 interest on their bonds. Inquiries made at various banks elicited the information that the Presidents were under the impression that their tellers were cashing coupons, and that the refusal to accommodate the public was the fault of clerks who had either failed to receive positive instructions or else were disinclined to be bothered with the work.

Clogging the Ticker.

The turnover in excess of 500,000 shares in the first hour taxed the capacity of the ticker and the ticker operators. The congestion convinced followers of the bond market more than at other less active periods of the need of a separate ticker for bond transactions.

The Manganese Situation.

The Committee on Steel and Steel Products, headed by Elbert H. Gary, appealed to manufacturers yesterday to reduce the manganese content in ferromanganese and spiegeleisen as an alloy. The prescribed reduction announced will tend to promote the use of ore containing a lower percentage of manganese than in the past, to the end that ship room may be saved on vessels coming from Brazil. The change in manufacturing practice will increase the use of domestic ores. The committee's recommendation resulted from a close study of the situation by experts on alloys, with an eye to the discovery of means to economize, and at the same time to do nothing to reduce the steel output.

Selling Cotton Again.

There was a sudden waking up yesterday of the big Southern spot cotton markets, which might mean a number of things. Although the price quoted remained the same at all the principal markets save Houston, where it was 50 points higher, four different markets sold more than a thousand bales yesterday, where in previous days they had turned over at most a hundred or so. At Galveston 2,493 bales changed hands at 28.50c; at New Orleans 2,211 at 29.25c; at Houston 1,301 at 28c, and at Little Rock 1,386 at 30 cents. Apparently buyers and sellers are getting together again, as they usually do eventually.

More Sugar Acceptances Sold.

The second offering of acceptances, amounting to $2,800,000, drawn under the $100,000,000 Cuban sugar credit granted by a group of bankers, was disposed yesterday in the open market. The rate paid was 4¼ per cent. and upward, depending upon the accepting bank. Last week there was an initial offering of $6,958,000 of sugar acceptances.

The British Shipping Rates.

A big shipping man yesterday remarked that he saw signs of effect of the persistent agitation which has been going on in England for a revision upward of the British Shipping Ministry "Blue Book" rates, which correspond to the official requisition rates made by the United States Shipping Board. It seems to be generally admitted now in England that these rates are too low in comparison with the present costs of upkeep and other expenses of shipowners. On the other hand, British shipping men, handling their own ships for Government account, have received considerably more liberal management fees than have yet been offered American shipping men by the Shipping Board, and the question on this side of the water is not even settled yet.

"Assets Instead of Liabilities."

The place of these men (who have entered military service) will be taken in part by a class of women who heretofore have possessed little economic value. In other words, our girls are becoming assets instead of liabilities.—A. Barton Hepburn.

An Entirely New Proposition.

Marine insurance underwriters are doing some discussing and more than a little thinking just now about the concrete ship, to say nothing of the electrically welded steel ship, which is in sight around the corner, if it has not yet become an actuality. Some sort of tentative rates will have to be made for these types, and for the concrete ship the time when applications will be made is drawing near, but insurance men are not, to judge from their conversation, making much headway with their task of preparing for it. "Personally, I hope and believe both the concrete ship and the electric welded ship will be a success," said one of them yesterday, "but I admit I would feel a little uncomfortable about starting out across the Atlantic in one of them for the first voyage."

are so certain of victory that the only thing we can be at all undecided about is how long the war will last. With the conclusion of peace and the gradual return of normal conditions, many investors will undoubtedly regret their lack of decision at times when sound securities could be bought to yield well over 7%.

STOCK MARKET HAS 1,727,609 SHARE DAY

Prices Soar 2 to 6 Points in First Two Hours of Business, but Recede Rapidly.

CLIMAX OF RECENT TRADING

The sixth million-share session on the Stock Exchange in the current expansion of trading occurred yesterday and brought more excitement to Wall Street than any of the others. Under the leadership of tremendous buying of Baldwin Locomotive, Midvale Steel, Bethlehem Steel Class B, and United States Steel prices advanced from 2 to more than 6 points in the first two hours of business, and afterward dropped almost as rapidly, particularly in dealings near the end of the day. In case of most of the active stocks all except a small part of the upturn was lost in the late selling movement, and a number left off lower than on Wednesday.

The turnover of 1,727,009 shares was the greatest for any session since Feb. 1, 1917. During the first hour the ticker ran from five to ten minutes behind the course of business, owing to the extraordinary number of purchases to be recorded. The initial hour brought an output of close to 550,000 shares, and the scope of the business at the opening was illustrated by the fact that orders for 10,000 shares of steel were lumped at prices running from 112⅝ to 112⅞, to make the first transaction. On the preceding day Steel closed at 111⅝.

The same influences which had caused the other million-share days came to the fore in exaggerated fashion again yesterday, centring in Baldwin Locomotive. The Street buzzed with rumors of a sort to stir up speculative fever on the buying side. The 9½-point gain in Baldwin the day before apparently had attracted heavy buying orders overnight, and as the rise of this stock had been coupled with the advance of Midvale Steel, the latter also felt the force of renewed speculative operations. The story of a pending merger between these companies was denied by Midvale Directors, but traders desired to have faith in stories that interests common to both concerns were accumulating the stocks and trailed along with a flood of buying orders.

When the reverse movement got under way it gained headway with rapidity, being helped along, according to gossip of the Exchange floor, by short selling from the professional element. Baldwin from a gross gain of nearly 5 points dissolved until at the close a net recession of 1⅛ points was marked up on the quotation boards. Bethlehem Steel, class B, and Midvale did considerably better, but the majority suffered from the afternoon selling. The movements of several active stocks are recorded in the following table:

	Gross Gain.	Net Gain.	Last Price.
American Locomotive	2	*1¼	68⅛
Baldwin Locomotive	4⅝	*1⅛	95⅞
Bethlehem Steel, B	6⅛	3	90⅝
Crucible Steel	3⅝	¼	71⅞

U. S. Steel	2	⅛	111⅝
Utah Copper	4	1⅛	84⅝

*Decline.

The bond market on the Exchange continued the forward movement begun when the Liberty Loan subscription lists were closed. The Liberty bonds were firm, on the whole. While railroad stocks were somewhat neglected, their prices gave a good account of themselves amid the changing phases of the industrial stocks.

WHEAT.

While stocks of wheat in America are down to almost the vanishing point, supplies in the Southern hemisphere are very liberal, and, if tonnage were available for its transportation, the problem of feeding the world would be solved. In this connection the increased activity in the construction of steamers is an important factor. India has a promise of a crop of about 400,000,000 bushels, which is nearly 17 per cent. larger than last year.

RYE.

The local rye market was quiet; No. 2 Western quoted at $2.11, cost and freight New York.

CORN.

The corn market was nervous and feverish, advancing early on covering and declining late under heavy liquidation. At best the market is a narrow one, owing to the fact that the big bull market in stocks has detracted interest in that direction and has consequently very much reduced outside operations. In the local cash market kiln-dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.60 and No. 4 yellow at $1.50, cost and freight New York.

June	1.42⅛	1.41⅞	..	1.42⅛	..
July	1.44⅝	1.41⅞	1.41⅞	1.42⅝	1.50

OATS.

The oats market acted much in the same manner as corn, advancing early and breaking toward the close. Some authorities were of the opinion that the bearish influence of the fine crop outlook had been discounted for the time being, especially as any change in the situation will of necessity be bullish, as the crop advices have been almost perfect. The local cash market was quiet; natural quoted at 83½@85c, clipped white at 84½@88c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was feverish, and, after a slight early advance, prices broke under renewed liquidation, showing declines equal to the full extent allowed in any one day. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 20,000 head; estimated for Friday, 19,000 head; Kansas City received 4,000 and Omaha 8,000 hogs.

COFFEE.

The features which are being chiefly discussed in the coffee trade are those connected with Government regulations and Government purchases. After opening unchanged the market sagged slightly during the middle of the day under scattering liquidation, but stiffened up again, closing net unchanged to 3 points higher. The only business reported was in July at 8.26 and 8.27 and September at 8.36 and 8.37. The local spot market was dull and unchanged at 8⅝ for Rio 7s and 10⅝ for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

There were no changes in the local sugar situation, the demand for refined being only moderate, and while all refiners were still busy on old orders, they are expected to be in good condition when the early Summer demand appears. Prices remain at the fixed level of 4.985 for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.005 for Centrifugal with refined at 7.45 for fine granulated. Of late purchases by the International Committee have been of large volume and additional purchases were reported at 3,650 tons of Porto Ricos and 2,500 tons of Venezuelas for May shipment.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

LONDON, May 16.—While awaiting the development of the German offensive the tone of the stock market is confident, and today home and investment issues were firm, with a scarcity of available securities.

Chinese bonds advanced again, and the demand for them was unsatisfied. Mexicans were strong and industrials had a good tone, particularly the dye industries on important statements in Parliament. Mining specialties were active, while rubber stocks were dull. Money was in larger supply. Discount rates were quiet.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,625 packages. Supply and demand pretty nearly balance, and the market is holding steady on the finer grades of fresh table butter, though the feeling on the secondary qualities is easy. Renovated slightly weaker. Ladies and packing stock fairly sustained. Creamery, higher than extras, a lb., 47@47½c; extras, (92 score,) 46¼@46½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43½@46c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38½@42½c; thirds, 35@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 49@49½c; extras, 48@48½c; firsts, 44½@47½c; seconds, 41@44c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 46@46½c; good to prime, 43@45½c; common to fair 36@42c; renovated, extras, 39@39½c; firsts, 37½@38½c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@35½c; ladies, current make, firsts, 33@34c; seconds, 31½@32c; lower grades, 30@31c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 31½@33c; No. 2, 30@30½c; lower grades, 27@29½c.

EGGS.—29,950 cases. The market is dull and stock is accumulating. Prices for highest qualities of strong bodied Northern stock are better sustained than medium grades, but all grades are offering lower, and on average prime and ordinary qualities there is strong pressure to sell at a considerable deduction. Dirties and checks rule easier. Nearly white eggs accumulating and holders are anxious to sell at easier prices. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 37¼@38c; storage packed firsts, 36@37c; regular packed extra firsts, 36@36½c; regular packed firsts, 34½@35½c; seconds, 32@34c; fresh gathered dirties No. 1, storage packed, 32½@33c; No. 1 regular packed, 32@32½c; No. 2 and poorer, 30@31½c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 30@31c; under grades, 28@29c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 40@41c; ordinary to prime, 38@39c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@39c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 36½@37½c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 38@39c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 35@38½c.

THE COTTON MARKET

Prices Advance Through Most of Session, with Net Gain of 25 to 58 Points.

The local cotton market continued its efforts to find a new point of equilibrium yesterday, with an advance in prices, continuing through most of the session, which brought quotations up from 25 to 58 net points above Wednesday's closing figure. It was, so far as all indications went, a "market advance," that is, the crop conditions, weather news, and other exterior factors were no more favorable to it than on preceding days, but the technical position was stronger, comparatively little cotton was offering, very few operators cared to extend their short lines, and reports from the South indicated that buyers were coming to the terms of the farmers in the spot markets.

Prices were up from 12 to 25 points at the opening, with Liverpool reporting rather stronger than in recent days, and as soon as a fair crop of overnight selling orders had been absorbed, it became clear that nobody had much cotton to sell, while a number were willing or even anxious to buy. As has almost invariably happened when the market appears ripe for it, the "peace talkers" found nourishment and stimulus in the rather non-committal remarks of Foreign Secretary Balfour in the House of Commons, and prices moved buoyantly forward until they were some 70 points or better above Wednesday's close.

About 25 to 45 points of this were lost, however, in the final hour, by an amount of profit-taking and covering which indicated comparatively little confidence on the long side, and also a comparatively small proportion of trade buying among the purchases earlier in the day. The crop news was fairly good, but hopes of increased transatlantic freight space for cotton found little support. No exports were reported yesterday.

1. Bonds will be secured by a closed first mortgage on approximately 44,000 acres of land owned by the Company, inside the boundaries of Reclamation District No. 1500, located in Sutter County, Cal., approximately twenty-two miles north of the City of Sacramento, at the confluence of the Sacramento and Feather Rivers. The soil is very fertile and the land is capable of producing abundant and varied crops. Bonds will also be secured by first mortgage on about 9,400 acres of by-pass land, subject to cultivation for summer crops. Three independent appraisals show an average valuation of about $12,000,000 for the Company's lands when reclaimed.
2. The Company covenants that warrants or bonds issued or to be issued by Reclamation District No. 1500, to the full amount of assessments against the lands owned by the Company, will be deposited with the Trustee. In addition the Company will also deposit with the Trustee warrants, which it is expected will amount to approximately $1,446,000 (including interest accumulated but not due), secured by assessments against lands other than those owned by the Company.
3. The physical work of reclamation has been in progress for some time. At the present date the levee system is 90% completed, the drainage system 75% completed. Stockholders of the Company have contracted to provide funds with which to complete the project, and they will deposit with Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank readily marketable securities to be held in escrow for this purpose.
4. Stockholders of this Company are liable under the laws of California for their proportionate share of all indebtedness incurred, and will file with the Trustee waivers of any right which might limit this liability. The principal stockholders are Mr. J. Ogden Armour, President, Armour & Company, and associates, of Chicago, and Mr. W. E. Gerber, President, California National Bank, and associates, of Sacramento, who own 93% of the stock, Mr. Armour personally owning 60%. The stockholders will retain ownership and deposit all of their stock with the Trustee, to be held until all bonds are retired.
5. In 1917 about 20,000 acres were under cultivation for summer crops only. Part of this land is owned by Sutter Basin Company and part by Sutter Basin Improvement Company, the latter being a subsidiary, owning about 5,000 acres outside of District No. 1500. The net revenue from the above 20,000 acres (being less than 35% of the total acreage of the two Companies) was about $1,200,000, of which the net earnings on a crop share basis amounted to $507,469 after liberal reserve for income taxes. In 1918 approximately 40,000 acres will be under cultivation.
6. The Trust Deed will provide that no disbursements may be made to stockholders as long as any of these bonds are outstanding.

Legality will be approved by Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt, Chicago, and Goodfellow, Eells, Moore & Orrick, San Francisco, and Devlin & Devlin, Sacramento.

OFFER SUTTER BASIN BONDS

Issue of $5,000,000 Will Pay Approximately 7 1-2 Per Cent.

There was announced yesterday an offering of $5,000,000 of Sutter Basin Company's first mortgage 7 per cent. serial bonds at prices ranging from 97½ to 98¾, having an approximate yield of 7½ per cent. Of the $5,000,000 issue $1,000,000 matures every May 1 from 1924 to 1928.

R. G. Dunham, Vice President of the company, says that the bonds will be secured by a closed first mortgage on approximately 44,000 acres of land owned by the company in Sacramento Valley, Cal. The bonds will also be secured by a first mortgage on about 9,400 acres of additional lands subject to cultivation for Summer crops. According to appraisals the valuation of the company's lands when reclaimed is about $12,000,000. J. Ogden Armour of Chicago is said to be one of the principal stockholders of the company.

The bond offering is being made under the names of Halsey, Stuart & Co. and Blyth, Witter & Co. of San Francisco; the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, and the Anglo and London-Paris National Bank and Bond & Goodwin of San Francisco.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Stocks closed steady with substantial net gains in a majority of the issues at the close yesterday of a very excited and active market. A heavy selling pressure developing late in the afternoon and reaching its climax in the final hour caused a very sharp reaction, the decline being from 1 to more than 4 points from the high levels of the session, when heavy gains were registered. The reactionary movement was more pronounced in activity than the advance, the peak of which was reached about midday. Final quotations were, as a rule, better than the day's low figures.

FINANCIAL NOTICES.

CHILE COPPER COMPANY.
120 Broadway, New York, April 1st, 1918.
Collateral Trust Six Per Cent. Gold Bonds, Series A.

To the Holders of Instalment Receipts:
Notice is hereby given that the holders of Half-Paid Receipts are offered the privilege of extending the date of payment of the final instalment on account of the purchase of this Company's Collateral Trust Gold Bonds Series A, from May 29, 1918 (the date fixed in the Receipt), to November 29, 1918.

Receipt-holders electing to extend the time of payment will surrender their Receipts at the office of Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 140 Broadway, New York City, on or before May 29, 1918, and receive in exchange therefor EXTENDED INSTALMENT RECEIPTS.

The Company will continue to allow interest to the holders of EXTENDED RECEIPTS at the rate of 6% per annum on the first instalment of the purchase price of the Bonds.

The respective rights and obligations of the Company and of the holders of EXTENDED RECEIPTS shall be as stated in the Receipts now outstanding except as necessarily modified by the extension of the date for payment of the final instalment due thereon.

Receipt-holders electing to pay the final instalment on May 29, 1918, will receive the Bonds called for by their Receipts.

The Federal Committee on Capital Issues has advised the Company that it "would look with favor" upon any action taken by the Company by way of offering Receipt-holders the privilege of extending the time of payment of the second instalment, and has authorized the Company so to advise the Receipt-holders.

DANIEL GUGGENHEIM, President.

$8,500,000 INTEREST PAID ON LOANS IN DAY

Federal Reserve Bank Employes Handled 600,000 Coupons on Wednesday.

The coupon department of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which is in charge of J. B. Cunningham, had another very busy day yesterday cashing the initial coupons of the 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan. Figures for the day's business were not available last night, but it was learned that on Wednesday the payments amounted to more than $8,500,000. Mr. Cunningham and his assistants handled about 600,000 coupons, which had to be counted and checked up before they were packed in large bundles for shipments to the Treasury Department in Washington.

The major portion of the $8,500,000 was paid to banks which sent messengers with coupons collected from their customers. The cash payments to individuals owning a few of the small denomination bonds amounted to about $5,000 or $6,000 on Wednesday and to approximately $3,000 yesterday. A large number of the coupon cutters, instead of asking for cash, applied to the "W. S. S." window and exchanged their coupons for thrift and war savings stamps. One man took $14 in war savings stamps. On Wednesday the exchanges for stamps amounted to about $1,200, and yesterday they totaled slightly less than $1,000.

It appears that a great many out-of-town banks, instead of cashing their coupons with Reserve Banks of their districts, have been forwarding them to their New York correspondents, who have been turning them in at the New York Reserve Bank.

The New York agency of the Philippine National Bank announced yesterday that subscriptions of the Islands to the Third Liberty Loan amounted to more than 150 per cent. of the assigned quota. For the three loans the subscriptions total $8,675,000, which, added to $10,000,000 of Treasury certificates purchased, makes a grand total of $18,675,000. To date there have been sold on the Islands approximately $30,000 in war savings and thrift stamps.

COPPER EARNINGS DECREASE

Nevada Consolidated Co. Reports $2,767,667 Drop in Quarter.

The Nevada Consolidated Copper Company reports net earnings of $470,809 in the quarter ended March 31, a total less than one-seventh as large as the income reported for the corresponding period last year. The first three months of 1917 brought a net of $3,238,474 and the same quarter of 1916 resulted in a profit of $2,181,811. After providing for depreciation and paying out $1,999,437 in dividends, the corporation had a deficit of $1,680,387, against a surplus of $1,017,420 the year before.

The sharp decline of earnings was the result in part of the carriage of a portion of the copper at the inventory price of 13½ cents a pound for the reason that the fixed price of the metal is scheduled at 23½ cents a pound only until June 1, and sales for delivery beyond that date could not be definitely priced. The output amounted to 17,485,164 pounds, compared with 22,153,158 pounds in the last quarter of 1917. The average cost of production was 15.64 cents per pound, compared with 12.73 cents in the preceding quarter.

Gaston Remains Head of Concern.

Following the announcement a few days ago of the retirement of William H. Williams and James A. Wigmore from Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, Inc., it was stated yesterday by Charles H. Sabin, Chairman of the Board of Directors, that George A. Gaston would continue as President "with full authority." An organization meeting of the new board was held yesterday and Charles A. Corliss, President of Lamont, Corliss & Co., was elected a Director. Mr. Corliss, Harry Payne Whitney, and G. M. Dahl, Vice President of the Chase National Bank, were elected Directors of the Gaston, Williams & Wigmore Steamship Company, Ltd.

Trading Calm on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 16.—Trading on the Bourse was calm today. Three per cent. rentes sold at 58 francs 85 centimes for cash. Exchange on London was quoted at 27 francs 15 centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 70 centimes.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Two Washington Heights apartment houses were acquired yesterday by an operating company in a cash transaction. The Malex Realty Company, of which Max N. Natanson, operator, is President, purchased, through Nehring Brothers, from a client of O'Reilly & Dahn, the two five-story thirty-family houses known as the Wallingford and the Woodstock, at 533 to 541 West 163d Street.

These buildings cover a plot 155 by 100, between Broadway and St. Nicholas Avenue, and have been held at $250,000. They show an annual rent roll of about $26,000.

Operator in Series of Deals.

Frederick Brown resold the six-story remodeled dwelling at 13 East Sixty-seventh Street, known as the Hevers Chambers, to Mrs. Jessica E. Smith. Mr. Brown took over the property at foreclosure on Wednesday on a bid of $108,302. The property covers a lot 22 by 100.2, about 128 feet east of the Astor home, at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street.

In exchange Mrs. Smith gave the four-story dwelling at 16 West Sixty-eighth Street, on a lot 18 by 100.5, and the three-story house at 129 East Forty-seventh Street, on a lot 20 by 100.

The Sixty-eighth Street property has been resold by Mr. Brown to a client of Henry E. Mowen, understood to be Misha Appelbaum, leader of the Humanitarian Cult. Mr. Brown also resold the Twenty-ninth Street house to Morris Wetzler. The various transactions were negotiated by Pease & Elliman.

Quick Resale of Heights Flat.

The five-story twenty-family apartment house 1,520 St. Nicholas Avenue has been resold by Joseph Schwartz to Jacob Hirsh for investment. The structure, which the seller acquired in a trade Wednesday, occupies a plot 40 by 100, near 168th Street.

Uniform Title Fees.

Edward Polak, Register of Bronx County and Chairman of the Committee of Registers of Greater New York, announced yesterday that the Registers of the five counties in New York City have agreed on a uniform fee and a standard form of petition for the search of titles under the Torrens law, recently enacted.

The scale of fees and form of petition have been submitted to the Supreme Court for adjudication. On property valued at $50,000 the fees would be as follows: Filing notice of petition, $1; publishing, mailing, and posting notice, $15; examination fee, $1 a thousand of assessed valuation, plus $10 expenses; assurance premium, $1 a thousand; first certificate, $5, resulting in a cost of $121 for establishing the original search on property valued at $50,000.

Every additional certificate of title issued on that property thereafter will cost $3, no matter how often title changes hands.

Realty Note.

The Absar Realty Company, Abraham Weissman, President, which bought yesterday the block front on the south side of 192d Street, from the Grand Boulevard and Concourse to Creston Avenue, plans the erection of apartment houses on the site, to cost about $625,000. The brokers in the deal were Fred Oppenheimer and Robert Altman.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

It appearing to my satisfaction by the petition of Siegel, Corn & Siegel, verified the 3rd day of May, 1918, that a petition was filed in this court on the 25th day of April, 1918, praying that the above-named alleged bankrupt be adjudged a bankrupt, and that a subpoena directed to said alleged bankrupt was duly issued out of this court to the Marshal of this district, and that the said Marshal has been unable to serve the same, and that said alleged bankrupt is not now within this district so that personal service may be made upon him, and that diligent efforts have since been made to ascertain the whereabouts of the said alleged bankrupt, but that he is not now within the jurisdiction of this court, it is Now, on motion of Siegel, Corn & Siegel, Esqs., attorneys for the petitioning creditors,
Ordered, That the above-named alleged bankrupt plead, answer, or demur on or before the 27th day of May, 1918, to the petition herein filed in the office of the Clerk of this court, on the 25th day of April, 1918; and in case of his failure to plead, answer, or demur thereto, adjudication shall be made according to the prayer of said petition.
And it is further ordered that this order be published in The New York Times, once a week for two successive weeks, said publication to commence not later than the 10th day of May, 1918, and that a copy of this order be mailed to the said alleged bankrupt at his last known residence, No. 214 West 110th Street, New York City, on or before the date of the first publication.
Dated New York, May 8, 1918.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Pressure continues high east of the Mississippi Valley, but with a falling tendency. It remains low in the Plains States and the near Northwest and also in the extreme West and Northwest, but with a rapid rise in progress in the two latter districts accompanied by quite general, though mostly light, rains. No other precipitation of consequence occurred except some substantial rains in South Carolina and Southeastern Georgia.

High temperatures continued in the south upper Lake region, the Central Valleys, and the Plains States and it is also warmer in the lower Lake region. In the Atlantic and Gulf States temperatures are nearly normal, while in the extreme Northwest they have fallen decidedly to below normal conditions.

Showers will fall Friday and Saturday in the Florida Peninsula; Friday night or Saturday in the north upper Lake region, and on Saturday in the south upper lake and western lower lake region and probably the southern portions of the East Gulf States. Elsewhere in this forecast district the weather will be fair Friday and Saturday. It will be warmer Friday and Saturday in the interior of the Atlantic States and cooler Saturday in the Ohio Valley, the upper lake and western lower lake regions.

Winds for Friday and Saturday along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be gentle to moderate south; fair weather. South Atlantic Coast, moderate northeast and east, generally fair weather.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair and warmer Friday; Saturday fair, warmer in the eastern portion.

Southern New England—Fair Friday and Saturday, warmer on the mainland.

New Jersey and Northern New England—Fair Friday; warmer in the interior; Saturday fair.

Eastern Pennsylvania — Fair and warmer Friday and Saturday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

United States.

The Commission announces for June 4 an examination for bacteriologic technician, for women. Two vacancies in the Medical Department at Large of the War Department, for duty at Washington, D. C., at $1,200 a year, will be filled from this examination. The duties will consist of the application of laboratory diagnostic methods to the routine of general hospital work. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on physical ability, education, training, and experience. Applicants must have reached their twenty-first birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the Commission, Washington, D. C.

Education Notes.

The trial of Gertrude A. M. Pignol, teacher of German in the Manual Training High School, Brooklyn, on charges of disloyalty, will be held today at the Board of Education Hall. Miss Pignol is a native of Berlin, and the descendant of Huguenots, who fled from France to Germany to escape persecution. She does not believe that this country was justified in declaring war against Germany. It is probable that her counsel, Charles Recht, will object to her trial by the committee of the Board of Education.

The closing exercises of Curtis Evening High School will be held this evening in the auditorium of the school, New Brighton, S. I. Anning S. Prall, member of the Board of Education, will preside. City Superintendent Ettinger will deliver an address.

The Faculty of the New York Training School for Teachers will be at home to the alumni students and friends of the school at 5 P. M. on May 23. A tablet in honor of Miss Nicolai, head of the physical training department, will be unveiled at 4:15 P. M.

The Board of Superintendents has reported to the Board of Education that twelve women teachers were granted leaves of absence in March for maternity.

FOOD BOARD CALLS FOR JOBBERS' BOOKS

Firms Are Told That Severe Punishment Will Follow Pyramiding of Profits.

SIX FIRMS ARE SUMMONED

400 Bakers Cited for Violations Warned That Their Places May Be Closed for Three Months.

The Federal Food Board yesterday began an investigation into the business affairs of several large produce jobbing concerns doing business in the Produce Exchange Building, in order, says a statement issued by the board, "to impress upon jobbers generally that the Food Administration means business when it says there must be no pyramiding of profits and that there should be no selling of commodities to unlicensed firms." The officers of six firms were summoned before the board yesterday to explain certain transactions that appeared on their books.

Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams heard the report of J. L. Lindner, Assistant Director of the Bureau of Enforcement and Licenses, with regard to the inspection Mr. Lindner made of the books of W. T. Harding, a produce jobber, whose offices are in the Produce Exchange Building; Coulter, Soper & Bogert, Produce Exchange Building; Jacob Rosenberg, Produce Exchange Building; M. T. Swazey's Sons & Company, Produce Exchange Building, and Lubetkin Brothers, 10 Front Street. Mr. Williams then issued instructions for a further investigation of the books of W. T. Harding and Moskovits & Rosenberg to determine the exact marginal profit the jobbers made on certain resales.

"In the case of Harding," says the Food Board's statement, "it was brought out that, although his firm does approximately $3,000,000 business yearly, he seems to pay no attention whatever to the Food Administration's rules regarding substitutes, resales, and selling to unlicensed dealers. The board felt this so thoroughly that the case against him was adjourned pending a reinspection of his books, and to give him ample opportunity to defend the charges of the board's investigator.

"Similar action will be taken in the case of Moskovits & Rosenberg. In the case of Lubetkin Brothers, the principal charge was the selling of large quantities of flour without a sufficient quantity of substitutes. This firm contended that the dealers to whom it sold the flour had on hand enough substitutes to balance the actual number of barrels of flour sold to them. The firm was ordered to produce certificates showing that this was the fact.

"In the case of Coulter, Soper & Bogert, this firm sold extraordinary amounts of flour to individuals without due regard to the substitute rule, and the firm admitted selling to at least two customers who had no licenses. In this case there is to be a checking up of the books to determine the exact number of persons or firms without licenses to whom they have been selling. The firm claimed to have 1,000 customers. There was no evidence to show a violation in the case of M. T. Swazey's Son & Co."

The Bureau of Complaints of the Food Board yesterday heard the cases of 400 "first offense" bakers yesterday. They were told that hereafter there would be no suspensions for three days, that the board had given ample publicity to the substitute rule, and that all persons or firms found guilty would have their places of business closed promptly for three months.

Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, yesterday issued an appeal to the 250,000 employes of the Pennsylvania, urging the most economical use of food and the avoidance of all waste by all railroad men and their families, especially, it was said, nearly 1,000,000 persons. Mr. Rea's appeal was said to have followed steps taken to bring the necessities of the food situation before the general public through the medium of conservation posters placed in all of the passenger coaches of the Pennsylvania lines.

A three-day convention of the National Live Stock Exchange began with a luncheon yesterday at the Hotel McAlpin and continued with a business meeting in the afternoon. W. B. Tagg is President of the organization, whose delegates represent the leading live stock markets of this country. In an address yesterday afternoon Mr. Tagg said he thought too much attention had been devoted toward encouraging the farmer to increase the production of live stock, and not enough to making provision for the increased production when it had been placed on the market.

GIVE PLANS FOR ITALIAN DAY

Big Concert on May 24 to Celebrate Italy's Entry Into War.

Plans were announced yesterday for the celebration on May 24, Italy-America Day, of the third anniversary of Italy's entry into the war, and will include a concert at the Metropolitan Opera House under the auspices of the Italy-America Society at which Caruso, Scotti, Amato, Alda, and others will sing.

The American Committee for Devastated France, which is co-operating with the Italy-America Society, has issued an appeal through its 200 branches to all patriotic Americans to hang out Italian flags on May 24, and to distribute flowers combining the Italian colors of red, white, and green. Francis H. Markoe, Chairman of the Flower Committee of the Italy-America Day celebration, says that the large war relief societies had promised to co-operate with his committee in providing and distributing the flowers.

A proclamation has been issued by the Italian Ambassador to America urging all Americans of Italian descent to join in the celebration.

A flower arcade, formed by automobiles will be arranged under the auspices of the National League for Women's Service. Among the other societies that will co-operate in the celebration will be the Fatherless Children of France and the American Fund for French Wounded. Italian war films will be shown at the Lorillard Mansion, and in the museum at Bronx Park, under the direction of Lieutenant Prochet.

Whitman Proclaims Italy Day.

ALBANY, May 16.—Governor Whitman, in a proclamation issued today, designated Friday, May 24, as Italy Day, in observance of the third anniversary of Italy's entrance into the war.

ORGANIZE 'FAMILY UNITS.'

Move to Aid Soldiers of the 307th Infantry and Their Families.

Organization of "family units" to provide comforts for members of the 307th Infantry, on service overseas, and to aid families in sending packages and letters to the soldiers, as well as to assist the needy families of the soldiers, has been announced by Miss Estelle E. Warren of 6 East Thirtieth Street, a member of the committee for the unit of the headquarters company of the regiment.

In letters to the families of soldiers in the command, it is said that the unit "is not a charity organization, but an organization for the welfare of our people who are at home backing up our boys who are fighting 'over there.'" The work of the unit is handled by two committees. One is called the Soldiers' Needs Committee and the other is the Home Welfare Committee. In telling of the work of the committees, the announcement says:

"The Soldiers' Needs Committee is taking care of the boys over there. Every two weeks a requisition is sent to us by Captain Hale of the Supply Department, telling us just what the boys need, and each family is notified so that they can send the needed things. Each and every boy will be supplied with a package. Those who have no families or friends will be taken care of by the committee."

The announcement said that the committee of the unit had permission from the War Department to send boxes or packages to France, thus relieving the families of the necessity of getting permission from Washington for the shipment of packages, as under the present rule. The families are urged to send to the headquarters of the unit here only the articles mentioned on the requisition. Among those articles are tobacco, socks, and chocolate.

It is the work of the Home Welfare Committee to provide medical attention for the families of the soldiers, to give them legal advice when it is needed, and to see that they receive regularly their allotments from the Government.

PIER 69 AUCTIONED AT $65,500 A YEAR

Public Bidding Increases City's Annual Income from Property by $50,500.

FIFTY PERSONS AT THE SALE

Row in Sinking Fund Commission Fails to Develop—Controller Drops Opposition.

The lease for five years of Pier 69, North River, was sold by auction to the highest bidder at the offices of the Dock Commissioner, Pier A, yesterday, and brought $65,500 a year. The successful bidder was the Bristol City Line, the present holders of the pier privilege at $5,000 a month, and holder of the lease for the past eighteen years at $15,000 a year. There was spirited bidding by half a dozen concerns, the nearest approach to the Bristol Company's offer being made by James Auditore, of James Auditore & Co., stevedores, of Brooklyn, who stopped bidding when $65,000 was reached.

The city is just $50,500 richer in the annual revenue the pier will bring than when it was occupied by the Bristol Line during previous administrations. The Bristol City Line is the holding company of the Occident Dock Company, which obtained the lease many years ago. The sale of the lease was held as a result of an order by Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum, who ruled that the city could accept any bid above $35,000.

The matter was thrown into the courts after attorneys for the Bristol City Line had brought an injunction to restrain the city from awarding the lease to the Hudson Dock and Terminal Corporation, which had offered to rent the pier for $25,000 after the Bristol concern had offered $30,000. While the affair was in court Dock CCommissioner Murray Hulbert allowed the Bristol City Line to use the pier at $5,000 a month.

About fifty people were waiting at the Dock Commissioner's office yesterday morning when James Day of Joseph P. Day & Co. mounted the "block" and announced that, in the absence of the Dock Commissioner, he would conduct the sale.

"What am I offered?" began Mr. Day after the terms of the lease had been announced.

"Forty thousand dollars," came the first bid, made by Henry F. Cochrane, a lawyer of 177 Montague Street, Brooklyn, who said he was acting for himself. Mr. Day then explained that the Dock Commissioner had a standing offer of $60,000 a year for the pier. Mr. Auditore then bid $46,000. Mr. Cochrane and Mr. Auditore then ran it up to $52,000, when Mr. Cochrane dropped out. Then George W. Field, an attorney, representing the Bristol City Line, ran the bidding up to $64,500.

"Sixty-five thousand dollars," came back Mr. Auditore.

"All right, $65,500," said Mr. Field.

"I'm through," announced Mr. Auditore, and the auctioneer ended the sale.

The lease is for five years, beginning June 1, with a clause providing that if the Department of Docks has occasion during that time to improve the waterfront in the vicinity of Pier 69 the lease may be terminated without legal action.

The discussion which was expected to develop at the meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday over leasing part of the pier at the foot of East Fifth Street did not materialize, as the trouble between Dock Commissioner Hulbert and several members of the commission, on the one hand, and Controller Craig, on the other, was patched up at an executive meeting, which lasted an hour before the commission got down to business. Controller Craig objected to the lease going to the Pawtucket and New York Transportation Company for $8,400 a year on the ground that the records showed that its paid-in capital stock was only $900. Just what took place at the executive meeting was not divulged, but it was said that the Controller reversed his position and agreed to allow the lease to be made. At any rate, when the matter came before the Sinking Fund Commission the Controller made no objection when the matter was referred to Commissioner Hulbert for decision.

Nelson S. Spencer, President of the City Club, sent a letter to Mayor Hylan yesterday urging the city to change its policy in granting pier leases. A serious defect in the present system, he said, was the lack of publicity of the dates of expiration of leases of city-owned piers and of their availability for leasing.

LEATHER TRADE TO EXPAND.

Allied Interests Amalgamate to Go After Foreign Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 16.—The National Association of Tanners and American Leather Chemists' Association, in joint annual convention here today, outlined a proposal for the amalgamation of the allied leather interests of the United States for the furthering of the industry in prosecution of world-wide trade expansion. The industry is the first to take advantage of the Webb-Pomerene act, which permits combinations to engage in foreign trade.

A. H. Baldwin of Washington told the convention that American trade once established would be hard to undermine.

"In the past," he said, "we have allowed Great Britain and Germany to eclipse us in foreign trade, and our manufacturers have largely contented themselves with going after domestic business. The war has changed all this. If we work energetically the bulk of the foreign trade which we are now building up will be retained after the war."

ARTISTS ACT AS GUIDES.

Well-known artists have volunteered to act as guides both in afternoons and evenings to visitors to the exhibition of several hundred works of art donated to the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund on view at the Anderson galleries and to give intending buyers the benefit of their experience in selecting the best works.

A large number of persons were present yesterday at the afternoon tea and listened to recitations and brief talks. Mrs. Jasper Bayne presided at the teatable, assisted by Mrs. William H. Hirst and Mrs. George Ehret, Jr. Mrs. Bayne recited "Viva la France," a dramatic episode of the war, and Judge William N. Cohen made a short address on the relation of the United States to Europe during the great struggle.

The attendance of artists and society people, of reciters and impromptu speakers, has proved so successful that these teas will be continued each afternoon for the coming week. Mrs. Irving Burdick will sing, and artists of the concert platform have also volunteered their services to add further interest to the exhibit of art gifts.

Naval Recruit Held for Shooting.

Tony Malzino, a Naval Reserve recruit, arrested Wednesday night at Pelham Bay, was arraigned in Harlem Court yesterday before Magistrate Nolan charged with suspicion of felonious assault. The accused was held without bail for examination tomorrow morning. According to the police Malzino made a confession to Assistant District Attorney Cardona of the homicide bureau admitting his guilt. Malzino was arrested in connection with the shooting of six-year-old Frank Capullo of 362 East 121st Street, who is in a serious condition at the Sydenham Hospital with a bullet lodged in his brain.

Why Clothes Economy is Popular

One fine thing the war has taught a good many men is that they can't afford cheap clothes.

This is especially true if they want to be patriotic, and help conserve wool and labor.

It's particularly pleasant to help, when helping means to wear better clothes.

The main thing is to be sure you are getting really good clothes.

You are sure of this when you buy our fine all-wool Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes. Hart Schaffner & Marx have never made anything but good clothes.

Include Olympic, Adriatic, Baltic and Other Well-Known White Star Liners and 44 Freighters.

RETAIN 8 AMERICAN BOATS

Status of None of Craft Will Change Till After War—Price Ample to Meet Indebtedness.

Following a special meeting of the Directors of the International Mercantile Marine Company at noon yesterday it became known on good authority that the deal, long pending, whereby the company relinquishes control to British interests of its various British subsidiaries, and with them its entire fleet under the British flag, becoming a purely American concern, has been practically completed.

No official announcement to this effect was made, as there are still many details to be settled which, in a transaction of such magnitude, will necessarily take a long time to wind up. President Franklin who, on Thursday, following the regular Directors' meeting, had admitted for the first time that negotiations were in progress, yesterday would say only in very general terms that progress had been made with the affair, but that the complications were so numerous that no definite statement could be made.

The total number of ships involved in the transaction is approximately 100—the exact number has not recently been ascertainable because of the secrecy with which all maritime news and statistics are at present guarded—of a total tonnage of about 950,000 tons. The transfer of this number of ships is, so far as existing records go, without precedent for a single transaction, both as to number and tonnage. The ships to change hands include the Olympic, one of the largest and finest passenger liners afloat; the Adriatic, Baltic, and other well-known ships of the White Star Line, which have been plying regularly between New York and British ports for many years before the war, and the forty-four large freighters of the Leyland Line.

Six American Ships Retained.

The International Mercantile Marine Company after the completion of the sale will retain control of six ships of the American Line and two belonging to the Atlantic Transport Company of West Virginia, one of its American subsidiaries, and two belonging to the Société Anonyme de Navigation Belge-Americaine, the Red Star Line, which fly the Belgian flag. At the time the United States entered the war the company had fourteen vessels under construction, mostly in American shipyards, and had laid out an even more extensive program for increasing its fleet, including the construction in American yards of some of the largest passenger liners ever built.

All the ships under construction were commandeered on the ways last August by the United States Shipping Board. Every one of the British ships in its fleet has been under requisition charter to the British Ministry of Shipping since April, 1917; the Belgian ships are under requisition by the Belgian Government, and on Oct. 15 last such of its American ships as had not already been requisitioned for transport service were taken over by the Shipping Board.

The financial aspect of the transaction is the most immediately interesting, because the status of none of the ships will change until after the war, the British Ministry of Shipping retaining complete control over them. It is understood, however, that Sir Joseph Maclay, the British Shipping Controller, approved, if he did not actually assist, the arrangement of the transaction, with the intention of strengthening the position of British shipping after the war by putting an end to foreign, even though friendly, ownership and interest in British ships.

Price Not Remarkably High.

The total amount of the cash consideration in the transaction is said to be $126,000,000. Discussions over the amount and the manner of payment are supposed to have formed the chief obstacle to its completion in the six months which have passed since the proposal was first made, the British syndicate which made the offer wishing to pay £25,000,000 in London rather than $125,000,000 in New York. Another reported proposal was that part at least of the purchase price be transferred in the form of British Government war bonds. The price of around $125 a ton is not remarkably high, in comparison with some prices paid for tonnage since the shortage became acute, but this was, it is believed, conditioned by the fact that actual control of the ships is not immediately [illegible] interesting possibilities and

Soldiers to Lead in Remaking Empire After War, Says Kaiser

AMSTERDAM, May 17.—"I have rocklike confidence that my people will be equal to the great tasks of the future," the Cologne Volkszeitung quotes Emperor William as saying when inspecting the graves of soldiers during his recent visit to Aix-la-Chapelle.

"The soldier who has struggled through the iron time of the world war will be a teacher and leader of the growing youths at home in building up and consolidating the reborn empire.

"War's bloody sword will be reforged into plowshares in the work of peace and civilization, and in the new imperial forge we must, as united peoples of brothers, show ourselves worthy of comrades in eternity."

The Emperor is further reported as saying:

"Truly, it was not my will that the war has come."

PRESIDENT HERE TO AID RED CROSS

CITY GIVES WAR WELCOME

Every Appearance Stirs Great Throngs to Cheering and Cries of Approval.

President Wilson came to New York yesterday to start the drive for the city's share of the Red Cross $100,000,000 war fund. It was the first time the President had been here since last Fall, before American soldiers had gone into the trenches, and the city gave him a welcome that brought to his face, a bit lined since his last visit, a smile of pleasure.

Everywhere he went he got the same whole-hearted, cordial greeting, until it was evident that the city wanted the President to understand that it was with him to the last citizen's last breath.

At the Globe Theatre, where the President and Mrs. Wilson witnessed the performance of "Jack o' Lantern," the applause was so persistent that Mr. Wilson was compelled to make a speech. This is what he said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are laboring under a delusion. You think you see the President of the United States. You are mistaken. Really, you see a tired man having a good time."

The President and Mrs. Wilson arrived at the Pennsylvania Station shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a private car attached to a regular Pennsylvania train. In the party were the President's private secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty; Rear Admiral Cary P. Grayson, his personal physician; Charles Swem, the President's stenographer, and eight secret service men under Joseph Murphy, the White House guard.

Station Master Egan, who has met the President every time he came to New York, and Colonel E. M. House were at the station, together with a large guard of detectives and police under Inspectors Bolan and Faurot. They took the President up in the elevator and out of the south end of the concourse, where a space had been cleared.

Thousands Wait at Station.

Long before the train bearing the President came in a crowd numbering thousands waited about the Thirty-first Street entrance to the terminal. They knew President Wilson was expected, but did not know when he would arrive. When the President appeared a shout went up that almost shook the station. It rose and fell, as some strong voiced man would set the crowd going again each time it seemed about to stop cheering.

President Wilson seemed surprised at the enthusiasm displayed and wholly pleased. As he and Mrs. Wilson settled in an automobile he took off his hat and, rising, tried to smile at everybody. The crowd apparently thought it was going to hear a speech and became silent, but when the machine started it cheered again and again.

"We're with you, Woodrow," shouted a tall man, waving his hat wildly at the moving car. The President heard him and, half turning, smiled again.

From the station the party drove to the Waldorf, where a suite had been set apart for the President on the third floor on the Fifth Avenue side of the hotel. There was another crowd waiting at the hotel, and the enthusiasm again forced him to rise and acknowledge the cheering. After a half hour in the hotel the whole party went out for a motor ride.

Led by two motor cycle policemen, the President's car rolled up Fifth Avenue at the very height of the afternoon traffic on that thoroughfare. There was a cay of plain clothes men and two more full of detectives on guard. The President and Mrs. Wilson rode with Colonel House, while Admiral

VICEROY'S PROCLAMATION

He Calls on All Loyalists to Join in Blocking the German Plans.

CALLS FOR ENLISTMENTS

DUBLIN, May 17.—All the Sinn Fein leaders, including De Valera, Darrell, Figgs, Griffiths, and the Countess Markievicz, were arrested in Dublin tonight. Similar arrests were made in Belfast and other places.

German Plot Proclaimed.

DUBLIN, May 17.—In a proclamation issued tonight the Lord Lieutenant says:

Whereas it has come to our knowledge that certain subjects of his Majesty, the King, domiciled in Ireland have conspired to enter, and have entered, into treasonable communication with the German enemy; and

Whereas such treachery is a menace to the fair name of Ireland and its glorious military record, a record which is a source of intense pride to a country whose sons always distinguished themselves and fought with valor; and

Whereas drastic measures must be taken to put down this German plot, which means will be solely directed against that plot; now, therefore, we, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and Governor General of Ireland, have thought fit to issue this proclamation as follows:

That it is the duty of all loyal subjects of his Majesty to assist in every way his Majesty's Government in Ireland to suppress this treasonable conspiracy and to defeat the treacherous attempt of Germany to defame the honor of Irishmen for their own ends.

That we hereby call upon all loyal subjects of his Majesty in Ireland to aid in crushing such conspiracy and so far as in them lies to assist in securing an effective prosecution of the war and the welfare and safety of the empire.

That as a means to this end we shall cause still further steps to be taken to facilitate and encourage voluntary enlistment in Ireland in his Majesty's forces, in the hope that, without resort to compulsion, the contribution of Ireland to these forces may be brought up to the proper strength and made to correspond to the contributions of other parts of the empire.

Many Arrests Are Made.

LONDON, Saturday, May 18.—Considerable number of arrests have been made in Dublin and throughout Ireland, according to a dispatch to The Times from Dublin, timed 2 o'clock Saturday morning.

News of the discovery of a German plot in Ireland reached London after midnight in brief telegrams from Dublin, and was followed some time later by the text of a proclamation concerning the plot issued by the Lord Lieutenant, Viscount French.

Communication between Dublin and London is slow, and at the moment of cabling, (4:17 A. M.,) nothing is known beyond what is contained in the proclamation and a statement given to the press by Edward Shortt, Chief Secretary for Ireland.

That German intrigue has been in progress will cause little real surprise to th epublic. Hints had been given by several correspondents of London newspapers that something was going on between Sinn Fein agents and the enemy. The arrest of a man who landed in a collapsible boat from a German submarine, as cabled recently, is take nto confirm rumors.

Several other arrests in Ireland have been reported lately, though nothing has transpired which would necessarily connect them as treasonable doings. Indeed, in all cases the only information has been the mere fact of an arrest, as for instance, the arrest of [illegible] McKenna, Chairman of the Kerry County Council, on an unspecified charge under the Defense of the Realm [illegible].

The reference in the proclamation to "steps to facilitate and encourage voluntary enlistment" seems to confirm recent predictions from various sources that the Government has abandoned, or at least postponed, enforcement of conscription in Ireland. The difficulties in carrying out conscription have seemed to increase ever since the first outburst by the Irish Nationalists and owing to Sinn Fein hostility to the proposal.

Opposition to conscription has come from some unexpected quarters. An instance is an article in the current number of The Church of Ireland Gazette, the leading organ of the Irish Protestant

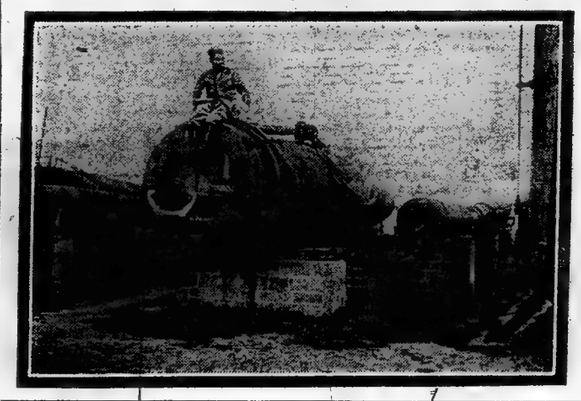
France's 22-Inch Gun, Largest in the World



Mysterious Shots Fell in Dover; German Supergun Was Suspected

The Bombardment of April 26, When No German Airplanes Could Be Found by the British—Official Denial of the Supergun Theory—France Has a New 22-Inch Gun.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 17.—On inquiry at the Ministry of Information with reference to a report that a German supergun at or near Ostend had been firing shells into Dover, notably on April 26, THE NEW YORK TIMES was informed that the story was absolutely false. General Radcliffe, Director of Military Operations, also stated that the report was without foundation.

The story which reached New York is apparently an elaboration of speculations which were prevalent at the time when the Germans began the long-range shelling of Paris. Dover could not be shelled without London coming to know of it, and there have not been any reports of such a thing having happened, even in circles where Dame Rumor wags her tongue most busily.

The sand dunes of Ostend and the neighborhood do not present favorable situations for emplacing long-range guns, which, it is believed, would speedily be spotted and destroyed by British airmen.

The story that the port of Dover, situated on the southeast coast of England, was believed to have been shelled by a German supergun from Ostend, a distance of about sixty-five miles across the North Sea, was brought to New York by passengers recently arrived from England. It was told by one of these to THE TIMES as follows:

"Belgian spies in the employ of the British Intelligence Department reported on April 5 that a gun of about the same calibre as those set up near Laon and used in the bombardment of Paris had passed through Belgium from the Krupp Works at Essen on April 2, on its way to Ostend. This gun was said to be from 65 to 75 feet long and of 23 centimeters calibre.

"The supposed shelling of Dover occurred at 10 o'clock on Friday night, April 26, and was at first taken for an aerial attack. Fifty British fighting machines went up to drive back the boche aviators, but could not get any trace of them, and an alarm was sent to London that the Germans had dropped three bombs on Dover and proceeded toward the metropolis.

"The first missile fell short of the town of Dover and struck Shakespeare's Cliff, sending some hundreds of tons of chalk into the sea with a deafening report, which roused the people in their beds, and hundreds of them took to the cellars and caves for safety. The second and third missiles were better aimed, passed over the harbor and part of the town, and dropped in a residential street, demolishing two small houses. Those who were living near by said that the 'bomb,' they called it, made a great noise when it exploded, but did not have the destructive force of the bombs that had been previously dropped by airplanes.

Destroyer's Report Aroused Suspicion.

"The officers of the Flying Corps and the Naval Air Force stationed at Dover did not suspect that the missiles were shells fired by a German supergun until early next morning, when a report was received from the commander of a destroyer which had been out scouting during the night off the Belgian coast.

"The aviators on guard duty along the Kentish coast believed that they did not see the planes which were supposed to have attacked Dover, because they were flying at over 15,000 feet and the night was dark. When the alarm reached London the people were still in the theatres, but as it was nearly closing time they were not informed that German raiders had passed Dover. At 11 o'clock, as nothing more had been heard of the German planes at any of the air stations on the road from Dover to London, about seventy miles, the 'All clear' signal was given.

"The newspapers published next morning stated that the alarm had been given on account of the warning received from Dover, which had proved to be incorrect. They did not give any explanation regarding the three missiles dropped on the port, and there has been no mention of the big German gun being placed in position at Ostend.

"On April 14 it was reported in the Paris papers that the Germans had two of the seventy-mile-range guns in Ostend and that they were intended to be used on the English coast when the enemy had succeeded in breaking through to Boulogne or Calais.

"Belgian spies again got through the German lines into Holland at Maastricht on May 1, and said that they had seen the superguns at Ostend, with their shells lying on a concrete platform beside them. The weight of the shells was estimated to be about 200 to 225 pounds each. So far there has been no means of obtaining the weight of the shells fired from the German superguns into Paris, because they have all exploded when they fell and scattered into fragments.

"The British Admiralty declined to give out any particulars concerning the big guns at Ostend or the shelling of Dover on April 26, and the London newspapers were content with calling it the mysterious false alarm."

France Has Greatest Gun in the World.

Another person, who has just arrived from England, reports that the new 22-inch French gun, by far the greatest in the world, has been completed, and the first photograph of one of them is presented herewith. For obvious reasons it is not permitted to describe the gun in detail. It is conjectured that it is one of these guns that has succeeded in silencing the two German superguns located near Laon. Before the German superguns near Laon were put out of commission they are said to have killed in Paris 368 persons, wounded 300, and driven to places of refuge elsewhere in France many thousands of the population of Paris.

Fifteen experimental eighteen-inch rifles have been built by the United States Government for the protection of the Panama Canal. These were the largest hitherto known. It has been reported that the Krupps had made several seventeen-inch guns for the protection of Heligoland. It has been seriously questioned by ordnance experts whether the Germans possess a direct-fire rifle larger than sixteen-inch, although the existence of the seventeen-inch Skoda howitzer is no longer doubted. The long range guns which shelled Dunkirk were found, to carry twelve-inch and fifteen-inch shells; those which have shelled Paris from near Laon, a distance of seventy-four miles, nine-inch. The maximum naval gun of the United States and British Navies is the sixteen-inch piece, firing from a floating emplacement a 2,100-pound shell twenty-two miles.

REICHSTAG SOCIALISTS DENOUNCE ARRESTS

Angry Altercations Over Imprisonments on Treason Charges at Dresden.

AMSTERDAM, May 17.—The German newspapers report strong Socialist speeches in the Reichstag recently, denouncing the arrest and imprisonment of Independent Socialists, and leading to stormy scenes.

According to the Socialist newspaper Vorwärts, Herr Hertzfeld, a Socialist Deputy, denounced the imprisonment of a number of young men at Dresden on treason charges. Amid the applause of fellow members of his party and stormy interruptions from other sections of the House, he said:

"By this sort of class justice the Supreme Court is doing everything it can to strengthen the power of the military dictatorship."

Vorwärts reports several members of the Independent Socialist Party as having been arrested within the last few weeks at Cologne. The men sentenced at Dresden, with whose case Herr Hertzfeld dealt, were apparently Independent Socialists, as the Leipzig Volkszeitung states that twelve Independent Socialists have been sentenced by a Dresden court for high treason, the terms ranging from two to eight years in prison. They were charged with circulating pamphlets which were revolutionary in character [illegible]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 17.—American troops have taken their place in the British war zone in Northern France. Announcement to this effect was authorized by the American army authorities today.

The presence of American soldiers back of the British lines and of Americans fighting in co-operation with the French in Picardy, together with the Americans holding sectors northwest of Toul and in Lorraine, show that our men will have a chance to participate in heavy fighting whenever the next German drive may come.

There is no reason to doubt that as the American troops arrive, greater numbers will be found at other points on the western battle front.

The scattering of the American troops is not to be taken to cast the slightest doubt on the eventual unification of the American forces in France. Whenever the proper time comes in the opinion of the allied command, the United States troops will have their own orgahization and play their own rôle, and the glory of our army will be reflected upon the Stars and Stripes, as well as upon the general cause of the Allies.

Brigading Helps in Two Ways.

The assignment of American troops to the British and French armies at this time serves two purposes. Primarily, it places fresh troops at points where they are needed, tending to lessen any chance that Germany might win the war this year. A secondary but no less important purpose is that the arrangement will give the American troops invaluable training which they could get in no other way.

There are indications that much of the warfare in future months may be open fighting. It is not easy for the Americans to get training in that kind of warfare except in this region.

Participation of the American units in warfare with the British and French units will also give our officers such training in modern warfare as they could get in no other way.

The great task of the Allies is to block the plans of the Germans to make further advances now. This is a task for America, no less than for England and France, especially since the Kaiser hoped to win the war before our growing weight could be thrown in serious strength against him. Therefore, the chance for Americans to help fight the foe on his chosen battlefield at this time is nothing less than an opportunity to make our rôle the more glorious.

There is something in the service of American fighters with the British and French that [illegible] in keeping with the spirit of our whole participation in the war—[illegible] spirit of unselfishness.

Grasp Opportunity to Fight.

While America's soldiers might prefer, if possible, to defeat the foe under their own flag, this does not mean at all that they do not seize with the best spirit the opportunity to help defeat him somewhere else, until they can do it as it may suit them best.

Because of the uncertainties of [illegible] is impossible to say at this [illegible] the present arrange- [illegible] to say there

Dutch to Send Ships Out Under Armed Convoy

THE HAGUE, May 17.—Jonkheer J. Loudon, Minister of Foreign Affairs, announced in the Second Chamber today that it was intended to send several steamers to the Dutch East Indies under an armed convoy and accompanied by a collier. He said he could not say definitely that no international difficulty would arise out of convoying ships, but presumed that this act probably would not meet with interference.

The Entente allied Governments, he said, have been informed of this decision by the Netherlands Government.

RUSSIANS SELL OUT TO THE GERMANS

Turn Over Stock of Industrial and Financial Institutions at Panic Prices.

INTERVENTION UP AGAIN

London Newspapers Renew the Agitation for Action by the Allies Through Japan.

STOCKHOLM, May 16.—The chaotic economic conditions in Russia are being utilized to the full by Germany for increasing German influence and control over Russian industrial and financial institutions. Russian capitalists and corporations, threatened with ruin, see no escape except to sell their property to Germany.

Transactions of this nature are being carried out through M. Furstenberg, known also as M. Genetsky, foreign financial adviser of the Bolshevist Government, who is in Stockholm, with various associates. From Stockholm special messengers are sent into Russia under German protection in furtherance of this work. The messengers bring back the actual stock certificates and other securities.

The main object of the German effort is to obtain control of the Russian mines and metal industry, leather and banks. The Russians are selling out at panic prices.

LONDON, May 17.—The London press is urging the necessity of allied intervention of a prompt nature if what is alluded to as the rapid strengthening of the German grip on the country is to be successfully combatted. The newspapers refer to Lord Robert Cecil's House of Commons remarks and the accumulating indications of the inability or unwillingness of the Bolsheviki to resist the German penetration, and in some instances the advocates of intervention reiterate the earlier pleas for allowing Japan to act. The insistence upon Japan's disinterestedness is renewed, as is Japanese loyalty to the alliance.

The Daily Chronicle says that the more the Allies allow Russia to fall under German influence the harder it will be to extricate her eventually. It declares that Russia is now unable to recover herself without foreign military intervention, adding:

"The weight of our intervention would necessarily be Japanese, but it should be given a broadly allied and international character. For some time it has been said the obstacle has been Washington only, and now that—as we believe to be the case—the American Government's own agents are as much convinced as anybody else of the need for foreign troops, it is to be hoped that opposition will be withdrawn." The Daily Telegraph concludes its article with these lines:

"The statesmen at Tokio have made it quite clear that they have no covetous aims. In order to support the general policy of the Allies, and especially to protect Siberia from Teutonic rapacity, Japan, we are convinced, is ready to act in any way that promotes the ideals of the Entente Powers."

WASHINGTON, May 17.—How Germany is pursuing vigorously her policy of commercial penetration in Russia is further described in official dispatches today, which say all sorts of financial concerns, banks, corporations, and manufacturing enterprises were being bought up.

The dispatches add that many Russians frankly dislike to see German influence developing to such an extent, and would be glad if allied and American capital could be used to forestall the Prussian aggression.

ATTACK ON VIMY FORECAST

But General French Opinion Locates the Main Attempt Between La Bassee and Amiens.

FOCH'S TROOPS WELCOME IT

Say They Have the Germans' Measure and Will Soon Prove It.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Saturday, May 18, 12:30 A. M.—The blow may fall at any hour now. THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent was told yesterday that in the last few days there was evidence that the Germans had finished regrouping their divisions with a view to a second great offensive, and, as before, had massed large forces of picked troops some distance behind the front, ready to be transferred by forced marches to a given point at the last possible moment. The present fine weather and moonlight nights favor such an operation, and there are other signs which indicate that the Germans may strike before these lines are in print.

It is still believed that the main attack will be made between La Bassée and the Amiens region. The allied line in Flanders is likely to be assaulted with almost equal force, and another drive may come between Amiens and Noyon, or elsewhere.

One officer, however, advances a slightly different theory.

"I shall not be surprised," he says, "if the boche makes his principal effort against the Vimy Ridge positions, which he regards as the key to the allied line between the sea and Amiens. It would be a terribly costly experiment, but success would hold out great opportunities."

Whenever and wherever the blow falls the Allies are more than ready, and the confidence and morale of the whole French army were never higher. I visited the front line trenches yesterday and talked with men who may be called on at any minute to bear the first brunt of the shock. All say the same thing:

"The sooner the boche comes the sooner it will all be finished. We know we have got his measure and when this attack has been checked we will prove it."

GERMAN GUNFIRE IS INCREASI[illegible]

Lys Salient and the Hailles Regi[illegible] See Heaviest Shelling—Air Fights Are Numerous.

LONDON, May 17.—Increasing artillery activity by the Germans along the British front is noted by the War Office today in its official communication, but there has been no infantry action of consequence.

The centres of the German gunfire were along the Lys salient, notably near the Pacaut Wood, north of Hinges, (on the southern flank of the salient,) between Hinges and Locon, and from the forest of Nieppe to Meteren, (west of Bailleul.)

There was some raiding on both sides. The British rushed a German post north of Merris (southwest of Bailleul) and killed or drove out the men of the garrison. Another successful raid was carried out during the night near Beaumont-Hamel, (north of Albert.)

On the French front heavy fire was kept up last night in the region of Hailles, (southwest of Hangard.) A successful raid was made by the French southeast of Montdidier.

Field Marshal Haig's report from British Headquarters tonight says:

We carried out a successful raid last night in the neighborhood of Beaumont-Hamel and captured a few prisoners.

This morning a hostile post north of Merris was rushed by our troops. Its garrison was killed or driven out.

On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report beyond artillery activity by both sides.

The day report of the British War Office is as follows:

A hostile raiding party was repulsed last night in the neighborhood of Moyenneville, south of Arras.

There was great artillery activity on both sides during the night in the Pacaut Wood sector north of Hinges.

The hostile artillery also has shown increased activity between Locon and Hinges and from the Forest of Nieppe to Meteren.

The day bulletin of the French War Office says:

During the night there was a violent bombardment in the region of Hailles.

Near Mesnil-St. Georges we repulsed a German raid and took prisoners.

South of Canny-sur-Matz (southeast of Montdidier) French detachments penetrated the German lines at two points, bringing back forty prisoners, including an officer.

On the southern bank of the Oise German attacks on small French posts in the sector of Varennes were broken up by our fire.

Elsewhere the night passed in quiet.

The statement, issued by the French War Office tonight, says:

There was only the usual activity by the opposing artilleries along the front north and south of the Avre River.

Our aviation squadrons have been active. On Tuesday night a number of our aviators participated in bombardment of the zone occupied by the enemy, 36,000 kilograms of projectiles being dropped on railway stations, communications, and airdromes at St. Quentin, Jussy, Flavy le Martel, Nesles, and Ham. Munition depots were exploded at Nesles and large fires were observed at Guiscard and Chatelet. The railway station at Nesles was burned.

On the following night 80,000 kilograms were dropped on the same regions and 10,000 kilograms on the regions of Amage, Bucquoy, and Mont Cornet.

On May 16 four enemy airplanes were shot down and three others were gravely damaged.

On the night of May 16 railway stations and German cantonments at Chaulnes, Roye, Nesles, and St. Quentin received 25,000 kilograms of projectiles, and munition depots were destroyed. Fires and explosions were caused at other points.

Berlin Also Says a Monitor Shelled Ostend, Killing Civilians.

BERLIN, May 17, (via London.)—The official communication issued today says:

An enemy monitor shelled Ostend, inflicting considerable losses among the population.

During a repulse of a strong English thrust north of the Scarpe and near Beaumont-Hamel, and also during a successful operation we undertook south of Arras, we made some prisoners.

Yesterday eighteen enemy airplanes and one captive balloon were shot down.

ALLIED ARMY IS JOINTLESS.

Amalgamation Process Has Been Steadily Going Forward.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

PARIS, May 17.—After the gain of ground by the German offensive, beginning March 21, there was much comment on the fact that while the Germans were preparing, practically in plain view, the Allies failed to make counter preparations. The question is now asked, "What are we doing at this time while the Germans are preparing so vigorously for a second big attack?"

Naturally, General Foch does not take the public into his confidence on these matters, and even if newspaper correspondents learned what steps were contemplated they could not and would not publish them.

One extremely important process has been going on steadily and is well known to the German observers. This is the process of amalgamation.

Instead of two grand armies, one in blue and the other in khaki, a German aviator, venturing across the lines and lucky enough to get back, reports alternate French and British units after the manner of a checkerboard. While this amalgamation is not complete on the whole line from the English Channel to Switzerland, it exists over a considerable portion, and the joints at which the Germans can drive with the hope of finding confusion or divided authority have disappeared. There is one army and one commander, thus presenting conditions far different from those which favored Hindenburg two months ago.

MAY STRIKE TOWARD ALBERT.

Paris Writers Expect Blow But Are Absolutely Confident.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 17.—The German attack, in the view of Major Civrieux, the Temps's military expert, must now be regarded as imminent. The barometer, he points out, is now at "fine and dry," with the additional advantage for the enemy of morning mists, which would enable the Germans to march unseen to the assault.

According to all the correspondents the enemy's preparations are completed. All the strategic arguments point, in Civrieux's opinion, to a resumption of the battle by an assault on the Arras-Albert front. In that case the blow will be delivered by the army of Otto von Busiow, which has been more or less out of the serious fighting, and may, therefore, be regarded as having benefited from a comparatively long rest.

All critics agree that the coming German blow will certainly be against the British, and it is generally regarded that the offensive would have been resumed already but for the conference of the two Emperors at German Headquarters. That something delayed the pending blow is evident from circumstantial reports which have reached here, via Holland, to the effect that German troops have been openly boasting the last three weeks that they confidently expected being in occupation of Calais by Sunday next. Yet no effort of any kind has been made to realize that program.

Confidence here in the ability of the Allies to meet the coming assault is absolutely unshaken.

The two outstanding reasons why the French are optimistic as to the future are the steady influx of American troops and the rapid progress of allied aviation. The fact that the French alone brought down no fewer than eighteen German machines on Wednesday affords good basis for hope on the latter point.

CRISIS ALL SUMMER, SAYS BRITISH STAFF

Germans Are "Boiling Up" for a New Effort Because They Cannot Wait.

OUR COMING A BIG FACTOR

American Army Will Make Good, Buying Its War Experience Cheaply.

LONDON, May 17.—The following summary of the military situation has been given to The Associated Press as representing the considered opinion of the British General Staff:

"The situation on the west front has been quiet during the last week, except for minor raiding operations, in which the Allies, on the whole, had the advantage.

"The momentum of the Germans in the opening Spring offensive has been expended, but it is clear that they are now boiling up for another big effort.

"The longer the Germans wait the more men they can put in from divisions which have been resting and reforming, and if they wait only a little while longer they will be able to resume the offensive on the same scale as before, when they opened on a front of fifty miles.

"But they cannot wait too long. The steady stream of American reinforcements is coming faster and faster.

"The Germans still pretend to treat the Americans as negligible, but the German staff does not underrate them. If the German staff had not taken the American Army seriously, it is doubtful whether they would hazard their whole future on the dangerous expedient of a Spring offensive this year.

"The Americans will have to buy their experience, but Americans are good business men, and can be depended on to buy in the cheapest market and sell at the dearest price. The British Staff is confident that the American Army will make good and that the American nation will never let go until the end.

"The air fighting during the last week has been heavily in the Allies' favor. Between the 9th and the 15th we downed seventy-one enemy planes to nineteen of our own missing. This shows a situation infinitely better than twelve months ago. The Allies' aerial success has been a large factor in bringing the first stage of the German offensive to a standstill.

"The situation on the west front today is much as it has been before. The German command, finding that the momentum of the first rush has been expended, has tried smaller attacks, but finds that they do not pay. Our experiences in the past have been similar. It is clear that an initial success is the cheapest, and that the further one goes without pause the more costly attacks become, until the ratio of loss to profit becomes prohibitive. So now the Germans are preparing for another really big move.

"But the more time they take in preparation the more time we have for defensive plans. In the meantime there is great strain and wastage to the German troops in the line from shellfire, gas, and other causes. The longer the enemy waits the better becomes our defenses and the more perfect our counterplans.

"Regarding the war situation as a whole, we urge the importance of the public retaining the proper sense of proportion. We have got a long row to hoe, and for the whole Summer the situation must continue to be an anxious one. It is not the loss of this or that ridge or position which counts, but the effect of the operations as a whole and the problem of the replacement of man-power. In the long run man-power will be the vital factor."

STAR GERMAN FLIER LOSES EYE IN BATTLE

Lieut. Bongartz, Who Ranked Next to Richthoven, Will Never Fly Again.

AMSTERDAM, May 17.—Germany's most successful airman, after the late Baron von Richthoven, has fought his last air battle. He is Lieutenant Bongartz. For a long time he stood next to Richthoven in the list which the German military authorities published, giving the number of machines brought down by prominent German fliers. Since Richthoven's death Bongartz stood at the top of the list, credited with having brought down thirty-six enemy airplanes.

The Franfurter Zeitung publishes a report which states that a few days ago Bongartz had a fight with an English airman and had a very narrow escape from death. A shot from the English machine struck the German flier in the eye and lodged in his nose. Bongartz managed to escape, however, with his Fokker three-decker riddled with bullets and landed within the German lines. He was taken to a hospital, where it was found that his wound was a very serious one and the eye was entirely destroyed. It is added that it will not be possible for him to fly again. Bongartz held the Order Pour le Merit.

HEAVY SHELLING ALONG OUR FRONT

Furious Bombardment of Our Forces Near Montdidier Continues 45 Minutes.

BRAVE DEEDS OF OFFICERS

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 17, (Associated Press.)—The whole American sector on the Picardy front was subjected to a heavy bombardment early this morning. The cannonade continued forty-five minutes.

There was much aerial activity yesterday and today, with a bright sun and little wind, but there were no further indications that the enemy was preparing to renew the offensive. On this front troop movements behind the German lines are normal.

Two German observation balloons, east of Montdidier, were brought down today by a French airplane.

Lieutenant James Pellache, a Harvard man and son of a New York artist, and Lieutenant Stephen Fitzgerald, a Boston athlete, have been killed, but their deeds will live.

Lieutenant Pellache went out with a working party which was attacked by Germans. Pellache was mortally wounded, but continued to fight with his hands, and strangled a German. In so doing he encouraged and inspired his companions.

Lieutenant Fitzgerald was shot through the head while leading a platoon in No Man's Land in a day raid against a German machine gun. He refused aid and continued to lead his men when a second bullet felled him.

"Jack" Fritz of Boston led a platoon into No Man's Land. When attacked by superior forces he ordered his own men back to the trenches and remained alone in No Man's Land, fighting the Germans single-handed with grenades and breaking up their formation. Fritz was wounded.

The Germans opposite the American sector northwest of Toul are resorting to infernal machines to check the activity of American patrols, which go out every night to roam No Man's Land and even German land, virtually at will.

A member of an American patrol stepped on a harmless looking wire near the German lines early yesterday and a bomb exploded in the centre of the patrol group. It had been planted by the enemy.

The members of the patrol entered, or were assisted into, an abandoned trench nearby and prepared for a fight, believing one was certain. They waited in the darkness half an hour for something to happen, but the Germans did not come out. The party then made its way back to its line.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 17.—(Associated Press.)—The official statement issued from American Headquarters at 9 o'clock tonight reads:

Today the fighting was limited to reconnoissances and intermittenly active artillery fire.

There was increased aerial activity northwest of Toul and in Lorraine.

BOSTON, May 17.—Lieutenant Stephen E. Fitzgerald, killed in action in France, was a graduate of Boston College in the class of 1916. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Fitzgerald of Roxbury and was 23 years old. He was pitcher on the nine, and played with the eleven.

He went to the second training camp at Plattsburg in August, and was commissioned in November. He went unassigned to France, where he joined the regular army.

RICKENBACHER DOWNS FOE.

Former Automobile Racer, Now an Airman, Fights Three Germans.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 17, (Associated Press.)—Another German aviator was brought down this morning in the American sector northwest of Toul.

Details of the action have not been received, but it appears that Lieutenant Edward Rickenbacher of Columbus, Ohio, answering an alarm soon after daylight, encountered three enemy planes. He attacked them and shot down one of them three kilometers inside the enemy lines.

American Troops Will Make Good, Says British Staff; As Business Men They Will Buy Experience Cheaply

LONDON, May 17.—The following summary of the military situation has been given to The Associated Press as representing the considered opinion of the British General Staff:

"The situation on the west front has been quiet during the last week, except for minor raiding operations, in which the Allies, on the whole, had the advantage.

"The momentum of the Germans in the opening Spring offensive has been expended, but it is clear that they are now boiling up for another big effort.

"The longer the Germans wait the more men they can put in from divisions which have been resting and re-forming, and if they wait only a little while longer they will be able to resume the offensive on the same scale as before, when they opened on a front of fifty miles.

"But they cannot wait too long. The steady stream of American reinforcements is coming faster and faster.

"The Germans still pretend to treat the Americans as negligible, but the German staff does not underrate them. If the German staff had not taken the American army seriously, it is doubtful whether they would hazard their whole future on the dangerous expedient of a Spring offensive this year.

"The Americans will have to buy their experience, but Americans are good business men, and can be depended on to buy in the cheapest market and sell at the dearest price.

"The British staff is confident that the American army will make good and that the American nation will never let go until the end."

AMERICAN TROOPS IN BRITISH WAR ZONE

is need for Americans elsewhere more than in their own sectors.

Of course, it is not permitted to state the plans as to the extent of participation of America's fighting men with the armies of the Allies. Moreover, today's plans are likely to be changed before tomorrow.

I am not allowed to tell the size of the American forces in the British war zone or give their identity, save to say that they are large enough to prove of material assistance should the Germans resume the pounding of the British lines.

Cheered by British on Arrival.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 17, (Associated Press.)—Troops of the new American army who have arrived within the British zone in Northern France are completing their training in the area occupied by the troops which are blocking the path of the Germans to the Channel ports. Their commander has already commanded American forces in trenches on the French front.

The British officers and men who are training the new force say that the Americans are of the finest material and are certain to give a most excellent account of themselves when they meet the Germans.

The British troops greeted the Americans not only as comrades in arms, but as warm friends, and the work of instruction is being continued in that spirit. The American forces on arriving were cheered to the skies by the sons of Britain, many of whom bore unmistakable signs of battle. They had not seen the Americans before, but knew they were coming.

The Americans, on the other hand, gained all the more enthusiasm by the heartiness of the greeting which they received from their comrades in arms.

The last stages of training before entering the line were begun by the Americans almost as soon as they reached their destination. From that point they could hear the rumble of the not distant guns.

How long the American troops have been with the British and when the news that they are making their presence felt along the line may be expected cannot be disclosed. It is enough to say that men speaking almost every language, descendants from almost every nationality, are working day and night to fit themselves to enter the line as quickly as possible.

"MORE COMING!" THEY SHOUT.

Americans Hearten the British, Who in Turn Inspire New Arrivals.

By FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.

PERSHING'S HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, May 17.—American fighting men in numbers are now part of the army of Sir Douglas Haig. Behind the Flanders front soldiers of the empire and sons of Uncle Sam occupy positions side by side.

It has put heart into the British ranks to see our khaki-clad columns swing along the roads. It has put snap into our men to march to their places in such worthy company. The veterans of a four years' struggle have gained renewed hope at the sight of this fresh help from the West. The young arrivals in the war zone have gained new inspiration upon meeting men who have "been there."

Daily, it seems, the French ports which have grown as if by magic under the hands of the American engineers, are brimful of troops. Almost as fast as one troop ship can be unloaded and moved away another is warped into her place and soon the gangways are erupting streams of khaki.

"And there's more where we come from," is the shout of our men as they exchange words on the road with the British transport.

"Bring 'em over," replied a wounded Canadian, sticking his head out of an ambulance door. "You know, Yank, we're not stingy about this here war."

Tommy and Sammy have found much in common, but more to exchange. Tommy is taking costly lessons in dice rolling on an army blanket and Sammy is trying to understand how any human being can drink tea for breakfast. Sammy is learning that the use of the broad A does not necessarily mean that the user is putting on dog or "swanking," as Tommy would put it, and on the other hand Tommy is finding out that the American nose is not actually stopped up, but that we talk that way for a special reason.

"Which is," explained Corporal Benny, "so we won't be taken for Englishmen."

These exchanges of customs, manners, and knowledge are not confined to the ranks. Our officers dine at mixed messes where wearers of Sam Browne from every Anglo-Saxon corner of the earth are gathered. The English imperialist rather prides himself upon the fact that among the men in France today, who answered the call of King and country, are representatives from Australia, Canada, New Zealand, Ireland, Wales, Scotland, India, Egypt, and Fiji Islands. This pride received a jolt at one mess where an American Lieutenant advanced the information that his battalion included recent naturalization from twenty-seven different countries, and that eight languages were spoken.

"My word," replied the English "Leftenant," "one must have to be a linguist to give one's commands."

And the chaplain of the High Church of England was dumfounded to learn from an American chaplain that ten different religions were represented in some regiments.

These cosmopolitan troops from the New World have hardly had a spare minute since they left the ships. A post-graduate program of intensive training goes into operation on the day of their arrival in the billeting area. The enemy's latest front line tricks are told by men recently returned from contact with them. Under the sound of the guns there is added inspiration to learn and there is no one more eager to impart knowledge than the British Drill Sergeant.

But, as the old-timers say, there is no school like the real thing, and that is the finishing touch to which the newly arrived Americanizations are looking forward. The time for their entry into front-line positions is not for discussion now, but if you take the word of the men themselves, "it can't be any too soon."

"Bring on your war" is their byword.

TROOPS JOINING HAIG FIRST OF RUSH FORCE

Washington Thinks the Regiment That Paraded in London Is Part of It.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Evidence of the success of the emergency measures to bring American man power to the aid of the French and British armies to halt the German drive came today with the announcement from the American front in France that American troops had reached Flanders and gone into training behind the British lines there. Official reports were lacking tonight, but Secretary Baker and army officials accepted the press advices that the first contingent of the forces to be brigaded for training and operations with the British Army had arrived. These are not troops detached from Pershing's forces, but part of the new troops sent from here.

Soldiers from General Pershing's army have been in line with the French in front of Amiens for some time, but the decision to send additional forces from this country direct to the British Army was made after the great German drive, launched on March 21, was well under way. Less than two months has been required to get the first of these troops across the sea and into position.

Nothing is available at the War Department to indicate the identity or numbers of the men in Flanders. It is probable, however, that the national army regiment, reviewed in London Saturday by King George, is included. The infantry and machine-gun units of the division to which that regiment was attached probably constitute this first American force to appear in the Flanders theatre.

The men, it is noted, are described as being in training in the British zones. That is taken here to mean that they are being brigaded with British divisions in reserve and will get their final seasoning quickly through this close association with veterans of Sir Douglas Haig's army.

Unless a great emergency arises when the German assault is renewed it is not thought probable that the American battalions will be employed on the front line for some time.

The immediate result of greatest importance probably is that battalions of British troops, displaced in these divisions by the Americans, will be available to fill up other British divisions to full strength or to organize new British divisions, as General Haig deems best. To that extent the Americans are now acting as reinforcements for the British lines. It is expected that a limited amount of additional training under existing conditions will round them into shape for any work that may be assigned to them later.

If the course of the German offensive permits, the same practice followed in training General Pershing's original forces will probably be carried out in Flanders. In that case, the divisions with which American units have been brigaded will have front-line duty in quiet sectors for a time until the Americans are seasoned to trench warfare. Thereafter the divisions will be used wherever the course of battle takes them. The Americans are a part of the British Army until it shall seem wise to withdraw them for service directly under General Pershing.

BRITISH IN FINLAND BLEW UP SUBMARINES

Associated Press correspondent in a port where he met several of the members of the crews of the submarines and whence he traveled back to England on the same steamer with them.

The British crews got out of Helsingfors only twelve hours ahead of the Germans' entrance to the town. The men assured the correspondent that they had effected the complete destruction of their underwater craft before leaving.

The submarines, which had entered the Baltic at early periods in the war and had been in constant service since, were frozen solidly in the ice in Helsingfors, which made their escape impossible. It was suggested that the ice be dug out around them and that they should then make an attempt to dive underneath the ice and reach clear water outside the harbor. After considering the plan carefully, however, the British commanders decided that it was impracticable.

For the purpose of destroying the submarines large quantities of explosives were placed inside them and exploded by means of fuses. The series of explosions which followed shook the entire city of Helsingfors and the crash of the detonations was heard for miles around. At the same time the large stock of torpedoes and spare parts on hand was also blown up.

After an inspection had shown that the work had been effectively done the British crews left the city and retired northward across Finland into Russia, reporting for duty a fortnight later at a submarine base in England.

The property value of the craft and the material destroyed reached a total of about $2,500,000.

The submarines had reached the Baltic Sea either through the straits between Denmark and Norway and Sweden or by way of Archangel, according to an Admiralty statement. The Class C boats went by way of Archangel, while the Class E boats took the other route. The statement says:

Of the submarines mentioned two of the E boats had been employed in the Baltic since Oct. 15, 1914. E —— had left England on Aug. 15, 1915, while E —— and E ——, the first of which was lost subsequently on service, sailed on Sept. 4, 1915. All these boats made their way to their destination through the Skaw and the Sound.

The four C boats had been towed to Archangel, leaving England on Aug. 1, 1916. They were loaded onto lighters at the latter port and removed to Kronstadt by inland water transport. They were unloaded at Kronstadt on Sept. 19 and returned to the Baltic shipbuilding works at Petrograd on the following day. One ran ashore in the Gulf of Riga on Oct. 28, 1917. It having been found impossible to float her she was blown up by her crew, which reached Perdau in safety.

SEIZE RUSSIAN VILLAGE.

Finns Occupy Outlet to Arctic Ocean on Norwegian Border.

CHRISTIANIA, May 17.—Close to the border, between Norway and Russia, at Petschenga, on the Mourman coast, 300 Finnish White Guards, detached by General Mannerheim to clear the district of Red Guards and Russians and get control of the Mourman Railroad, have had a fight with Russian soldiers. Finnish White Guards have already ejected the Russian troops from the village of Boris-Gleb into Norwegian territory.

Norwegian soldiers have been sent to guard the territory of that country against the Finns.

It was reported from Stockholm on May 11 that a small detachment of Finnish White Guards had arrived at Boris-Gleb and hoisted the Finnish flag, declaring the district Finnish territory. Boris-Gleb is a village lying on the west bank of the Pasvik River, south of Varanger Fjord, which runs south of the Arctic Ocean. The village is in the centre of a little district of about a square kilometer in area, which is almost entirely surrounded by Norwegian territory. It was reserved to Russia under the treaty for the regulation of the Norwegian border signed in 1826. The possession of Boris-Gleb, it was stated in the dispatch, would enable the Finns to gain access to the Arctic Ocean.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 17, (via Amsterdam.)—Russian Bolshevist troops, reinforced from Turkestan and Astrakan, have recaptured the port of Baku, on the Caspian Sea.

The Bolshevist forces crossed the Caspian Sea on Russian gunboats and attacked the Mussulmans who, owing to lack of means of defense, were forced to abandon the town. The Bolshevist troops are vigorously continuing their attacks.

Russian Bolsheviki Decline to Intercede for Finnish Reds.

LONDON, May 17.—General Mannerheim, commander of the Finnish White Guard, entered Helsingfors on Thursday at the head of 12,000 men, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen reports. Until that time the capital had been occupied by German troops.

The Russian Bolshevist Government has declined to intervene at Helsingfors on behalf of the Finnish rebel leaders, according to a telegram from Helsingfors received in Copenhagen and forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph Company. The rebels had asked the Moscow Government to take some action to obtain favorable terms for them.

Railway traffic between Abo and Helsingfors, it is added, has been reopened.

NO NEWS OF KERENSKY.

Russian Officials in Washington Not Informed of His Coming.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—No official confirmation is obtainable of the report that Alexander Kerensky, head of the Provisional Government which was overthrown by the Bolsheviki, is on his way to the United States. Russian diplomats assert their belief that if Kerensky is coming to this country it will probably be to reside with his brother-in-law, Baron Baranovsky, in San Francisco, a friend of the Russian Consul in that city.

It was suggested in one quarter that Kerensky, who has lived in Scandinavia for the last few months, may now be in either France or England, conferring with Russian diplomats in Europe, or that he may have completed such a conference and started for Eastern Siberia to set up there a provisional government which could claim recognition from the Allies as the de jure government of Russia.

A. J. Sack, Director of the Russian Information Bureau in the Woolworth Building, a bureau founded here in April, 1917, by the Russian Provisional Government, asserted yesterday that he could not confirm a report that Alexander F. Kerensky, the ex-Premier of Russia, was on his way to the United States.

"It can be stated that Kerensky arrived in Sweden about a month ago," added Mr. Sack. "Being abroad, he may choose to come to the United States, and, in that case he will be greeted here as a member of the Provisional Government. Since the Bolshevist revolt Kerensky resigned as the Prime Minister, but he still remains a member of the Cabinet. The many rumors created by the possibility of Kerensky's arrival are significant as a sign that every one expects something to happen in Russia in the near future."
